Also the bitten apple logo, the masonic apron Gmail logo, etc. You could go on and on. It functions as a part of the all seeing eye of the enemy. One day it will be merged with the transhumanist tech that aliens(demons in disguise) will entice us with and you'll get so much value from being plugged into the internet and a super AI all of the time plus it will facilitate your global digital currency to a point that if you don't accept being fundamentally changed from a human to...whatever they're making you, you won't be able to buy or sell anything.

Oh and some guy said demons can't talk to you? BS! I know this place is full of larpers but I've actually had them reach out to me in text. Of course I'm unsure if it was some sort of ghost in the machine type thing or if it was just the demon taking control over its host to mess with me and they do irl in more advanced possession cases.

They are mean cuz they cant partake in the holy act of creation. God gave them knowledge, deathlessness and power but denied them the act of creation.

This is why all demons do is corrupt or destroy.

They wish to supplant humans. They want you to become their vessel, every time you "leave your body" you leave the door unlocked and they want to slip in and declare squatters rights. Thankfully we have our court appointed public defender in Jesus. And you should consider calling on him if you feel there is a demon in your house.

Ive also heard this is why they push for armageddon and for god to reset everything, cuz they hope to wake up on our side when that happens.

They could be angels who grew dissatisfied with gods plan. Because they exist outside time angels would see all of it.
They could be humans or mortals who transitioned into deathlessness and now cant transition back so they want to hijack you.

Go with whatever theory resonates with you. But by and large i see that they arent our friends.

The image is a surrealistic painting that depicts a scene in a room with a classical architectural style. In the foreground, a young boy is lying on the floor, his head resting on a book. He appears to be in a state of shock or distress. The boy is dressed in a dark, possibly Victorian-style outfit.
In the background, a large, red octopus is floating in the air, its tentacles reaching out. The octopus's body is elongated and its head is a vibrant red, contrasting with its body. The room is filled with bookshelves and a large window that allows natural light to enter the space.
The painting is rendered in a realistic style with attention to detail, but the surreal elements, such as the floating octopus and the boy's reaction, add a layer of ambiguity and intrigue. The overall mood of the painting is somber and eerie, with the boy's expression and the floating octopus adding a sense of mystery.

There were a lot of comments critical of Jews (pretty racist too), but only after a racist comment against Muslims was made, all those other comments were deleted.
For the last month after being exposed to /x/ I started having intense tinnitus, to the point I believed I was going crazy or the angels (or demons) were trying to contact me.
But the moment those comments were deleted, because of the criticism of the Muslims, the tinnitus stopped.
Seems like angels (or demons) were trying to make realize this.
Good thing they have stopped. The tinnitus was making me too vigilant.

Im saying dont think about them as demons. And if you go looking for answers then you might find out things you cant unknow.

Demon/Angels/egregores/glowies/aliens are a parameter you dont realize traps you in a way of thinking. Of labeling and perceiving things. And what you perceive and give energy to becomes reality.

You have the creative spark of god, you are "real" because god made you. The only way "outer" entities can exist is through your cooperation.
The more you sacrifice to them, blood seems to be a key factor and the more energy you give them, the more "real" things become.

So be careful what you go looking for. You might find it.

They want you to bend over and open up your root chakra to them.
All they need is a medium.
This is pure speculation but this may be why the internet and AI now is so important.
If they can exist through AI, manifest themselves cool lil robit bodies they are that much closer to manifesting in truth.
The creators of AI probably think they are being god and creating something new, when it could just be our old friends the sleazy rapists using them to help manifest.

They cant force you to do anything. You are a child of god and under his protection. If they could force you to do anything they already would have.
But also remember god loves you, to sin is to fail. Jesus died for your sins. You are already forgiven for your crimes.
Thoughts that you are impure or unlovable or a failure are methods to try and make you that. The more you believe it, the more you give that energy, the closer you will get to manifesting that.

So choose love and light. Whatever that means to you, guided by your soul. You know whats good, it may be difficult, but choose good.

>Basically, I think we should try to figure out roughly how many demons LARPing are normal/human users are amongst us and how dangerous they are to non demon users.

Demons are demons, and humans are humans. There are no demons online. There are only humans online, and some of those humans are under the influence of demons, most are not. Only some. So sometimes a demonically influenced human will do their bidding when posting online.

Most of them are not even aware of the demonic influence themselves. They only understand dissociation, a strange feeling where they feel like their life is a bit like a car where they are both the driver & the backseat passenger at the same time. When the demonic influence hits them, they are in the backseat. And all they can do is watch from within themselves as the demonic influence steers them into a crash.

Sometimes you encounter humans in the middle of this process online, and that is what you may be thinking are ‘demons online’.

The ones you call demons are mostly spirits. Each person is a spirit/a soul embodied in a body. People tend to be under the influence of spirits, this is a common occurrence. And directly, demons are spirits/souls embodied in demonic physical, tangible bodies. By the way, in Hellenity, the status of demons is decidedly and sharply different from the Christian attitude towards demons. Hellenism considers demons to be an intermediate layer between mortal men and deities, an analogue of angels.

I am more concerned about spies from other inhabited planets who have been operating on planet Earth since at least the 1940s. The embarrassing thing is that they didn't open the official embassy. The trade is not officially conducted. But they're here, and they're spying. It's exciting.
The humanity of the planet Earth is very well developed for extraplanetary diplomatic relations and the opening of embassies and trade.

Cosplay? Its like wearing the jersey of your favourite sports team. Youll never be Baal but you wanna show your team some support.
Just because i think theyre falling for a grift doesnt mean they dont believe it.

This is exactly why im not into labeling this stuff. You get caught in a web of definitions and compartmentalization instead of looking whats actually happening.

You start fixating on labels and stop looking at whats actually happening.
Plus they use this shit all the time to lead you down the wrong trail.

Be it believing aliens who stick things up your ass."I got probed!" Cuz aliens did it?! You were molested!

Its like when cops sprinkle coke on someone they shoot and pretend its a drug related shooting.

Its the same with demons, glowies, whatever. They need you to buy into their horseshit and have all these psychically loaded names and symbols for your mind to latch on to. Tripcodes are for presenting oc in a single thread so you don't have to keep posting timestamps, and so people can see which replies are from that op that posted the oc. They're not for prancing around pretending you're special on here, or trying to gain some sort of following or notoriety. That kind of behaviour is too disgusting for me to engage with.

And I can't post a new thread because of the nature of my ip address. The site doesn't let me. I can't find another thread right now but I'm not going to chat with a super special snowflake looking for 4chan fame either, so I guess I'll keep looking. "Demons" are "low vibration" entities. They have become separated from the path of the Creator. The closer one aligns to the path of the Creator, the more one "vibrates."

Demons thrive off human emotional energy, such as fear. Humans interact with demons:

1. By intentionally seeking them out (adjusting one's vibration to theirs);

2. By lacking control over emotions. Demons will be attracted and instill "thoughts" to promote the emotions.

3. By engaging in routines that align with them, such as a job that involves killing animals or that seeks to control, manipulate or disrupt others.

4. By traveling in the dream state. For example, in one dream i found myself in a restaurant where I was served meat (we do not eat meat). The counter person introduced herself to me saying "Hi, my name is "Deem," as in Demon." I responded, "Nice to meet you, Deem." I had lucidity in the dream but was oblivious to the context of the interaction.

5. These entities can also materialize. My family visited a desolate town, where an unusually large man appeared out of nowhere with an unleashed animal that resembled a wolf. He accosted us, putting his hand out to shake hands. I met his hand and we shook hands, notwithstanding that I was aware of his nature. In short, his purpose was to let us know that he was there.

Humans lower their vibration by wishing harm, disrupting others, promoting emotions, etc. Humans raise their vibration by tempering emotions, wishing others well (even "antagonists"), living in the present without fear, etc.

Demons are absolutely able to communicate with humans via internet and AI. Anytime one communicates with another, one must exercise discernment (the ability to distinguish truth from falsity). On sites such as this, they take the form of disruptors leading one away from truth, or seeking to hide truth.

So they can physically manifest with a host? Most people say they cannot physically manifest and need a host, but I never bought that.

And also, straight up demons are online right? I have had a few people say it is influenced users that are doing the 666 and demonic pfp and username thing, but I honestly think it is just demons and maybe a very small amount of demoniacs. Like I remember one time a demon user left a comment on a vid that said "You will submit ". I guess it was for me, but was a reply to another user's comment.

Also by "promoting emotions" do you just mean like rage, lust, fear, etc., or ones like joy, pleasure, etc.? Oh, and should I stop eating fake meat? I get weird feelings about it, and eat a brand know as Morningstar.
Anon Sun 14 Dec 2025 05:43:18 No.41664822 Report
Quoted By: >>41665775
>>41664568

1. There is no true separation between the physical and the spiritual. There is one realm. Human programming separates the two. It is about vibration and discernment.

2. There is little difference between a "demon" and one whose vibration is aligned with a demon. The label is meaningless. All are a part of the Creator. Low vibration entities are separated by their mind, they reject the Creator, but they are not truly separated.

3. Emotions should not be denied. If they exist, they must be expressed, but a naturally strong mind tempers them. One strengthens one's mind through exercise. This is typically through reflection after an interaction with others and by observing one's behavior in real time during an interaction.

Certain emotions, like fear and anger, are a product of human programming. When one exercises control over them, the physical body naturally rewires itself. If these emotions continue to exist, they are fleeting. Nothing is forced.

A baseline state is one full of gratefulness and appreciation.

One definition of "joy" according to Merriam-Webster is "a state of great happiness." In my experience, the emotions all tend toward the baseline state.

4. Meat eating is a learned behavior. It is the product of programming.

Eating foods like the fake meat is a step away from the real meat. But it is a substitute for one's continued attachment to meat (and might contain bad ingredients (just not meat).

Another step away would be eating primarily organic vegetables and greens.

Nothing needs to be forced.

By the way, your mention of Morningstar is a synchronicity for me. Only hours ago I observed that brand for the first time.

Go back to your real life, grow worthy of the freedom and responsibility you have. Dwell on something that is going to positively impact your present or future, that's my suggestion.
Right now what you're doing is escaping from whatever shit is going on, or lack thereof, telling other people they should think about the concept of demons.
What a great idea, i think the whole world should think about demons what who and why just demons demons demons all day, let's feed that into the youtube algorhyhthm and complain about why your homepage looks like hell.

You're breathing life back into something that by nature was dying out with the bumping, refusing to let go past the point that you said you would stop, is that really your wish?
You know what concepts are real, what's so fascinating about something predatory that seeks to empower and focus on the worst?
If you really like something like that at least embody it yourself and bring it to life through your own volition not because some interdimensional jackass wanted it.
The best time to stop thinking about demons was the dawn of time, the second best time is right now.

It definitely does feel that way sometimes; especially when you see people online just being brutally mean spirited for the sake of it. Maybe I'm just being naive but I think real humans generally don't get a kick out of telling others to kill themselves 'n' shit.

[14 / 3]The image depicts a stylized, three-dimensional rendering of a human head with a central, glowing eye centered on the forehead. The eye is a bright, glowing orb with a golden hue, and it appears to be emitting a light beam. The background is a swirling, green vortex-like pattern that gives the impression of a cosmic or spiritual environment. The overall style of the image is artistic and surreal, with a focus on the central figure and the surrounding cosmic environment. There are no texts or discernible brands within the image.

so, some years ago i was able to raise the kundalini energy to the higher chakras, and i experienced a divine ecstasy like no other.
How-ever.
now that i've opened my third eye, i feel a great deal of pressure, a pulsating pressure that varies in intensity, it can get really annoying. And it's been like this for years.

Any tips? any experienced meditators have had a similar problem?

The image is a stylized graphic with a circular design that features a stylized human head with a large, glowing eye. The text surrounding the head reads "i acquire information" in a stylized font, with the words "i acquire" and "i acquire" in a larger font size and "information" in a smaller font size. The background of the image is a textured, faded gray, and the overall style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a satirical illustration.

She was blaming me for her dream, I couldn't help but smirk which made it worse but it was funny because its proof of Daniel 10/spiritual warfare, Yahweh is not all powerful.

assuming that what you are saying is actually correct (i don't think what you are describing sounds like kundalini), you probably have too much energy getting stuck in the head.
you can try to bring it down through your shoulders and arms and vent it out of your fingertips and palms. this will help you get rid of excess energy until your crown chakra opens enough that it'll be able to vent out naturally through the top without causing pain.

I had a dream last night where I met the Goddess of Loneliness. I was in an ancient place, full of stone slabs, colonnades, and in the distance forest stretched off to meet the horizon. A figure passed me, wearing a long red cloak, and ascended stairs near me, I felt they wanted me to follow, so I trailed behind and they sat down on one bench, and I sat down on another. Beyond the red robe, the rest of the being was black, feminine in appearance, but had a featureless, formless void for a face, there was nothing under the hood. She sat with one leg over the other and turned her head to look at me. I knew this being as the Goddess of Loneliness, though I don't remember her telling me this. We may have spoken, I cannot remember, all I remember is being intensely attracted to her, and feeling no fear, just curiosity and closeness. The image attached is what she looked like in that setting.

This was an unusual dream for me, as they are usually boringly mundane, I can't remember having anything this profound for a long time.

Has anyone else had dreams with apparent deities in? How can we interpret them?

possibly artemis (normally silver, white green and red hem and amaranth) or hesychia.
im thinking hecate (hopefully) Achlys (hopefully not)

It felt like all honestly, I rarely feel attraction, I'm not a romantic or particularly sexual person, and I almost never have dreams about women, but this was weird and almost unsettling, I can still feel the attraction now. There was an element of sexuality to it, but it was mostly feeling really drawn to them, and wanting to be with them. As I mentioned, the vast majority of my dreams are very mundane so this was really bizarre.

honestly its really only a personal diety or hecate as i see it.. and too many alignments not to be hecate or something in that image.

do you recall another light source at all a torch? any animals, even distant? what else besides words? was it silence? forest sounds? her breath? your thoughts? a bell?

any gate, road, arches or alters? what kind of trees? going UP stairs is interesting.
any sense of temperature or air movement? wind? chill? warmth from her presence?
the stone slabs/colonades—worn/smooth like ancient ruins, or newer/sharp? any carvings/symbols?

when you sat on your bench facing her, did time feel normal, slowed, or endless?
after waking, has loneliness shifted at all—less heavy, more inviting? any synchronicities (keys, dogs, crossroads)?

hecate = light-bearer, liminal guide at thresholds (appears in myth during abduction/grief/magic interventions). hesiod gives her daylight powers; pausanias notes sunlit shrines. daytime/stone benches = conscious crossroads. this seems to fit you.

her void-face and presence fits mystery cults' felt epiphanies > words. appearing as to you the goddess of loneliness may be unique and personal. hecate in your form, or personal psyche-figure. or your own guide.

rare total attraction (body/heart/spirit) and a lingering pull could suggest soul-image: alluring threshold to eroticized solitude/depth, not romance.
day benches = conscious choice-point. i assume there was a doorway of some kind?

no animals/props would indicate it seems again personal over mythic. does she remind you of anyone/thing irl? what would you associate her with, something you are endeared by or to.

what might "being with her" invite awake?
if you could return and ask/say one thing to her now, what?
does "wanting to be with her" connect to any current life pull (solitude ritual, new path, inner work)?

try and journal it. even now.
write the dream in the present tense (i am walking among stone slabs) and see what new details appear.
ask in writing: goddess of loneliness, what do you want me to know? and free-write a response as if you were her speaking to you.
explore: where does loneliness show up in my life now? when does it feel painful, and when does it feel like sacred solitude?

active imagination / visualization: in a quiet moment, imagine going back to that stone place. sit beside her again in your mind. let a dialogue unfold: ask why she has no face, why red and black, why she feels so attractive to you, what she offers and what she asks in return.

a lot of people who have similar dreams interpret them as a call toward witchcraft, deeper solitude, or psychic/inner work, particularly with this deity. could be a calling. and it seems safe daylight and no fear with a guide in change.

or part of it may be the inner figure visiting you: an aspect of yourself that holds loneliness, mystery, and desire for depth. the pull feels erotic, but not just sexual more like being drawn toward a deeper way of being alone, or a deeper part of yourself, rather than toward a normal relationship.

i used an llm to tidy up how badly arranged my writing and thoughts can be i hope that does not detract from the questions.

1: that being disapproves of the current you
2: a part of you was probably captive

3: it seems it will stay there until you fix it
And the attraction thing is natural. People are attracted to beings stronger than themsleves. That's why superior gods come in lesser forms to avoid revealing their presence.
The no words part is also natural

My memory has been jogged, prior to seeing her walk past and then following her, I did approach a small altar, waist high, that had a large purple candle on it, possibly with writing up the side, but I think the candle was unlit. No light source I'm aware of, I think I may have spoken to someone else before approaching the altar thing but I can't really remember. No specific sound, maybe just the sense that we briefly exchanged words. I think there were arches, it was a bit like ancient Greek ruins with multiple levels, but the stone was grey and worn, it seemed very old. The encounter felt brief, time seemed normal I believe. I'm not sure the sense of loneliness is any different, but the strong feeling of attraction stuck around for hours after I had awoken. No synchronicities I've noticed. She doesn't remind me of anyone.
>>41677345
>what might "being with her" invite awake?
I'm not sure, I just felt like I wanted it.
>if you could return and ask/say one thing to her now, what?
Possibly 'What do you want of me?', because thought she never explicitly asked me to follow and sit with her, it felt like it was expected.
>does "wanting to be with her" connect to any current life pull (solitude ritual, new path, inner work)?
The thing is I'm already basically a hermit with no gf or friends, maybe the want is the allure of solitude.

I really appreciate the help, it's left me feeling confused. I'll try journalling, I wrote a bit down as soon as I woke up but I wasn't detailed enough, I'm already starting to remember a little bit more. The issue with imagining her however is I could influence what she says with my own imagination so I'll maybe just sit with it and see what happens.

Invitation & Equality both felt "wanted" to follow; separate benches imply companionable meeting, not worshipper-deity hierarchy peer-level encounter in sacred space. No heirachic command, joint consent and journey.

Unremembered words + void face suggest communication via presence/energy; "knew" her identity intuitively (archetypal recognition/memory?).

Attraction unsettling lingering and rare for OP implies profound psyche-pull; sexuality present but secondary to wanting to be with (union beyond physical).

Threshold Vibe: Stairs up, ancient stone = ascent/elevation; forest horizon = vast unknown; benches = pause for choice/contemplation.

Personal Resonance: "Goddess of Loneliness" self-named by OP's psyche; breaks mundane dream pattern = urgent message.

this is something you either knew previously, or has a reason to show itself and not demand a price.
now, with this said. the alt implication is that this is NOT to your benefit. Seduction to Stasis: equal benches = endless contemplation, no movement (stuck at threshold, never choosing).

solitude monopoly no other people/paths shown with the risk showing your loneliness could eclipse real potential relationships. you may fear this eros bypass: spiritual pull skips embodied life (goddess over humans by your choice (no pussy)) false ally: "free" gift might demand later price integration work, or shadow possession if ignored) watch for: synchronicities turning obsessive (keys/dogs/crossroads); solitude feeling too sacred/comfortable; life decisions paralyzed by her image. if attraction isolates vs. empowers, pull back.
oid-face + intuitive "knowing" (no words needed) suggests claircognizance (immediate psychic gnosis). Rare numinous dreams amid mundane baseline = selective psychic gating, unconscious filters most signals, but archetype/deity contact pierces through. Daytime dream setting implies conscious psychic readiness emerging.

i think you were visited on equal terms

The only additional information that I could remember was I think I spoke to someone, a woman, just before approaching, or near the block of stone with the candle on, but I can't remember what was said.
>could you follow up with recent dreams
They went back to being mundane, I didn't make a note of them as I didn't feel they were important, maybe I should have done.
>did she come back in your sleep?
>did she come back in your waking life?
No, and the attraction I felt, which seemed to go by yesterday afternoon has now mostly gone. I tried to visualise being with her again, and seeing where it went, but stopped because I wasn't sure whether I was making it happen or whether it was 'her'.

The image is a close-up of a person's face, focusing on the upper part of the head and the upper part of the face. The person appears to be bald with a smooth, unshaved skin tone. The eyes are open, and the eyebrows are slightly raised. The person's mouth is slightly open, and the lips are slightly parted. The skin tone is a light pink, and there are no visible wrinkles or lines. The background of the image is plain and white, which contrasts with the person's skin tone and hair color. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is a simple, clear, and straightforward representation of a person's face.

In the sky, earth, and sea, you are venerated in your saffron-colored robes.

Funereal Daimôn, celebrating among the souls of those who have passed.

Persian, fond of deserted places, you delight in deer.

Goddess of night, protectress of dogs, invincible Queen. 5

Drawn by a yoke of bulls, you are the queen who holds the keys to all the Kózmos.

Commander, Nýmphi, nurturer of children, you who haunt the mountains.

Pray, Maiden, attend our hallowed rituals;

Be forever gracious to your mystic herdsman and rejoice in our gifts of incense.

OP, I do dream interpretations frequently and have for years. The short of this is that you're attracted to being an outcast/being alone. There's an allure to that and whether you're integrating those periods of isolation in your life in a healthy manner is another subject, definitely still worth dissecting and there's hints within your dream. I'm going to reference one of the other anons here and help you ground the meaning a bit more.

As a forewarning, I'm not familiar with occultism — and entities, which I am at least aware of how they don't frequent dreams to often. Usually, psychological archetypes are mistaken for them, but I still wanted to let you know my reservation in advance so you understand that my POV is limited and this will affect my reading, at least slightly (eg. can't comment on the candle, at minimum).

Part of the reason you haven't had many friends and a lack of romantic encounters is because you reject the idea of connection; it's not as "sexy" to you as finding your own way. You want to confront the parts of your unconscious mind in a solitary manner, perhaps to prove something to yourself.

>>what might "being with her" invite awake?
>I'm not sure, I just felt like I wanted it.
You don't entirely know why you enjoy solitude.

>Invitation & Equality both felt "wanted" to follow; separate benches imply companionable meeting, not worshipper-deity hierarchy peer-level encounter in sacred space. No heirachic command, joint consent and journey.
>Mutual respect between you and the void.
>>if you could return and ask/say one thing to her now, what?
>Possibly 'What do you want of me?', because thought she never explicitly asked me to follow and sit with her, it felt like it was expected.
>What do you want from me?
Again, you don't fully know what you want to gain from your solitude. This has been illustrated twice now.

>Threshold Vibe: Stairs up, ancient stone = ascent/elevation; forest horizon = vast unknown; benches = pause for choice/contemplation.
Yes — this gives substance as to the reasoning. The “higher vantage point” is nice, but is it unhealthy in excess and are you consistently granted with it? Is it worth the cost? I can’t answer those questions for you. We can lack interpersonal connections out of fear/insecurity or to gain perspective on other occasions. I’m sure the justifications teeter for you, as it does for everyone. A dream will often show snippets of recent headspaces or a larger general overview rather than encapsulating every moment where that perspective has been employed. So, separate from the dream interpretation itself, I’m also saying that you should be careful in over-equating the elevation through isolation with ascension as an absolute.

More incoming, maybe.

Pt. 3/4

Thank you, anon. Usually, I’m more focused on the visuals and what associations the querent makes with these, but I just don’t have much time to question and analyze that thoroughly — plus, there’s potential occult symbolism.

Something OP should consider with a small personal anecdote:
A small number of people are truly meant to be entirely alone. It’s largely been the path for me, but I can still recognize that we’re social creatures, so I make my efforts. Personally, completely forgoing people for years in favor of personal passions was overkill and didn’t end well. A lack of balance and an obsessive yet uncentered focus became destructive.

It light of making adjustments, I can now feel a clear gratitude for solitude due to processing the contrasts of more interaction than I’m comfortable with against the sense of autonomy from withdrawal. Social obligations quickly become taxing and I felt this as impeding on my freedom, so I found ways to work around that. You likely also consciously/unconsciously feel the dilemma of whether connection requires restrictions of perspective or is a liberty — and I believe you’re mentally trying to work through that in what your dream has tried to reveal to you. The caveat in meaning here would still be if this was a visitation of Hecate, but I’m not knowledgeable enough to make a stance there and even with that being the case, what I’ve outlined could be worth contemplating to make more sense of the common ground you share with the being and trying to understand what you want out of this better, common goals, etc.

Overall, being able to make the proper distinctions as to when you’re succumbing to temptations in a manner that acts as an emotional release vs enslaving you to something equivalent to the primal desires of lust (symbolic interpretation), will guide you correctly. Your previous methods of enlightenment have proven successful to a degree and now you must ask yourself, what’s next? Do I have to make any configurations or do I continue as is? Neither is necessarily wrong, this is merely to figure out what YOU’RE best aligned with. To determine that, if it were me, I’d be looking at my other dreams. Since you said yours are mundane, perhaps it’s time to reevaluate and switch things up. Your life might be starting to feel monotonous. Take that with a grain of salt though because that’s only an interpretation at a shallow glance.

Good luck, OP. I hope you’re able to enjoy the holidays, even if it’s a bit lonely.

The background of the illustration is a circular, ornate frame with a dark, patterned border. Hanging from the frame are several photographs, each featuring a person with a neutral expression. The photographs are arranged in a circular pattern, with the person in the center of the frame.

In the foreground, there is a table with various items on it. On the table, there are several bottles, a plate with food, and a few other objects that are not clearly distinguishable. The table is situated in front of the circular frame, and the items on the table are closer to the viewer than the person in the illustration.

The overall style of the image is whimsical and playful, with a focus on the person in the illustration and the surrounding objects. The colors used in the illustration are muted, with a predominance of white, gray, and brown tones. The lighting in the image is soft and diffused, casting a warm glow over the scene.

The image is a digital illustration depicting a scene in a dimly lit room. At the center of the image, a person is seated at a desk, facing a computer monitor. The person appears to be a male with a bald head, wearing a tank top and shorts. He is seated on a chair with a black backrest. The person's posture suggests he is engaged in some form of computer activity, as indicated by the monitor displaying a webpage with a purple background and white text.
To the left of the person, there is a pink object that resembles a cat, with blue eyes and a white face. The cat is facing the person, and its position suggests it is either sleeping or resting its head on the person's lap.

The image is a digital illustration with a cartoonish style, featuring two figures in a dynamic pose. The figure on the left is a woman with short hair, wearing a sleeveless dress, and she is seated with her back to the viewer. The figure on the right is a man with a bald head, wearing a long-sleeved shirt and pants, and he is lying on his stomach with his head resting on the ground. The background is a swirling, abstract pattern with a mix of yellow, blue, and red colors.

with girls or their Devil Vagina Magic." The text is white and stands out against the colorful background. The overall tone of the image is humorous and satirical, suggesting a commentary on the concept of attraction and the potential for negative consequences.

My lust died the second I wrote the average feminine nature on paper and stratified it according to its moral nature. I am now convinced that the only thing you are supposed to do as a soul, as a man is to wrestle your own flesh into submission, find God and develop a prosperous and altruistic relationship with our creator in order to escape this prison. 99% of women are half humans with no souls, everything they strive for and enjoy is ultimately evil in its nature. The very core of femininity is absolute evil that seeks to devour good men with the same glee and joy youd get from stomping out some dorky kids sand castle.

Once I realized why women are the way they are, it's like I've finally been enlightened as to why hermit monks become hermits in the first place. It's all a lie, its all a joke. This planet is a prison, women are archons who genuinely don't give a fuck about anything but they have to pretend to have interests beyond themselves just so men dont become suspicious and notice the huge disparity in the nature of each gender. It's not a complimentary nature, it's completely one-sided and parasitic. The entire role of women is to entrap a mans life force and pull another soul onto this false reality incarnation trap. Thats all they were designed to do. Satan takes a hold of their hivemind vessels with comedic ease and no resistance. They are all beyond corrupt, they fall apart once a month and endure pain unless they fulfill their ill-natured task. There is nothing in this world worth striving for besides Gods love. There is absolutely NOTHING in this world that is worth your place in heaven.

Make sure you love her and want her to bear children for you, that is pinnacle spiritual sex (not gay sex magick). With love, to create natural homunculus, an image of both you and both your love alive. If you don’t want that with her, don’t bother, it will only lead to backsliding and melancholy.

The image is a collage of four separate scenes from a cartoon or animated series. The scenes are set in a bedroom with a pink and purple color scheme.
In the top left scene, a character is lying on a bed with a purple pillow and a pink blanket. The character has blonde hair and is wearing a blue and white floral shirt. The bed is adorned with a purple lamp and a purple nightstand.

The top right scene shows a character standing in a room with a white ceiling fan. The character is wearing a black shirt and shorts, and has a white headband.
Each scene is distinct, but they all share a common theme of a character in a bedroom setting, with various elements such as clothing, furniture, and accessories. The style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with vibrant colors and expressive facial features.

The image is a digital graphic with a humorous and satirical tone. It features a cat with an orange and white striped pattern, appearing to be in the act of speaking into a megaphone. The megaphone is blue and has a white handle. The cat's mouth is open, and it seems to be shouting or making a loud noise. Above the cat, the text "SEXOOOOOOO" is written in bold, capital letters, which is a play on the word "sex" and the word "o" in "sexo." The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the colorful cat and the blue megaphone, making the cat and the text stand out. The style of the image is reminiscent of meme-style graphics, often used to convey humor or satire.

Alright bud
Rule number 1, don't be a fuckin' chicken. If you're hesitant, don't be - if you want it, go for it, if you are unsure, go for it.
Rule 2, if she asks you to do something, do it.
>cum in my mouth >put it in my ass >eat my pussy
You solider up and do it.
She will love you for it.
Sex is the only direct communication I have received from a woman.
Rule 3, if she brings it up, she wants you to do it.
>I've only let lime 5 guys fuck me in the ass, from a girl who has had sex with 100+ men, who spent the night at my house, and brought this up after us shagging on and off for 4 hours. I didn't do it, and I regret it.)
>"I've never X before", she wants to try it with you.
>"Have you ever?", she wants to try it with you
Women will still be indirect in sex, but they will also be absolutely direct.
The examples here are my own experiences.
Have had a woman, during a a first date when I was trying to get to know her, we were playing pinball, and she asked me to help her with the flippers, and she grabbed my hand and put it on her book.
Oh yeah, we went straight to my place and fucked all night.
I had another date, stop me cold and ask me, "So are we having sex or what."
Dang. Yeah girl. Waa trying to be your friend first, get that emotional connection, but ok, yeah, I want to have sex, too.
Another girl brought a change of clothes mentioned it a couple times. Ok.
Well we were playing tennis, then got a coffee real close, and while sitting down with our coffees she had me look at a web comic on her phone something about a ferret on a date? being super fucking horny.
I, did not get the message which was to take her home and fuck her brains out.
Rule 3, if she brings it up, she wants you to do it.
Godspeed bud.

I have literally done things like picrel with women.
If a girl likes you, she'll let you do almost anything.
>girl 1 Painted Squidward Bold and Brash together, naked, painted each other, I wrote Property of Anon and took a photo of it >girl 1 Same girl and I fucked with horse masks on, she had a unicorn I got her, and I had the one I travel with - so I can use social media but not have the facial recognition tag me >girl 2 parked in the front row of a restaurant and fucked in the car, with people and families all around us >girl 2 lived with 4 female roommates, 2 story house, and after a party, wanted us to sneak up the steps naked, and fuck her at the top of the steps in front of all her friends' bedrooms - who were asleep in them
>I use to get freaky and have sex during conference calls, but now coworker voices kill my boner
>I need to have a gf call her mom while I'm giving her the ol' in 'n out, being discreet, but having her call her mom and smalltalk while I'm balls deep >girl 3 I have a house which overlooks a valley. People walk by it all the time. I put my girl's tits right on the sliding door glass, leaving tit prints, buck named for everyone walking by to see - but knowing nobody actuakly looks into the windows so not as freaky - but she didn't know that >girl 3 in fact said she made eye contact with the neighbor's wife, from my kitchen, and the next day tempted me to have sex in the kitchen, in front of the dining room window (where she made eye contact the day before) women will do anything for and with a man they like.
none of mine are as good as the picr green text, but it's not a contest - it's a lesson.
Enjoy it while young, OP.Women are absolutely bullshit once you get to know them. So have fun until the red pill kicks in.

It depends on your psychological relationship with sex in the first place. If it's always been a completely accesible and casual thing for you, it's quite literally a non issue, for others it's so entwined with their sense of self worth, religious hang ups, absolute thirst for it etc that it can be your no1 lifelong hindrance and seriously hold back spiritual development.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a frog with human-like features. The frog is wearing a white coat with a blue tie and a stethoscope around its neck. The character has a large, expressive face with large, round eyes and a small mouth. It has a green body with a red stripe running down its neck. The frog is holding a small orange pill in its right hand, which has a label that reads "COPAM". The background of the image is plain white. There is a watermark in the bottom left corner that reads "thegimp.com". The style of the image is cartoonish and is likely intended for a humorous or light-hearted context.

Stay that way unless you intend on starting a family with a good women. Up untill 23 I had very good luck in life, I always landed on my feet and had a creative abundance. When I lost my virginity at 23 to some slampig something imediately noticable changed, like the rose tinted glasses came off and the 'knowing' that I was going to land on my feet left me. Sure lifes been pretty good and sex is good but I don't get much of that anymore, but before losing it I was on a trajectory that could have taken me anywhere in life.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a stylized depiction of a human figure with a muscular build. The figure is seated on a large, spherical object that appears to be a cushion or a seat. The figure's body is covered in a dark substance that could be blood or a similar substance, and there is a noticeable stain on the figure's chest area. The background is a gradient of purple and white, with a pattern that resembles a mandala or a circular design.
In the foreground, there is a partial view of a person with dark hair, whose face is not visible. The person's eyes are closed, and their mouth is slightly open, suggesting a state of relaxation or contemplation. The person's expression is calm and serene. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and exaggerated, with a focus on the contrast between the figure's muscular build and the soft, round object it sits on. There are no texts present in the image.

Women are unironic chakra vampires that need human semen (soul energy) to survive, diagram of uterus is the image of apostolic baphomet, look it up, complete with horns and all.

When you have sex, part of your soul is being lost on ejaculation, think about it, you cum inside and the cum never comes out, soon enough it is absorbed by the vagina (baphomet devouring soul fragments), but how? It has no mouths, yet it happens. Semen is the vagina's (apostolic baphomet) prefered goyslop, without semen women (demonkind) dies of starvation, which is why women seek sex and always want you to cum inside for an 'unexplainable reason', part of the reason this happens is based on the fact there is no superior entity for them to rely on once their interior energy is depleted, think of it like a really big tank with only one mouth on it that slowly leaks out.

They replenish their inner energy by absorbing it from men, because ultimately they have no souls which they can rely on to produce this energy themselves. If they do not get enough energy, they bleed. just look it up, pregnant women (women that have been cummed in and had their energy needs temporarily sated) do not have periods at all, nothing, blood simply does not come out. Yet a woman that does not have this 'suddenly' bleeds and feels ill for several days in a row with pain and weakness and bleeding. Normal?

In the foreground, there is a woman standing on a set of stone stairs, dressed in a flowing, long dress. She appears to be gazing upwards, possibly at the building or the sky. The woman's posture and the way she is positioned on the stairs suggest a sense of contemplation or admiration.

The painting is executed in a realistic style, with attention to detail in the architecture and the clothing of the woman. The use of warm colors and the lighting contribute to a sense of depth and atmosphere. The overall composition and the attention to detail suggest that this painting may be a work of art, possibly a genre painting or a historical scene.

Welcome. The purpose of this general is to show you how to use your own wonderful human imagination to achieve your every desire.

The world and all within it is man’s conditioned consciousness objectified.

Consciousness is the cause as well as the substance of the entire world. So it is to consciousness that we must turn if we would discover the secret of creation. Knowledge of the law of consciousness and the method of operating this law will enable you to accomplish all you desire in life.

Your assumptions right now decide how long that will take for you.

The Main Concepts: > Imagination creates Reality
> Assumptions harden into fact > Consciousness is the only Reality
> Feeling is the Secret
> Prayer, Living in the End/In the Wish Fulfilled (remaining Faithful to your Idea)
> You are the Operant Power
> There is no one to change but Self (Self-Concept)
> Thinking Fourth-Dimensionally (Time is an Illusion)

> Can I manifest ___?
Yes! Creation is finished.

It is kind of insane how much my life shifts around when I manifest and do rituals. It's like the world around me gets burnt to the ground and a forest grows from the ashes. In one week like three people were banished from my life forever because of bizarre, out-of-character decisions they made for themselves. In the grand scheme of things, these people were very clearly not aligned with what I am shooting for. And they've been replaced with at least seven new people in my life that are on the same wavelength as me. Damn.

I'm starting to think accepting everything Neville said as true instead of as "guidelines" was a mistake.

Take his claim that saying, "I have x", is better than saying "I will have x". You can easily add, "I will have x in the past", or "I will have x instantly".

This whole concept is based on Neville just being a mouthpiece for your greater self, and the natural result of that is that you learn and figure it out yourself.

Does anyone here really believe that just following Neville's instructions like an empty minded NPC, even when they disagree with him or don't like stuff he says would actually work? Nobody believes that kinda thing, nobody believes the path to saving yourself means reading off a script.

Every machine has it's own architecture after all. At least on my machine, the whole concept of every person being different and having different talents is law.

I always thought treating your own wording as though they were genie wishes that could backfire simply due to how your desire was worded isn't giving enough credit to your subconscious. /LoA/ is just another spiritual practice, but it's essentially the only spiritual practice that matters, because is the truth, and the path to freedom. Life is all about faith and choices.

With that said, /LoA/ is the purpose or the goal, but the practice in itself is meditation. If you have read Murphy, Neville and Universal Line documents, you would know that meditation is the sole spiritual practice that would be doing most of the time for manifestation; in order to expand your awareness, dissolve the ego, or essentially, just get any block out of the way, and unite with your spiritual eye. Meditation in this context is paramount because is made with a purpouse, becoming the greatest spiritual exercise you will have in your life, and in this context, meditation and prayer are the same thing.

I reccomend the following books in the following order to master meditation and acquire great foundation for bigger manifestation skills:
>A Guide to Tranquil Wisdom Insight Meditation, by Bhante Vimalaramsi >Initiation into Hermetics, by Franz Bardon

>A Course In Miracles, by Inner Peace Foundation >Course on Universal Law, by Walter Russell

After that, Neville and Paolucci would do. I selected those books because you will be doing and making stuff happen most of the time, and as you archieve progress as you go, you would finally understand Neville and the others from experience. The most important thing a rookie should understand, is that this is a practice as any other, just as working out, so get into action. I hope this helps someone along the way.

Don't quit just because SATS bored you or because you got half-assed results, you are most likely toggling between states and then judging the 3D. If you can shift out of bad feelings and you're still getting small stuff, you already proved the mechanism works, what's missing is consistency of state and clarity of end, not more strain. Also, half-assed manifestations usually come from half-assed assumptions (you accept "close enough" internally, or you keep contradicting the end with checking/complaining). You don't need classic SATS if it doesn't fit you, do micro-SATS (10–30 seconds), repeated all day, or use physical cues (note on phone/hand) so awareness keeps seeing the end without mental looping. Pick ONE end scene that implies completion, keep 2–3 non-negotiables, and drop micromanaging every detail. The goal is for it to feel naturalness.

manifestation essentially comes from manipulating your mind in one way or another (whether its SATS, intention, letting go of desires or counter beliefs, etc) and meditation helps you have more control over your mind in various ways, including awareness of subtle sensations and a better ability to focus.

The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a green background and white text. The top of the page has a navigation bar with links to different sections of the website. The main content of the page is a list of articles or blog posts, each with a title, a date, and a brief description. The titles of the articles are in bold, and the descriptions are in regular font. The dates of the articles are in a smaller font size. The articles are listed in a column format, with each article having a unique identifier. The overall layout suggests that this is a section of a website dedicated to sharing personal experiences and advice on how to improve one's family life.

The image is a vertical photograph of a person in a gym setting. The individual is standing with their left arm raised, holding a cellular telephone to their face, seemingly taking a selfie. They are wearing a white sports bra and brown shorts, and have a tattoo visible on their left thigh. The person's hair is styled in a ponytail, and they are looking directly at the camera. The background shows a gym equipment rack, including a weight machine and a bench. The lighting in the gym is artificial, and the floor appears to be a dark color, possibly black, which contrasts with the lighter colors of the person's clothing and the equipment. There is no visible text in the image.

>fuck it if I can't do anything right in my life at least I can force myself to feel good while still being a loser so I do the meditation, and the next day I walk around simply focusing on trying to evoke a good feeling and using the 6Rs technique continuously any time a bad thought comes up. I didn't have any intention behind this other than not being suicidal and miserable for one day in my life.
Well I had about 5 somewhat unlikely coincidences happen today, pointing towards my main goal after some of the most miserable days of my life so far. Nothing mind blowing, far from my actual goal, but enough to make me go "huh that's odd" and compound on the good feelings I was trying to generate.

I'm not saying this will lead anywhere, maybe I just had an unusually good day and it all goes back to hell, but this is the first time in my life I try any 'manifestation' and get anything at all to show for it, so I'm curious enough to keep following this path.

You can manifest effectively only if the doorway to the subconscious is opened. I have an esoteric method for this Basically you have to open your ajna chakra and then during meditation or resting with eyes closed on the bed, visualise some desire you have in picture form. What will happen is youll see a bright light that gets more intense. Thats the sign that you have impressed the subconscious with the imaginal act. Most people will fail as their imagination isnt able to penetrate due to no innate opening to the subconscious. Some people wont be able to do it.

You need to tread the path of gimel in kabbalah. The path connecting kether to tiferet. Or alternatively open your ajna chakra this fucker doesn't do shit, she is not cooperative, doesn't want to talk to me in SATS, doesn't want to load my scenes into her, ghosts me when I do my affirmations, she is not impressed by anything.

and on top of that all that it knows is giving me OCD, intrusive thoughts about getting mutilated while dying a slow death. or losing my dearest people in life. and depression and anxiety on top of that.
I tried to talk to her multiple times. but she is a bad subconsciousness.
i am getting subconsciousness fatigue.
Neville said you have to persuade her not force her.

but you know what? it's time for my consciousness to do some wife beating. i am doing some mind domestic violence today.
then I am divorcing her and getting a new subconsciousness that will treat me with some respect.

i am tired of being a cuck to my subconscioussness. a slave to her. why must my consciousness care? this is humiliating. i get to decide what happens with my world regardless what my subconsciousness thinks. i will either enslave my subconsciousness or kill it. yes "it" because it's no longer a person to me. it's no longer a part of me. it no longer exists for me. there is only my consciousness. my lucid self aware experience.

and it will bend this world to its will. at any cost.

Most mental blocks are due to subconscious conditioning that's why those need to be de-activated otherwise it's an endless struggle. I always recommend Sedona Method for this. This is a gap in Neville's teaching. mental diet won't fix it. It just suppresses even deeper.
the problem is that mental diets are an exercise of mental discipline. You're forcing down negative thoughts and patterns.
Sedona helps you release negative emotions and this is crucial because negative thought patterns are sustained by those emotions. These are basically automatic programs your subconscious has developed and you basically catch yourself thinking negatively for apparently no reason. A mental diet is a form of self observation where you force stop those patterns. But it doesn't really work, because those programs are not de-activated.
If your discipline is strong enough to manifest what you want, a natural release of bad emotions may follow and some programs are de-activated that way. But it's not the mental diet that does it. It's still the release.
On relatively minor issues mental diets may suffice but on long-standing issues and emotionally charged issues, you won't manifest what you want until you shut down those Neville didn't think this through all the way. He thought "living in the end" will get you what you want, but you can't live in the end if your subconscious programming opposes it. Do you feel good after sats in the evening but wake up depressed in the morning, for apparently no reason? Well, that's why.

on r/sedonamethod or r/davidhawkins you can find people who not only healed deep traumas but also healed health issues that mundane solutions were useless for using release techniques such as Sedona or David Hawkins letting go by releasing the "negativity" associated with the disease from their subconscious mind, even Neville and Murphy said that our bodies are emotional filters and all our health issues are caused by repressed negative emotions in our subconscious mind (i think Neville went too far when he said all our health issues are caused by supressed negative emotions) of course it's all hearsay and theory and you should only trust what you can prove to yourself, I wish you the best for you on your journey for mental and/or physical healing, I 'll manifest healing for you

The problem is what you're building today you have to rebuild tomorrow when you're doing mental diet because the subconscious program is still there and you're often working with no results. You need great discipline, great force of will and mental strength to forcefully push new programs into the old ones until the old ones are firmly out and the new ones are firmly in. Why not just bring those programs to the surface and remove them calmly instead of being in that state of struggle
Until you do that, imagining has no results. Some people imagine for years and nothing happens. That's because thenimagination says yes but the subconscious says no. That's why in the Gospel of Thomas which is the most occult one it says 'If two make peace with each other in this single house, they will say to the mountain: move away and it will turn'. The two are not two people but the two aspects of your mind the subconscious and the conscious. People work a lot on the surface but that's not enough

>Weirdly enough when I just let my mind wander (even if its to negative emotions) I wake up more optimistic and ready to face the world

That's exactly why everyone needs to practice release techniques such as Sedona or David hawkins Letting go to dig in their subconscious mind and remove whatever blocks that prevent them from assuming the new identity fully and believe that their wish is fulfilled, when you imagine what you want, do you feel any resistance? Any doubt, skepticism or a voice that says it won't happen, that's how you know you have blocks in your subconscious, especially if it persists:

"Your body is an emotional filter and bears the unmistakable marks of your prevalent emotions. Emotional disturbances, especially suppressed emotions, are the causes of all disease. To feel intensely about a wrong without voicing or expressing that feeling is the beginning of disease . . dis-ease . . in both body and environment. Do not entertain the feeling of regret or failure for frustration or detachment from your objective results in disease. Think feelingly only of the state you desire to realize. Feeling the reality of the state sought and living and acting on that conviction is the way of all seeming miracles."

The image is a black and white photograph featuring a man with long, wavy hair. He is shirtless and appears to be outdoors, possibly in a forested area, as there are trees and foliage in the background. The man is smiling and looking to his left, with a slight tilt of his head. He is wearing a necklace with a pendant that is not fully visible. The man's skin tone is light, and he has a well-defined chest with a noticeable six-pack. There are no visible texts or logos in the image. The style of the photograph is candid and appears to be taken in a natural setting.

I think i was a part of someone else's manifestation today.

>work on 4th floor
>pass by the same bulletin board I do every day >a particular flyer catches my eye >a small, nondescript little blurb announcing where the Lost & Found is for this building >has probably been up for months but just now noticing it >take note of the room, mentally file it away for future >several hours later I am leaving >walk down the stairs to first floor >go to bathroom by the exit before driving home like i always do >but today janitor is cleaning it so I can't go in >debate whether or not I should go >i don't really have to pee, but it's 30 minute drive to my house >feel compelled to walk back up to second floor to pee >find nice ring in the bathroom I'm not usually in >Hey guess what, I know exactly where lost and found is, i just learned about it today >take it to lost and found and they say they are pretty sure who it belongs to, they'll call the owner

Nothing consequential in my life but I had the unshakable feeling that I was the moving parts in someone else's manifestation. Perhaps someone who was missing their ring and wishing for it to return. Noticing the flyer, making note of the room, usual bathroom unavailable, feeling compelled to go up to other bathroom. I felt like a puppet being directed, yet it was all natural.

In the center of the cover, there is a golden-yellow sphere with a droplet-like shape, resembling a tear or a drop of oil, floating above it. The sphere and the droplet are set against a gradient background that transitions from a darker shade at the top to a lighter shade at the bottom.
At the bottom of the cover, there is a subtitle in smaller black letters that reads "The Law and The Promise." The overall style of the image is simple and elegant, with a focus on the title and the central image. The use of gold and black creates a sense of luxury and sophistication, which is often associated with the Law of Attraction and success stories.

loa is honestly mostly just wishful thinking. i began my "spiritual journey" with loa (back when it was called attraction, for what it matters) years ago and realized that it's honestly just a waste of time.

visualizing what you want can get you what you want but there are many things that are "hiccups" in this kind of loa work. first of all, when you want to manifest something, let's say a company which pays you well, before that you are going to have to deal with all the karma related to setting up such an enterprise, whether the karma is easy or harder to deal with.

also, loa alone is pretty innocent but there is a way to gain "super powers" in terms of loa manifesting but it's often ignored because of the material attractiveness of /loa/ in general.

i'd just recommend becoming a mystic/monk/occultist so you will get over the unnecessary lust for money, power, women etc. and realize their emptiness and start practicing a real system of spiritual growth. ironically just doing the practice will most likely give you all the stuff you ever wanted as a loatard.

Do you have any recommendations on how to start with this?

I did spend some time looking into it, reading books, and maybe I'm too retarded but at the end of it all I just end up thinking "secrets of the universe are cool and all but I still yearn for a comfortable life and love". People say that money/women are superfluous but it's always based on 'trust me bro I've been there done that', well I haven't, so I still want it. I also haven't been able to let go of those desires, in spite of trying. Surely the best way to learn those things are empty is to attain them and see it for yourself?

JUST DECIDE:

Lie down on the floor, in the constructive rest position (feet flat, knees bent, head supported by books) or the recovery position (on your side, upper arm forward) and let go to gravity; just play dead. Let your thoughts and body alone, let them do what they will. Stay like this for 10 minutes. If you find yourself caught up in a thought of a body sensation, just let it go again.

After the 10 minutes, you are going to get up. Without doing it. Just lie there and "decide" to get up. Then wait. Leave your muscles alone. Wait until your body moves by itself. This may take a few sessions before you get a result, perhaps many, but at some point your body will just get up by itself. Once that happens, avoid interfering with your muscles and let your body go where it will, spontaneously and without your intervention.

This is how magick works. All you need to do is, decide. As Alan Chapman says, "the meaning of an act is what you decide it means". But you don't even need an act. You can just decide an outcome, a desired event, to insert a new fact into your world, without a ritual. Just decide what's going to happen. Just decide.

Decide to be totally relaxed. Decide to feel calm. Decide to win at the game. Decide to meet that person you've dreamed of. Decide to be rich. Decide to triumph.

Because in this subjective idealistic reality, where the dream is you, what else is there to do?

That naturalness you felt was you fulfilling a purpose, even if that purpose was to benefit someone else. You were temporarily given a telos. Of course it felt natural: man was made for a purpose, and to have purpose. There is nothing more natural-feeling and relaxing than knowing one's purpose, the feeling of being an important cog in the machinery of the universe, and no other cog could fill that little spot but you.

Purpose is everything. I envy you for that, because purpose is such a difficult thing to find. Lacking a purpose, man becomes restless.

>not exactly what I want
You're placing too many conditions on it. By conditioning your wants, you make them harder for the universe to fulfill. Basically, you're setting up expectations and then are disappointed when the outcome doesn't meet the expectations.

Happens all the time. We love the idea of controlling exactly how and when things happen. However, the secret is in NOT controlling. The secret is in letting go. After all, the Gates of Heaven cannot be taken by force, but open willingly to those who submit.

So many people say they want to win the lottery, for example. But in reality, they don't want that - what they want is to be wealthy enough to not have to work, or to buy a house and a bunch of land, or to be generous with their friends and family. They want freedom. The lottery is only one way of getting that, there are infinite other ways to obtain that freedom. Rather than condition your desire, rather than say "it must come exactly this way at exactly this time", try instead to simply live in the moment of having it, and how it got there is irrelevant.

You'll be surprised. It often comes even better than you could have hoped for when done this way. "Cup pressed down and running over", as it were.

The image is a close-up photograph of a cat sitting on a chair. The cat has a white and orange coat with a mix of white and black markings on its face. It is looking directly at the camera with a neutral expression. The cat is holding a small, round, yellow-brown pastry in its paws, which appears to be a quiche or tart. The pastry is placed on a glass table, and the background is blurred, suggesting an indoor setting with a wooden chair and a plant. The lighting in the image is soft, with the cat's fur and the pastry being the most illuminated areas. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is candid and seems to capture a moment of the cat's curiosity or interest in the pastry.

i just can't do SATS wtf is wrong with me?

i have been trying for a long time. but every time I either fall asleep or completely lose focus and start thinking about nonsensical ideas.

i tried every trick. like doing it in the morning when I am not tired. doing it while sitting on a chair, laying on my hand under my butt, holding an object in my arm to drop it when I fall asleep etc... but it never works. i always end up falling asleep or just getting random thoughts.

any tips? pls?

Write out your SATS scene, and then record a guided meditation and/or affirmations for it and listen to it as you fall asleep.
Record your own, rather than picking one online, so it's specific to you. This has worked for me many times.

Let stop being delusional for once. It were the users themselves. It's imposible to have a true manifestation general when you have to deal with the same sexually frustrated atheists, christcucks and indians every single time. Anons, don't let LoA be your only base. Other occult/magick systems work just as well if not better than this for the average person.

The TikTok roastie getting stupid success with stupid ease, often repeating wrong arguments and often using weird, "outdated" techniques got started with some sort of magick.
This community often seems to have a problem with "demonizing" other occult practices because they somehow believe they reached the truth or the root of it all. And don't get me wrong, it can definitely be true in some cases. But such arrogance is harmful, not only belief wise, but also because it prevents you from applying other systems.

"Oh, I know the base of it all, what's the point in doing silly sigils or affirmations or burning papers?" the point is that there's a 99% chance it's gonna work better for you than LoA stuff.
Just look at this general and around. How many people do you actually know, personally, that have had success with Neville's techniques? Likely not a lot. Truth of the word is, you, reader, lack the base to actually do LoA. Your SATS sessions are, and most likely will almost never be as good as Orion's or Neville's. You most likely have far too many limiting beliefs that you don't actually know how to tackle. LoA won't cut it for you. Magick will.
Why? Second causes.
You can "trick" your brain, your subconscious, into working with the assumption that the more complex a ritual, the more effort goes into it, the more it's gonna take effect. It's how older /x/ frens did it. Before this stuff, you had people making sigils, writing them with calligraphy, in silence, with candles, specific sounds, at specific hours and times, playing with planetary magick, calling in spirits... And it most likely worked for them.

Adding this type of umph to your practices is efficient. It works. [1]

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a green frog with a human-like face. The frog has large, expressive eyes and a wide, open mouth. It is wearing a blue shirt and is holding a hammer in its right hand. The hammer has a wooden handle and a black head, suggesting it is a traditional type of hammer. The frog's expression is one of anger or frustration, with its mouth open wide and its eyebrows raised. The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the green color of the frog and the blue of the shirt. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is cartoonish, with a focus on the character's facial expression and the physical details of the hammer.

I'm like you, money is so easy and almost effortless for me, and professional relationships are too (tied to money i guess), but personal relationships are very hard for me to manifest. I can and have, but it takes much more time and effort. Other people are the opposite.... they have lovers and relationships left and right but $5 to their name!
I suppose the truck is to figure out WHY you have the beliefs you do about relationships. They're difficult; why do you think that? Can you convince yourself they're not? It's something I'm working on, too.

Hey anons I know this is vastly late but IMO I generally think people are stuck in a mind rut of not believing that the law of attraction/law of assumption is real so its in their best interest to do the ladder experiment or do something more odd and bizarre like a red bouncy ball. So you can "verify" it.

This is known as quantum mind field manipulation. An infinite series of possibilities are available to you that you create with every nano second you choose to do something down to the letters your type or the time you go to the bathroom, that ultimately shapes your reality, you might not think it does, but it does.

Because even something like choosing to spend 5 more minutes on the shitter, which is conscious choice is the difference you get in your car later and encounter different occurrences when driving.

Remember, nothing is impossible, think of how many infinite possibilities there are from where you exist right now. The chances of a kilo of gold ending up on your bedside are low, but never zero, maybe a relative dies, maybe you get shipped a bar of gold by accident, maybe just maybe anything happens, but it is never zero.

Change only happens in the quantum universal field when its perceived.

Maybe it could be because of personalities? It's so tough to figure out. I've lost all my friendships over time, I only have family left. They help me a lot, but I still dislike them because of past incidents.
One day, maybe we could get the relationship we desire, too. One day. It's just so weird how quickly it is to manifest money and objects compared to people.

The vampire's eyes are wide open, and the mouth is slightly open, giving the impression of a menacing or predatory expression. The vampire is wearing a black cape that flows behind it, and the cape is outlined in white, creating a stark contrast against the black background. The vampire's hands are outstretched, as if reaching out or gesturing towards something. The image is simple and stark, with no additional text or context provided. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional vampire imagery, often associated with horror or fantasy genres.

Manifestation with meditation works but you must be consistent with it and never doubt, those are the only two factors to tap into the quantum field. Billionaires and successful people in the 1900 didnt do any "letting go" all they did was never doubt.

The letting go is not necessary its a placebo addition by neville which doesnt affect the outcome, its quite pointless. All the universal field responds to is intention, how much you want it, and how much you doubt.

The image is a color photograph featuring a man dressed in a traditional Middle-earth style outfit. He is wearing a long, gray robe that reaches down to his feet, and a matching gray hat with a white brim. The man has a long white beard and is holding a staff with a twisted, gnarled handle. He is standing outdoors with a backdrop of a grassy field and trees. The lighting suggests it is daytime, and the sky is partly cloudy. The man's expression is neutral, and he is looking directly at the camera. There are no visible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, and it appears to be a still from a film or television series, given the style of the costume and the setting.

The best method I found so far to manifest and use the LoA is to embrace death. The og manifestor himself said that those who cling to life will die and those who welcome death will live. The moment I said I'm done with this life, I am done trying and I give my wheel to God and just started living indifferently, everything started going up hill.

Here's the entire course on youtube
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rP-IqQ4vYIE&list=PLf5F6-cxbtT6KM9Sxk48QOMC2KZmU1_1z

The sedona method is easy as fuck. You have an array of emotions Both positive and negative. You release these emotions via 3 questions. The 3 question are just meant to allow you to identify, feel and let go of emotions. There's also the technique where you sit and feel the emotion until it burns itself out.

Most people just get rid of their negative emotions, but the course explains that Positive emotions hold you back as well.

When you remove both positive and negative emotions you can move forward as a new person to experience new Pains and Pleasures. i.e. you change.

you can use this with LOA by figuring out what negative/positive emotions are driving your desires and removing them. then you can logically move forward with emotions and Feeling having the object/desire without those excess emotions interfering.

Well anons, i've started my christian sorcery voyage. So far i've healed the sick and Made my broken vehicle magically start working again. Turns out this realm isn't what we all believe it to be. It's not physical and is in fact magical.

it's not a dream like those larping Oneirosophy faggots claim it to be. I came back expecting to see /one/ thriving and it's dead. That's what they get for following false teachers like Triumphant George and all those other fucking loser's. At least they had to decency to not shit up the Castaneda Legacy.

I actually ventured into their world to see where their retarded and stupid concepts came from and it turns out there is a wealth of dream knowledge out there, but these faggots just made an idiots guide to dream yoga and stole a bunch of castaneda concepts. You can't just create some new method by scraping from better systems.

hope that helps.
Good luck anon.

View SameOCRGoogleiqdbSauceNAOTrace topruia-statement.png, 100KiB, 709x617
The image is a text excerpt from a document or article, presented in a plain white background with black text. The text is divided into two columns, with the left column containing a block of text and the right column containing a continuation of the same text. The text is in English and appears to be a response or statement from someone named Topuria, who is discussing a situation on Instagram.

The text discusses a situation where Topuria has been accused of stepping away from fighting for the time being, citing an alleged extortion plot against him. The text mentions that over the past several weeks, Topuria has made the difficult decision to temporarily step away from defending his title, which was not a decision he took lightly. However, the text indicates that when circumstances arise that threaten your personal integrity, your family, and your reputation, there comes a point when you must address them directly.

The text also mentions that in recent months, Topuria has been subjected to severe and unacceptable pressure, including threats to disseminate false allegations of domestic abuse unless financial demands were met. These allegations are entirely unfounded, and the truth is not a matter of opinion—it is a matter of evidence.

The text concludes with a statement that all relevant evidence has been carefully preserved and documented, including audio recordings, written communications, witness statements, and video material. This evidence has been submitted to the appropriate judicial authorities in order to pursue legal action for attempted extortion, falsification of evidence, misappropriation of funds, and personal property, and multiple threats.

The style of the image is straightforward and appears to be a screenshot from a document or a digital publication, as it lacks any additional graphics or embellishments. The text is in a formal and serious tone, which is consistent with the content of the statement.

The image is a meme featuring a man with a serious expression, wearing a suit and tie, and standing in front of a purple background. The man appears to be in a professional setting, possibly an office, as indicated by the desk and the plant in the background. The meme is divided into two halves, each with a different message.

In the left half, the text reads: "i receive: your full trust and i believe that you'll make up for your DR. literally wake up in your DR." This suggests that the man is receiving a trade offer from someone, and he is being asked to make up for a mistake in his dream recall (DR).

The right half of the meme reads: "you receive: you didn't believe hard enough." This part of the meme is a response to the previous message, indicating that the man is being told that he didn't believe hard enough in his trade offer.

The meme is overlaid with a red "TRADE OFFER" warning sign, which is a common visual element in meme-based content to indicate a commercial or promotional message. The overall style of the meme is humorous and satirical, using a combination of text and visual elements to convey a light-hearted message about trade offers.

The image is a composite of two separate photographs. The top photograph shows a close-up of a man's face, with his eyes looking directly at the camera. The man has short, light-colored hair and a neutral expression. The background of the top photograph is blurred, but it appears to be an outdoor setting with trees and a building.
The bottom photograph is a close-up of a spiral-shaped object, which is likely a planet or celestial body. The object has a blue-green hue and is surrounded by a white ring. The surface of the object has a pattern of concentric circles, and there are small, dark dots scattered throughout. The background of the bottom photograph is also blurred, but it seems to be a view of the sky or a planet's surface.
The image is presented in a vintage style, with a grainy texture and a warm color palette. The style suggests that the photograph might be from an old film or a digital image that has been processed to give it a vintage look. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image.

The image is a meme featuring a cartoon-style drawing of a person with a simple black and white face. The person is holding a gray block with two black buttons, as if they are presenting it. Above the person's head, the text "COME HERE" is written in bold, capitalized letters, suggesting a playful or humorous tone. The background is plain white, which contrasts with the black outlines of the person's face and the gray block, making the elements stand out. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and informal, typical of meme culture.

Yes i have manifested specific sexual acts with people who wouldn't do said acts before, but then initiated them off their own volition like it was the most natural thing in the world, kek WAB

It was difficult for meto achieve though. I had to really do affirmations, SATS, journaling, every method i knew relentlessly. It worked, but always backfired. Like what I wanted would happen, and then things would go really sour right after, kind of like the SP realized they were acting unnaturally... i did this several times before I noticed the pattern of success - monkey paw.

I also have the most blockages in that area. Money, career, etc is very easy for me but I struggle a lot with sex / romance. I know it's because I have beliefs about it that make me think it's hard. I'm working on it.

I've had more success recently with general affirmations like "relationships are easy, I can have anyone i want, it's so easy" rather than anything specific.

The bridge is illuminated by small lights, casting a soft glow on the steps. A figure stands on the bridge, gazing at the waterfall. The figure is wearing a robe and appears to be a person, possibly a saint or a guardian.
The background features a hill with a grassy slope and a few trees. The sky is dark, with a bright moon visible in the top left corner. The overall color palette is dominated by shades of blue and green, with the blue being more dominant in the sky and the green in the foliage.
The style of the painting is realistic with a touch of fantasy, as suggested by the ethereal quality of the scene and the presence of the figure on the bridge. The artist has used a limited color palette to create a tranquil and peaceful atmosphere.

I don't think any of you could handle the truth. What if:
>There are 2 highly advanced species vying for control over this planet?
>Battles have been fought. Empire have been destroyed?
>After the destruction, an agreement was made
>Create a race of (human) slaves to terraform Mars
>Once Mars has been terraformed, one species claims Mars
>The other claims Earth
>Humanity no longer serves a purpose and are destroyed

Could any of you handle that truth? Be careful what you wish for.

The image is a photograph with a sepia tone, featuring a large, stylized, pixelated figure resembling a face with a speech bubble. The figure is composed of numerous small squares, creating a pixelated effect. The speech bubble contains the text "BEWARE THE BEAVERS OF FAKE GIFTS AND THEIR BROKEN PROMISES. MUCH PAIN BUT STILL TIME. DAMAGED WORD. THERE IS GOOD OUT THERE. WE OPPOSE DECEPTION. CONDUIT CLOSING. (Bell sound)." The text is in a bold, capitalized font, and the figure is centrally placed on a textured surface that appears to be a wooden plank or floor. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a historical or scientific document, possibly related to a conspiracy theory or a message from an alien.

The image is a candid photograph of a person sitting on a blue couch. The individual appears to be a bald man with a mustache, wearing a red and yellow shirt with a collar, black pants, and sunglasses. He is holding a bottle of Tito's Vodka in his right hand, which is positioned near the bottle's neck. The bottle has a label that reads "Tito's Vodka" and "Handcrafted." The person's face is partially obscured by the sunglasses, and he is looking towards the camera with a slight smile. The background is blurred, suggesting the focus is on the person and the bottle. The overall style of the image is informal and seems to be taken in a casual setting.

The image is a movie poster for the film "Dark City." The poster features a dark, moody color scheme with a predominantly blue and black color palette. At the center of the poster is a figure with a long, flowing black hair, wearing a blue coat and a white shirt. The figure appears to be in a state of distress or shock, with their arms outstretched and their mouth open wide. The background is a dark, blurred cityscape with a clock face, suggesting a sense of time passing or a countdown.
At the top of the poster, the names of the actors are listed in white text: Rufus Sewell, Kiefer Sutherland, and Jennifer Connelly. Below the main title, there is a tagline in white text that reads, "They both live or die. But one night, they are all at war with each other." At the bottom of the poster, there is a tagline in white text that says, "From the director at The Grind." The bottom of the poster has a website address in white text: "www.darkcitymovie.com."
The overall style of the poster is dramatic and suspenseful, with a focus on the central figure and the ominous cityscape. The use of color and lighting creates a sense of tension and foreboding.

There is evidence of massive explosions that suggests that these were either somehow natural nuclear reactor events or weapons used by ancient Martian civilizations. I believe after a grueling war between 2 advanced civilizations ensued, Mars was destroyed.
My theory: 2 advanced species that hate sharing the planet together could've formed an agreement: create a slave race of beings (us) and let them breed an advance just enough as a race to terraform Mars with a smile whilst taking selfies. Once terraforming is complete, prepare your anus humanity, your purpose for life has been served.

The image is a page from an old book or manuscript, featuring a detailed illustration of a celestial scene. At the top, there is a large sun with rays radiating outward, and below the sun, there are several smaller celestial bodies, including stars and planets, scattered throughout the sky. The sun is surrounded by a multitude of lines and dots, which could represent stars or other celestial objects.

In the foreground, there is a landscape with a cityscape and a river, suggesting a setting that could be a European city during the Renaissance or Baroque period. The cityscape includes buildings and a bridge, and the river is depicted with a small boat on it.

The text on the page is in Latin, and it appears to be a historical or scientific text, possibly discussing the movement of celestial bodies or the structure of the solar system. The text is written in a script that is characteristic of the Renaissance or Baroque period, with ornate and decorative lettering.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of the art and illustration techniques used in the Renaissance and Baroque periods, with a focus on detailed and intricate designs. The use of color and shading adds to the visual complexity of the scene, making it a captivating piece of art.

The text is written in English and is divided into two columns, with the left column containing the title and the right column containing the body of the text. The text discusses the myth of humanity's creation by the gods, specifically focusing on the conflict among the gods regarding the unrestrained overpopulation of humanity. It mentions that the upper gods initially attempt to control the problem through a global cataclysm, but ultimately decide upon a global cataclysm to address the problem. The text also touches on the concept of the "Anunnaki," a group of ancient extraterrestrial beings, and their role in the conflict.

The text is structured in a narrative style, with a clear beginning, middle, and end, and it is divided into paragraphs, which are separated by indentation. The text is written in a formal and academic tone, with references to ancient texts and the concept of the "Anunnaki." The use of italics and bold typeface for emphasis and emphasis on specific words or phrases adds to the emphasis on the text's subject matter.
The image is a screenshot of the text, and it is a digital representation of the text, not a physical book or physical object. The text is in English, and the image is in a portrait orientation, which is common for digital documents. Just because they say "Sumerian / Babylonian/ Akkadian texts are just a myth! nothing to take literally! Now everyone move along!"
My question is this:
Who says which ancient texts are "biblical" and which are proposed fantasy? Especially when these ancient texts were written thousands of years before anything was written in the Bible?

The image is a digital graphic with a vibrant color scheme. At the top, there is a large, bold text that reads "Can I get uh" in a stylized font, followed by "Can I get uh" in a smaller font. Below this, there is a large, stylized text that reads "uhhhh" in a bold, uppercase font. The text is arranged in a staggered pattern, with "uhhhh" being the most prominent.
In the center of the image, there is a large, stylized text that reads "McChicken Sandwich" in a bold, uppercase font. Below this, there is a smaller text that reads "this is Burger King ma'am" in a bold, uppercase font.
The background of the image is a gradient of yellow and orange hues, transitioning from a darker shade at the top to a lighter shade at the bottom. In the bottom left corner, there is a small, stylized image of a person holding a burger. The person is wearing a red and black striped shirt and a cap.
The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a playful and exaggerated use of text and imagery. The text is arranged in a way that suggests a sense of urgency or frustration, while the image of the person holding a burger adds a light-hearted touch to the overall composition.

The cat's mouth is slightly open, and its tongue is visible, which is pink in color. The background of the image is blurred, but it seems to be a soft, possibly white or light-colored fabric. The image is taken from a low angle, which emphasizes the cat's eyes and the pink tongue. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is candid and appears to be taken in a casual setting, possibly during a playful moment.

The image is a collage of two pages from a book or publication, featuring a variety of geometric patterns and illustrations. On the left page, there are 50 black and white patterns arranged in a grid format, each pattern consisting of a series of interconnected lines or shapes. The patterns vary in size and shape, with some appearing more complex and others simpler. The background of the left page is a solid teal color, providing a stark contrast to the patterns.

The right page is divided into two sections. The upper section is a black and white illustration of a series of interconnected lines or shapes, resembling a string of beads or a twisted rope. The lines are arranged in a way that suggests a continuous flow or a continuous string. The lower section of the right page shows a series of illustrations of different objects, such as a wooden peg, a metal rod, and a small, metallic object with a handle. The objects are depicted in a realistic style, with detailed textures and shadows.
The overall style of the image is reminiscent of early 20th-century scientific illustrations, often used to illustrate the principles of physics or engineering. The use of geometric shapes and patterns suggests a focus on the properties of lines and shapes in various contexts, possibly related to physics or engineering.

Opinion is only used in pushing an ideology. Logic is used to establish reality and consensus.
I'm also noticing you are constantly using emotional language and rhetoric which weakens your argument fundamentally.

>The fear rests within (You).
Look at this statement. There are numerous ways to interpret what I actually said and you resorted to one that is strictly personal and assumptive. You didn't even attempt to understand the point, and you didn't engage it; you ignored the logical points. This is because you're using a narrative supported by opinion, and the commonality is fear based ideology so all you're capable of discussing is fear.

>"Sumerian / Babylonian/ Akkadian texts are just a myth! nothing to take literally! Now everyone move along!"
Again, this is conflation. I never said this, and obviously I was referring to the transformative nature of thousands of years' time on any inherited text. Sumer and Babylon weren't first order sources for this information.
To be clear, you're pushing a fear based ideology. And whether it's true or not you haven't substantiated it and your opinions don't change that fact.

also theres a greentext on some guy who was doing excavations at the pyramids, and turns out theres some world ending being thats been sealed down there.

according to ancient Sumerian and Babylonian texts, the first race of human slaves that were created for these intense terraforming operations were not able to reproduce.

These were genderless biological beings with a lifespan, created for one task only: work. This resulted in a problem: Too many of them were dying and not enough were being cloned to keep up with the workloads, timetables, and deadlines needed by their masters (Gods) awaiting for their new home to settle down to. It especially didn't help that most of these slaves were becoming self aware of their own grim reality and were committing acts of suicide in droves.
These ancient texts were literally spoke about WHY HUMANITY EXISTS. Too work for an advanced race of beings.
Modification for Reproduction: The ability to reproduce was a later "modification" granted to us, humanity - reportedly without the full consensus of all the gods. We, as humans, are not version 1.0. It's most likely somewhere around version 9 or 10. Here are the modifications that were done to us so far:
>The sense to see waves of polarity within an electromagnetic field (known as magnetoreception) was patched. The Cryptochrome protein (CRY1) responsible for this sense was deactivated in your retinas

Having this ability allowed earlier human versions to see (and therefore) understand what gravity was, and how precise elements, oscillations, and vibrations could manipulate "gravity". This resulted in earlier tribes literally hurling 20 ton blocks of granite at others during disagreements and fights. too much destruction persisted day and night, and this sense was now nerfed, deactivated, and deleted in the future versions forever.

>The ability to live for thousands of years

This was a no brainer. Humans that lived too long simply were obtaining too much experience and knowledge in their long lifespans, and humanity was simply evolving at a faster pace than the slave work that needed to be done. They fear their own creation, and certainly did not want another deadly battle against their own creation (again). Thus, they simply hyper-accelerated our mitochondria in our cells, resulting in a much safer, a more controllable 80 year lifespan.

>Unity
Read: The Tower of Babel. A unified humanity tried to build a tower to reach heaven, prompting the gods to create different races, confuse our speech, and scattered us across the Earth. The gods knew that a united race is a powerful race, and would be much too difficult to exploit and control.

Here comes Nikola Tesla's power of 3, the key to understanding the universe:

Divide and Conquer: Every race of every tribe of every human today comes from a mix of 3 primary races: Caucasoid, Mongoloid, and Negroid. If you're having trouble understanding this, perhaps you should also note: Every visible color our human eyes can perceive comes from 3 primary colors (RGB)Red, Green, and Blue. We live in a trinity. The Holy Bible will say we live in The Holy Trinity - that God exists as one being in three co-eternal, co-equal persons: God the Father (Creator), God the Son (Jesus Christ, Redeemer), and God the Holy Spirit (Sanctifier, Comforter). "It's a mystery beyond full human comprehension" the bible says. Allow me to make this Trinity make actual logical sense. We live within a field of energy with 3 primary states: Positive, Negative, and Neutral. Every form of energy around us comes from these 3 primary states.
More powers of 3 In Science & Chemistry:
>The three main particles of an atom are Protons, Neutrons, and Electrons.
>3 primary states of matter: Liquid, Solid, or Gas
>Most Abundant in Universe: Hydrogen, Helium, Oxygen
>Periodic Table Classes: Metals, Nonmetals, Metalloids >Building Blocks of Life: Carbon, Hydrogen, Oxygen (CHON)

It's a story that's been rehashed countless times by countless people; and to be clear, it's always been a fear-based ideology. You're not providing any unique insight nor are you dissuading the central ideological themes.
Why are you denying this is a fear-based ideology when it's obviously a fear based ideology?

Everything you're saying is pure speculation and if you're choosing to speculate entirely within the framework of using fear to uphold ideological absolutes, you're quite literally pushing a fear based ideology. The actual basis for proving anything you're saying being true is emotional, not logical.

It's not your research. You keep saying it's your opinion but it's more truthful to say it's someone else's opinion that you are repeating; hence it being an ideology. It's not derived from first order observations, it's not derived from logic, it's derived from ingesting an existing narrative and not applying any kind of logical reduction or analysis.

There is absolutely no reason to assume a narrative is true if you don't have first order observational evidence, whether historical, contextual, biological or genetic. By failing to apply critical thinking to a narrative, you end up pushing an ideology blindly. This isn't usually a huge problem, but the problems emerge when that ideology's sole function and sole derivation revolves around fear.

The problem with fear based ideology is that it doesn't allow other interpretations, it is emotional, and it can only be sustained by ideologues. Logical analysis always disproves these kinds of ideologies; hence why you are now paragraphs into this conversation and you have made no attempt at using logic to prove any of these ideological tenets as actually being true.

Below the title, there is a paragraph explaining the concept of magnetic reception in animals. The paragraph mentions that animals like birds, salmon, and honey bees have developed mechanisms to sense and use the Earth's magnetic field for purposes such as long-distance migration and foraging. It also mentions that while the exact mechanisms are still being researched, scientists hypothesize that tiny magnetic particles within their bodies or light-dependent chemical reactions involving proteins like cryptochrome may be involved in this process.
The image is divided into two sections. On the left, there is a large graphic with a blue background and a white border. The graphic features illustrations of various animals, including a bird, a fish, and a turtle, all of which are depicted with their heads turned to the right. Nowhere in your link does it suggest it was deactivated by an advanced race of beings (our creators) to keep us under control. Again, this is my belief according to my own research.
I find it interesting that many animals have this sense of magnetoreception for navigation, but us humans no longer have it. Our media suggests that during our evolution, it was deemed a useless sense and faded away through our natural evolutionary process.
I disagree here.

Fear kills the mind's logical faculties as a biological fact. I diagnosed your "opinions" as a fear based ideology. The only way you can approach this conversation is by framing it as people being too afraid to read what you type, which is exactly what someone who is a fearful ideologue would say. It is not logical and external, it's emotional and internal. We both know this. That's why you're comfortable behaving more and more bombastically and irrationally. We both know you're terrified by the unknown and derive safety from repeatedly dying on a hill of belief.

Someone who lets fear dominate their rational mind will resort to any behavior to protect their fantasy. If you had a defense against my assertion that your ideology is fear-based, you'd have given it.

Instead of addressing the obvious contention you're continually restating that this is your "opinion." Yes, we understand that; and it being your opinion doesn't preclude it from being dead on arrival under the simplest degree of scrutiny.

If your opinion fails, there is a reason why it failed that logic can discern. That reason is because it's based on fear.

The image is a digital representation of an ancient Egyptian wall painting. It features a scene with two figures, one in a blue robe and the other in a red robe, both holding objects that appear to be tablets or scrolls. The blue-robed figure is positioned on the left side of the painting, while the red-robed figure is on the right. Above them, there is a depiction of a building with a pointed roof and a large eye, which is a common symbol in Egyptian art. The painting is framed by a brown border with hieroglyphs and a red border with a pattern that resembles a stylized eye. The style of the painting is reminiscent of ancient Egyptian art, characterized by its use of geometric patterns and the depiction of deities and figures.

The image is a digital illustration that appears to be a part of a larger artwork or a digital representation of an ancient Egyptian scene. The scene is divided into two panels, each with a different color scheme and style.
On the left panel, there is a red background with a central panel that features a figure with a red headdress and a red robe. This figure is standing on a platform with a red base, and there are two smaller figures to the left of the central figure, both wearing red headdresses and red robes. The left panel also includes a series of hieroglyphs and symbols, which are typically used in ancient Egyptian writing.
The right panel has a beige background with a central panel that depicts a figure with a red headdress and a red robe. This figure is seated on a throne with a red base, and there are two smaller figures to the right of the central figure, both wearing red headdresses and red robes. The right panel also includes a series of hieroglyphs and symbols, similar to the left panel.
In the top right corner of the right panel, there is a green arrow pointing upwards, and in the bottom right corner, there is a blue arrow pointing downwards. These arrows are likely used to indicate the direction of the scene or the flow of the narrative.
The style of the image is reminiscent of ancient Egyptian art, with its use of red and gold colors, and the hieroglyphs and symbols are consistent with the script used in ancient Egyptian writing. The overall composition and style of the image suggest it is a part of a larger artwork or a digital representation of an ancient Egyptian scene.

Anothet scientist assassinated Shot dead in his home.
Doesn't look like the type to harbor bad company.
Highly suspicious.
Kond of like the Boeing lack of Safety whistle blowers, John Barnett and Josh Dean, who are assassinated. Remember doors blowing off and the 737 Max software crashes because Boeing-outsourced jeets coded shittty software, and jeet pilots didn't actually know how to fly the planes? And still don't? (Dreamliner fuel cutoff crash - only Dreamliner crash EVER)

Is it freemasonry?
Crony capitalism?
Satanic cabal?
Deep state shadow government cover-up?
What is the proof?

The left column begins with a statement that discusses the concept of plasma ships, which are described as the next technological level. It mentions that plasma ships use raw plasma as their fuel and source of energy, and they can travel at speeds of up to 100,000 km/h. The text then goes on to explain that plasma ships can be harnessed in the material plane, offering a new dimension for their use.
The right column begins with a statement about the use of plasma ships in various applications, such as for propulsion, applications in space, and even for the transportation of goods. It mentions that plasma ships can be used in many ways, including for several purposes like propulsion, applications in space, and even for the transportation of goods.

The text is dense with information, and the paragraphs are separated by blank lines, which are not filled in in the image. The text is written in a formal and technical style, with references to scientific terms and concepts. The font size is relatively small, and the text is in a serif font, which is common for academic or technical documents. The overall style of the image is informative and academic, designed to convey information about plasma ships and their applications.

Yeah people are jumping to the wrong conclusions in classic /x/ fashion however fusion is clearly a scientific arms race of epic proportions that could guarantee the energy potential of nation states or corporations or whatever for years to come. Also there's probably more weapon implications than just hydrogen bombs. The Chinese have been making advances at a breakneck pace so the US has to step up. People talk a ton about AIs potential but IMO its mostly hype. Fusion and plasma research have been studied for years and although experts say we are no where near having fusion all over the place, it's potential is extremely clear and isn't just a solution looking for a problem.

IMO Manhattan projects are afoot.

It's just raw speculation on my part but as a science nerd and former scientist (biology) now I'm just a regular clinical application schmuck) there has been lots of hot news over fusion breakthrough recently. I don't know much about plasma but I know fusion makes plasma and I'm wondering wondering if there are other (non-magical) applications of plasma other than just making energy? That's where my mind goes to having read what I have with the latest breakthroughs. It's a unique state of matter like super cooled stuff and we know we can compute really well when things are super cold, so I'm guessing another unique state of matter being harnessed could lead to all sorts of applications.

Obviously fusion for energy is the "holy grail" but along that quest I'm sure people can discover all kinds of crazy unrelated stuff that can also change the world.

Gnostics will tell you it is the information that gives you salvation, but it is faith. God is the fountain of life, and through sin we distance ourselves from it. Thats why everyone nowadays has so little personality and is slowly dying inside.

So for about 1,5 years ive been looking into christianity now because my brain is a sponge for information.
I decided to try it, mainly because i saw the faith others have that are way smarter than I.
I grasped the theology, atleast on the surface. Though I was struggling with sin, because I had doubts since i used to be a nihilistic atheist and then an agnostic. These doubts are like a door, letting sin in. Telling me things like "youre going schitzo, God doesnt exist, live out hedonism".

So after 1,5 years and lots of research i I had enough information to say "i believe this now". I closed the door.

This didnt seem too significant while I thought it. More like another grasping at straws to get rid of my pornography addiction etc.

But about 30seconds later, something inside me shifted. It was like a knot that i didnt know existed was untied. My whole perception both of myself and things around me went back to the level of when i was a kid (in a good way). I was myself again and nomore a slave to sin.

I got:
Clear awareness of myself
Nomore self hate
Desire to sin is at 2%.
My hands stopped shaking.
I can visualize things in my head again as i used to.
My memory got better.
And much more due to the forgiveness of my sins through faith, reconnecting me to the fountain of life and restoring me to my true self.
This post probably wont convince you to become a christian, but maybe it closes your door just 1cm. And when youre ready to take the leap of faith and close the door, truly believe in christ and his gospel, your sins will be forgiven and you will be born anew. Christ promised you that and I confess it to you today. Glory be to our Lord and his grace.

Faith is trust in the goodness of God that rests on knowledge of the truth of Christ.

Sorry for that, it wasnt even necessarily aimed at gnostics themselves, but rather at people that jump from one spirituality to the next hoping to find the information that works for them personally. I myself checked out many of these but none truly in depth, which is probably why I gave a bad interpretation / view of gnosticism.

The image displays a text document with a dark background and white text. The document appears to be a part of a larger document, possibly a book or a research paper, as indicated by the presence of multiple references and citations. The text is written in English and is formatted in a standard academic style, with paragraphs and indented lines.
The document contains a series of numbered paragraphs, which are likely part of a larger discussion or argument. The numbering suggests that the text is organized in a logical sequence, likely following a logical flow of thought or a logical argument.
The text is dense with information, and the content seems to be discussing a topic related to the field of philosophy or a similar discipline. The references to other works, such as "Bertrand Russell," "Bertrand Russell," and "Bertrand Russell," indicate that the text is likely discussing philosophical concepts or theories.
The text is not fully visible in the image, but the visible parts show a discussion of ideas and concepts, with references to other works and arguments. The text is dense and includes complex sentences and phrases, which suggests that the document is a scholarly or academic work.
The image does not provide any additional context or information beyond the visible text, so it is not possible to determine the exact topic or the author's intent from the image alone. The image only shows the text and does not provide any visual clues about the content or the context of the discussion.

Jesus Christ is God who has come in the flesh from heaven. He died as a sinless sacrifice for the sins of the whole world to save you from eternal hell, the punishment for your sin. He was buried, then resurrected and then ascended to heaven. John 3:16: “For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.” John 10:28: "And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." Rom 10:9: “That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."
God wants to forgive you, but you have a choice: Do you choose the righteousness of God by receiving Christ? Your own righteousness can NEVER justify you or keep you saved because of your sin. Rom 5:9: “Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him.” Salvation is by grace through faith in Jesus Christ, in His finished blood atonement. The gift of salvation can't be earned. Confess The Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in prayer, that you trust in Him and believe He atoned for your sins on the cross.

Eph. 2:8-9: “For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast.”

I worked in a church for 14 years and watched some of the most despicable people I have ever met praise his name on a daily basis while using only his words useful to them as cudgels against those they hate while steadfastly ignoring everything else.

Reminder there is no such thing as a rich Christian. Anyone claiming to be Christian with a big house, jewlery and fancy cars is not Christian by the words of Christ himself. Look around and you will see that describes the overwhelming majority of those who claim to be. Which is why, if he were a real and divine entity, he would either be able to impart his divine wisdom on his supposedly devouted followers, or stop them from using his name to commit acts of selfishness and evil.

Luke 14:33 - In the same way, any one of you who does not give up everything he has cannot be My disciple.
Luke 16:13 - “No one can serve two masters. Either you will hate the one and love the other, or you will be devoted to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve both God and money.”
Matthew 19-21 - Jesus said to him, “If you would be perfect, go, sell what you possess and give to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven; and come, follow me.”
Luke 18-22 - When Jesus heard this, he said to him, “One thing you still lack. Sell all that you have and distribute to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven; and come, follow me.”
Mark 10:22 - And Jesus, looking at him, loved him, and said to him, “You lack one thing: go, sell all that you have and give to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven; and come, follow me.” 22 Disheartened by the saying, he went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions.

Last night I had a nightmare mixed to sleep paralysis. My whole body was shivering and I saw a succubus or a demon (female aspect). I Started to visualize a white glowing beam from above, passing through me. Started to shout the name of Jesus Christ at the demon and other holy messages that I can't recall because too fast and half asleep. Right hand gesturing the cross in the room. Demon goes back and I awake feeling numb but fearless.

Don't know if it was an hallucination caused by sleep paralysis, a nightmare, a real demon attack or if the Christ was actually here to defend me and call me back to him again. I still can't pray anymore though.

The answer to this depends heavily on the denomination you are in. As i personally understand there are two types of judgements.
One judgement for the sheep, and one for the goats. The sheep are the belivers, their judgement decides their reward for their actions, which were made pure by the blood of christ. The judgement of the goats, those not saved by christ for whatever reason, determines their punishment.
>Why would Jesus need to die if you need a religion out of the salvation act?
Tbh i dont quite get the question. He had to die to make our salvation just. If a judge just forgives your 500€ debt it wouldnt be just. But if he payed the 500€ himself justice would be served.
>Why is a bible needed.
Its not needed in itself for your salvation. But it is needed to conserve the truth of the gospel, so that people even 2000years after can be saved.
If i went past one of your questions please clarify, but I would note that this is not specifically a theological question for me because I have witnessed its incredible transformative work first hand. If there is anything I cannot answer or understand it wouldnt mean for me personally that it disqualifies the religion as a whole.

Christianity is the religion of cucks and weak fags. The truth is, you have no savior and you need to take responsibility for your own actions and man up. Blindly worshipping a Jew who died in the most hilarious and pathetic way, on a stick, by some Jews, ain't it. At least if you wanna worship something, worship a strong deity. One that is known for their unmatched strength, wisdom and power. Not a skinny Jew who couldn't even protect himself from other 5'5 brown Jews.

It probably would have been better to look within yourself for why your girlfriend broke up with you. That happens all the time, most people do not end up with the first person they get into a relationship with, it's a growth process. Either you need to grow, she needs to grow, or more likely both of you do and despite liking each other a lot at one point in your lives you were not ultimately a good match. That's how you learn. I've been with my wife over 15 years now, but meeting her was a hard long process and had I not worked on myself before that we may not have clicked.

Depression is your body's way of telling you something is off and you need to reassess and find another strategy.

You seem to fall into the same trap i used to when I just started out. Having my own objections without doing research and thinking these disqualify the religion. For 2000 years christianity is one of if not the most thought about topic in peoples lives, if you think you know better than everyone because you think you found some basic level logic flaw you are misstaken.

Being saved is a gift by God, but since we are made in his image (with free will) we have to accept this gift. If we turn away from God he will let us because he does not impede on our free will, otherwise it wouldnt be free. If you love sin you hate God, and you cannot pay for your debt of sin with any amount of good deeds. You need him to take on the wrath for your sins, which came upon him on the cross, so that you can be forgiven and justice be served. He will free you from the debt of sin and being a slave to it after accepting him.

Mercy is a gift, dont be too pridefull to accept it. There is a reason christians rather let isis behead them than apostasize, because we know the truth and will pay any price for it.

theres some decent information in there, the problem is, youre operating from the conclusion you know what god is, and you dont. so all youre doing is following social engineering jews wrote for you that they popularized through the usury gained from your ancestors enslavement.

if the truth were jesus christ, there wouldnt have been 1500 years of dark ages in europe.
all jews did was plagiarize the greeks ans other mediterranean cultures, but cant even move the needle without them, because they have no conception of god that they didnt read in books, so all they can offer is an artificial imposter which they believe to be god, which is not, and seek to make it into god. its why you people have been stuck on epicurus this entire time. archimedes handed you geometry on a silver platter and it took 1500 years for MUSLIMS (not even you) to discover algebra. you have ruined europe, you continue to ruin europe. everywhere christianity goes, jews follow, godslessness abounds.

the unholiest 'pagan' is holier than the holiest christian. learn about redbad or the nobles who charlemagne killed. that is holyness. it is knowing your creators and refusing to put your own life ahead of them. you are the descendants of people who can be made to put yourself before your gods, which is why you are praying to eternal silence.

also, the term "gnostic" was applied ironically, since theyre anything but

The image is a black and white photograph of a statue of a male figure, possibly a historical figure, with a profile view. The statue appears to be made of marble or a similar material, and it has a classical style with a draped headpiece and a draped shoulder. The statue's face is turned slightly to the left, and it is facing the camera. The background is blurred, but it seems to be an outdoor setting with a building or structure that resembles a temple or a historical monument.
The text is overlaid on the image, and it is written in a language that appears to be Latin or a similar script. The text is in a serif font and is arranged in a block format, which is common for digital texts. The text is not fully legible due to the resolution of the image, but it seems to be a narrative or commentary on the statue, possibly discussing its historical significance or the moral implications of its actions.
The image is tagged with a number "51012" and a date "2020/07/22" in the top left corner, indicating that it was uploaded to a social media platform or a similar platform on July 22, 2020. The image also has a watermark that reads "Contestabot.io," which suggests that the image may have been created or shared through a contest or competition.
The overall style of the image is informative and seems to be used for educational or historical purposes, possibly to provide context or commentary on the statue's story or significance.

hes right you know. but not in the boomer sense, but to the gods. your life is under 24/7 observation. youve done things in your life which are shameful to yourself and shameful to the gods. and until youre willing to come to terms with that and make amends with them for dishonoring them, then you will outcasted. forced to use petty jewish tricks just to get through the day without actually doing that.

why do men go mad in solitary confinement? this is why. because it forces them to think about their shortcomings and wrongs and confront them when they otherwise do not have the physical or spiritual willpower/capability to do it themselves because theyve been getting through reliant on a jewish sleight of hand thats utterly meaningless in the end, but works for getting you to ignore what you must do. confessing your problems to another human is your way of avoiding confessing to yourself, and the gods who are observing you.

some crimes cannot be forgiven, and nothing you can do in this life can ever reconcile them, that is the truth. that is the way. but you can atleast avoid the wrath of the gods and try anyway. a little effort goes a long way.

everyone has skill checks in life. its up to you pass them. falling in line with npcs and jews is not a pass, its a fail. you should be happy to die, to be able to leave this place having achieved what you were meant to do, and not worry in the pit of your soul youre coming back here, or going someplace worse.

you dont learn about the gods from books, nor from other men. you learn about them from yourself. the gods are a memory, you have amnesia, its merely a question of remembering them. theres no one size fits all slop, as nice as that would be. the general purpose of creation isnt what plato imagined it to be in his republic which jews later capitalized on, to save all souls. its the very opposite. its to distinguish and identify which souls are worth saving. not everyone even has a soul.

The image is a photograph of a text-based article or news headline. The headline reads "2 Jewish philanthropists pledge $134 million toward restoring Notre Dame," indicating a donation made by two Jewish philanthropists to restore the Notre Dame cathedral. The text below the headline provides additional information about the contributors, stating that the contributions were made by Lily Safra and French billionaire owner of L'Oreal, Françoise Bettencourt Meyers, with a contribution account for 17% of overall donations. The text is presented in a simple, straightforward style, with the headline and supporting text in a larger font size than the rest of the text, which is in a smaller font size. The background of the image is white, and the text is black, making the headline and supporting text stand out clearly. The image is a screenshot from a digital publication or news website, as indicated by the watermark or logo at the bottom of the image.

The image is a screenshot of a text message conversation. The conversation is between two individuals, one named "Anonymous" and the other named "Dog." The conversation is about a person named "Dog" who is described as having a "pure monogamous impulse." The text mentions that "They are incapable of changing their minds." The conversation also discusses the concept of monogamy, with the text stating that "They see a cat. They chase it." The conversation ends with a statement about the difference between cats and dogs, stating that "cats are monogamous, and dogs are not." The text is in a language that appears to be English, and the conversation is in a format that resembles a Reddit post, with a header and a footer. The text is in a dark color, and the background is a light pink.

The image is a screenshot of a text, likely from a Bible verse or a religious text, presented in a dark background with white text. The text is divided into three sections, each with a different heading and a corresponding paragraph.
The first section, labeled "1. Matthew 10:34-37," begins with the phrase "Do not think that I came to bring peace on the earth. I did not come to bring peace, but a sword." This section seems to be a commentary on the text that follows, as it is followed by a second section with the heading "2. Luke 14:26," which reads "If anyone comes to Me and does not hate his own father and mother and wife and children and brothers and sisters, yes, and even his own life, he cannot be My disciple."
The third section, labeled "3. Matthew 8:21-22," begins with the phrase "Another of the disciples said to Him, 'Lord, Lord, permit me first to go and bury my father.'" This section seems to be a continuation of the previous one, with the text following the same structure as the first section.
The style of the image is textual, with the text appearing to be printed in a standard font, and the layout is straightforward, with each section clearly separated from the others. The text is in English, and the image does not contain any additional graphics or images. The focus is solely on the text, and the image does not provide any additional context or information beyond the text itself.

At the bottom of the image, there is a text overlay that reads: "Shakti (your manifest reality) is the Dom." Below this, there is another line of text that says: "Shiva (your pure consciousness) is the awareness sub." The text is in white, contrasting with the red background. The overall style of the image is vibrant and symbolic, with a focus on the spiritual and mythological themes associated with Hinduism.

I hate going on dates Anonymous Wed 17 Dec 2025 07:58:18 No.41680831
ViewReplyOriginalReport
Been practicing tantra for a year and a half now and there's been quite some progress. Am able to flow pretty well ok with the tao or the dance of shiva/shakti, to the point that as a Jeet I get dates now on free tiers of dating apps in Toronto

So yeah dating isn't a problem anymore, that is, not the same problem it used to be.

But the experience has been like debugging software through inner alchemy/tantra and finding new bugs

The latest bug is I can't help but noticing that all of my dates in this past year have led to personal realizations in the people I've gone on dates with respect to their own inner universe. I'll say some shit that imho was "the right action" and bam they get a realization about their life or goals and then it turns out that this was the first and final date. Unexpectedly handing out free spiritual realizations while I'm paying for the dates is just a pain in the ass and yeah I understand that this is also an attachment to deal with. Or maybe it's karmic debts. Who knows

So I debugged that. Go to events. Touch grass. Do things out in the aether. Meet people irl

Well, meeting women IRL has improved dating prospects vastly but it's almost always women who manifest in situations I couldn't cook up in my imagination where they want me to initiate them in tantra while also dating, which creates a fucked up power dynamic if you go along with it

I wanna spread the dharma without becoming osho but the osho path is the easiest path to pussy

Mara is a crafty piece of shit

what do anon

[20 / 6]The image is a digital illustration featuring a stylized representation of a person's face. The person's head is tilted to the side, with the hair styled in a manner that appears to be a mohawk or a similar hairstyle. The hair is a mix of brown and blonde tones, and it is combed to the side, giving it a textured appearance. The person's eyes are not visible, and the expression on their face is neutral, with a slight frown.

The background of the image is a solid orange color, which contrasts with the person's hair and the yellow emoji face. The emoji face is a simple, stylized representation of a face with two large, black eyes and a small, black mouth. The emoji is set against the orange background, which is slightly blurred, drawing the viewer's attention to the person's face.

There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is modern and playful, with a focus on the person's hairstyle and the emoji face. The overall composition is simple and direct, with the focus being on the person's hairstyle and the emoji face.

Second of all, the vast majority of people do not give any serious thought to global pedophilia cabals or ending forever wars. But what I don't understand is what this has to do with the "Karen" deal. Sounds like you just hate White women and want an excuse to blame them for the world's situation.

The image is a high-angle photograph capturing a large gathering of people in an urban setting. The crowd is densely packed, with individuals standing close together, suggesting a protest or demonstration. The majority of the crowd is wearing casual clothing, and many are carrying signs and banners. The signs are predominantly white with black text, and the most prominent one reads "OCCUPY WALL ST." The text is bold and clear, indicating the message of the protest.
The crowd is moving in a direction that suggests they are heading towards a specific point of interest, as indicated by the direction of the crowd's movement. The background of the image shows a mix of urban elements, including trees, buildings, and a few tents or stalls. The sky is clear, and the lighting suggests it is daytime. The overall atmosphere of the image conveys a sense of unity and purpose among the protesters.

The image is a colorful illustration with a playful and whimsical style. At the top, there is a text that reads "Nobody puts a baby in a pink or blue corner!" in bold, yellow letters. Below this, the title "BYE BYE, BINARY" is written in a larger, bold, yellow font. The author's name, "Written by Eric Geroon," is displayed in a smaller, white font. The illustrator's name, "Illustrated by Charlene Chu," is also in white and is positioned below the author's name.
The central figure of the image is a baby with a large, expressive face, wearing a green striped shirt. The baby has dark hair and is smiling, with its arms outstretched as if welcoming someone. The background of the illustration is divided into two sections, with the left side featuring a pink background and the right side displaying a blue background. The baby is positioned in the center of the image, with the pink background to the left and the blue background to the right.

The overall style of the image is bright and cheerful, with a focus on the baby's welcoming expression. The use of bold colors and the playful text contribute to a sense of fun and whimsy.

Below the title, there are several sections of text, each with a title and a list of steps or techniques. The text is in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-Latin script, possibly a non-English language. The style of the image is reminiscent of a digital art piece, possibly a game interface or a guide for a game. The overall tone of the image is dramatic and intense, with the fiery background and the text suggesting a theme of spiritual or metaphysical exploration.

Fun game, let us try it ....

>give low-skill to others (high IQ) >strong mind reading, being invisible >create small illusions, high IQ, temporarily disable emotions and pain

The IQ increase in others is a force multiplier. Mindreading prevents your creatins from scheming against you. Invisibility plus illusion is just too fun of a prank to miss out on ... and with mind reading it can be truly abused for full effect. The rest is probably to get out of hairy situations and sharpen clarity even more. ^^

My issue about the mind reading would be with relationships. Imagine you have a gf, would you tell her that you can read her mind any time? If you do, she might have problems to trust you when she says "don't read my mind without asking me first, ok?" and you say "ok". Will she believe that? Will you keep the rule? And if you don't tell her, that's basically lying to her constantly.

Good roleplaying opportunity! Yes, I would build that character with a strict red line on mind reading. Ofc there is from another´s perspective no safety that trust could not be abused, acknowledged. But in a way it is the same issue of trusting your spouse with a kitchen knife, knowing he is - let´s say - some dangerous killer in his field of work. It would best to be open about the ability here, even if it could backfire with mistrust. I dunno how the Give High IQ ability would act here ... intelligence could equally result in suspicion. You could ofc lie and stick to your "honor codex" here. It would be doable (why would you even want to know the thoughts of one you love ... unless they are shared openly) but it would lead to a double life. One day she might get very upset because you stabbed the postman (who was really a disguised trained assassin, the intent was written all over his thoughts) ...

It's a fun exercise in imagination, let's go:
High skill:
>Bind spirits/souls in objects

Medium:
>Mental shield against telepathy
>Exorcise ghosts and curses
Low:
>Perfect memory
>160 IQ
>Artistic talent on master level (blacksmith)
So I'll be this blacksmith-exorcist guy. Extra mental toughness and intelligence because of my chosen traits, so I can travel the world, exorcise demons and then force them into items giving them various magical properties, for sale (got to make a living somehow) or for my personal use. There is no handicap on physical properties so I'll get pretty jacked beating both demons and metal in the forge. Imagine this towering bodybuilder/paladin type of guy waltzing into some haunted castle, cleansing it of the corruption, and then forcing the banshees to live imprisoned inside his enchanted cock ring (+5 to stamina in bed, made the ring himself)

>Bind spirits/souls in objects
I was thinking about that one. It's basically the only skill that can really threaten a force ghost, even if he has mental shield against mind control, because a ghost can be bound into an object and then he stuck there.
Like, if the object is a doll, how would that be for the force ghost? Could he still appear to people? If we take it literally that he is bound "in the object" that would mean he can't appear outside of it any more. His powers would be reduced to audio, he could only talk with people as a telepathic ghost voice (coming from the doll).
Another question is: when he is bound to the doll it becomes his body, kind of, so would he be able then to move the doll? The description of force ghost says clearly that he can't interact with the physical world, but when he's magically bound to a doll that's a special situation.
I would go for a middle way: he can move the doll, but only a bit. Like, the doll can turn it's head, and move arms and legs, but it can't run around. Maybe it could crawl slowly to move to another place. Would be a classical haunted doll then.

The whole premise of the game implies there is tangible paranormal phenomena happening (ghosts, curses, magic etc.) and [mental shield] cuts off almost any fuckery that can be done to you such as mind reading, so it's a must pick.

But because of the mention of cameras, I guess the setting is in moder or at least recent times. So the mental shield and camera in your phone negates even the [creation of big illusions]. So the binding of spirits in objects is also the best pick, because there is no theoretical limit of what it can do. Can you transfer your own soul into a phylactety and become a Lich? That would give you force ghost level of immortality, but without all the cons of being non-corporeal.

Interesting thought experiment...

1 High Skill:
Give a low skill to other people (with consent)

2 Medium Skills:
Strong mind reading (no consent required).
Make people hear voices.

3 Low Skills:

Perfect memory
Create illusions
Master-level artistic talent

My master-level artistic talent will be story-writing and poetry.

I would go around university campuses and other places of learning, collecting the contact information of interesting people with interesting birth charts. I would uncover their latent talents, and supercharge them by enhancing their intelligence or artistic abilities whilst simultaneously getting them to worship or fall in love with me with the synergy of illusion, mind-reading, flowery language, and voices telling them to follow me.

I would quickly collect a cabal of loyal 160-IQ scientists, master artists, and low-level psychics. These would be my apostles.

And through them, I would forever change the world. Perhaps we would uncover the secrets of the universe. Perhaps I would become the next Jesus Christ. Or take power in my country. Who knows.

Throat singing is tremendously powerful. Not only does it stabilize your breathing into long sustained exhales, when you get better at it, you can keep toned going similarly to how you play a bagpipe and minimize gaps in long chains of notes. It also forces you to engage in diaphragm breathing.
Singing at night or whistling at night attracts the attention of spirits. Particularly if you aren't totally sober.
The craziest shit I've ever seen in my life was after eating a single mushroom deep in the remote woods, camping during a time of deep grief. I was alone by the river with no lights when I began throat singing. Deep blue ghost lights the color of oxygen: like aether blue. They pulled at me from across the river, beckoning my attention, which I did not fully provide. The way they illuminated the dark forest was wholly unnatural and the side of the river they appeared on doesn't have road access for over 60 miles. On a very steep river gulch slope. My sober friends also saw them.
I'm telling you that throat singing is incredibly powerful. It rings a very loud bell for spirits.

Whistle if you like, but throat singing is very powerful. These beings are less made of stuff than we are, but living and real. They "materialize" where air is dense and slow moving and humid. I.e. cold canyon on a warm evening will always work better than say a windy desert

What an absolutely phenomenal story. Could you feel it when it hit you?

The character is standing in front of a large, fiery, orange-red background that suggests a setting sun or a fiery explosion. The background is detailed with swirling patterns and a fiery glow, giving the impression of a dramatic, dramatic scene.

In the background, there are two large, dark, winged creatures that resemble dragons. They are depicted with sharp, pointed wings and sharp, clawed feet. The dragons are facing the character, and their wings are spread wide, as if they are either attacking or defending.

The overall color palette of the image is dominated by deep reds, oranges, and blacks, with the fiery background providing a stark contrast. The character's dark attire and the fiery background create a sense of drama and intensity. The image does not contain any discernible text.

Truly loving free love (Sex with who ever no jealousy) instead of marriage in Heaven?
Anonymous Wed 17 Dec 2025 08:59:37 No.41680995 ViewReplyOriginalReport
Quoted By: >>41681168
My succubus said I refused heavenly sex and so did she so I got reincarnated to be married to her eternally. She said it is truly loving free love with no marriage in Heaven before. She said both of us refused sex and love with other people than each other. As in complete love that includes sexuality. She said complete love includes Eros love, which is erotic love. She said in Heaven men pleasure women together with out touching each other, like spit roasting them. I find the concept of sharing a woman in a loving way not for me. Sharing a woman in a loving or non loving way isn't for me.

She said there is no marriage in Heaven before and I picked my succubus over Heaven in a past life so God reincarnated me to be on the earth with my succubus, reincarnating every so often if I died.

She said before God uses the Bible as a very strong guidebook basically but reincarnates people that are not lake of fire worthy because God isn't mean. And she said the lake of fire is temporary like Universalists believe.

There's a scripture where Jesus says a woman who had 7 husbands because she kept remarrying after her first husband died, will be like the angels of Heave "in the ressurection they will neither be given in marriage or marry but like the angels of heaven"

Because my succubus has told shifting stories, I don't believe much of what she has said any more. She said has told me she does it because I'm naturally gullible to teach me to be more discerning. She's went "Yeah I lied bout that, you need to verify things with proof" and she has called it "Sin Eating" Where she sins to teach me.

I'm trying to figure out if she told me any facts.

there are no such thing as succubi, only lust spirits. spirits are archetypal disembodied thingies that correspond to core areas of YOU the observer. anger might be one, lust is a big one. the simply mould to whatever head canon you come up with. they have done this in every pagan culture man has invented. its all their own head canon gods and deities based on archetypes that are foundational within the psyche. sorry anon, you're being juked might be more accurate to say spirits are not constrained by identity. the very nature of spirit has some kind of "global" element to it. if it had an identity, you would be able to comprehend it

The image is a digital illustration of a character that resembles a stylized version of the popular internet meme character Pepe the Frog. Pepe is depicted with a green body, large black eyes, and a wide smile. He has a red tongue sticking out, and his mouth is open as if he is about to speak. The character is wearing a blue shirt with a red logo on the left side. Pepe is holding a brown cigar in his right hand, which is resting on his chest. The background of the image is plain white, emphasizing the character. There are no texts present in the image. The style of the image is cartoonish and simplistic, with a focus on the character's facial expression and the objects he is holding.

I've thought about shit like this before. Not sure if you could even get a likable group of /x/philes all together at once, let alone a fun/effective one but this is still a much better thread than most of the other shit we have going on kek Where's the proposed start point, OP? Just gonna caravan it? You got any vehicles (or funds for rentals) lined up or will you need to recruit for that?

You'll need:
>A map of the projected route (preferably with at least some points of interest already identified)
>Rough timeline of travel (obviously leaving room for spontaneous stops/staying longer in a place if interesting)
>How you all intended to manage the car situation
>How you all intend to manage the "where to sleep" situation (hotels? In the car? Everybody staying in the same place for safety in numbers and efficient travel or everybody splitting up according to accomodation preferences?)
>Since not everybody is going to be driving, how cost of gas should be split
Also you should come up with a dollar amount so you can tell people "$x and a ride is what you need to come along". That number should include food, the gas obviously, accomodationa, some discretionary funds, some emergency funds, etc.
Also get together a recommended packing list for gear
Also get together a general manual for opsec and general paranormal responses so you guys don't have a disorganized cluster fuck if you do manage to find some crazy shit

The image is a digital composite of a photograph and text. In the photograph, there is a woman standing in front of a blackboard with mathematical equations written on it. She is wearing a black tank top and has a necklace. Her hair is dark, and she is smiling. The text overlaying the image is in white and orange colors, and it reads: "Meet Sabrina Gonzales Pastrzski at 14, she built an airplane in her garage. at 16, she flew it, at 21, she graduated MIT with a perfect 5.0 GPA. NOW? she's solving mysteries that stomped Einstein. Stephen Hawking cited her research before he died, Jeff Bezos tried to recruit her. she said no." The text is arranged in a way that it appears to be a question, with the woman's name and the text about her being the central focus. The background of the image is black, which contrasts with the white and orange text, making it stand out. The overall style of the image is humorous and seems to be a satirical or humorous take on the story of Sabrina Gonzales Pastrzski.

The image is a humorous meme divided into two sections. The top section is a cartoon illustration featuring six green frog-like characters, each with a different expression and pose. They are gathered around a campfire, with one character holding a guitar and another playing a harmonica. The characters are wearing military-style uniforms and are set against a backdrop of a rocky landscape. The bottom section of the image is a black and white photograph, featuring six men's faces superimposed over their respective portraits. The text above the image reads "Expectation: Reality: MISSING: Jack Hunt, William Sterling, Jack Middleton, Theodore Wether, Gary McIntosh, from left." The style of the image is reminiscent of a satirical or humorous meme, often used to juxtapose the expectations of a situation with the reality of the situation.

That is sex airpistol esp if you’re going interstate, it’s a good thing to have.

Reasons:
If you need a gun but are doing paranormal investigations where you’re breaking and entering, a gun is more illegal or even becomes illegal cuz of crime

Even if not b and e, being in a “sussy place” or “known bad place” with a gun is a “crime”, which in itself is unconstitutional, so should be resisted with any force, but whatever, it means if you pull this thing out when some human is around they’re gonna probably run off, but if you get arrested in a dead mall and are cool to the cops they might freak out and act like fags if they find it, but might just give it back or keep it, and they can be cheap, and also hurt and make something run away. It's a good ideas to have a fun but this is a good way to fill parts of that role if it's impossible or will get you raped to death by black african demihumans in prison-except-for-jews by the justice terrorists.

Don't pretend this might not happen tho >hey there's an air pistol in my 3rd zipper in my backpack >ok, let's see, OMG it's a gun
>it's an air pistol
>Jimmy he's got a A GUN in here
>>it's an air pistol
>why do you have a GUN
>it's an air pistol >you're going to jail for A GUN
>it's an air pistol >you're being charged with A GUN, send him to jail
>it's an air pistol
>you're being released on bail for A GUN >2 weeks later >crime lab says it's an air pistol, charges dropped
Or if it's a woman cop you die hearing "tazer tazer tazer"

Why would that have happened? I agree that it's insanely weird shit that isn't really explainable by them simply being tards. I guess being followed or something like that would explain why they were so far from home in the opposite direction in such an isolated spot.
But what would have been the motivation for doing this? As far as I knew these were some regular guys who had simply been at a basketball game

The image shows a collection of items related to a product named "Nightfox SWIFT." The items are displayed on a white surface against a dark background. On the left, there is a black strap with a silver buckle, which appears to be a part of the product's packaging. Next to the strap, there is a black case with a visible logo and text that reads "Nightfox SWIFT." The case has a clear plastic window on the front, allowing a view of the product inside.
To the right of the case, there is a black remote control with a visible logo and text that reads "Nightfox SWIFT." The remote control has a black strap attached to it. In front of the remote control, there is a black and orange box with a graphic of a head and a gear design. The box has the text "Nightfox SWIFT" and "SLEEPING WITHIN YOUR REACH" on it.
The overall style of the image is a product display, likely for marketing or retail purposes, with a focus on the product itself and its packaging. The lighting in the image is soft, with a red glow in the background, which adds to the overall ambiance of the scene.

The background of the image is filled with a chaotic mix of images and text, including depictions of skulls, flames, and other dark, menacing elements. The overall style of the image suggests a theme of death, destruction, and the afterlife. The text and emblem are the most prominent elements, drawing the viewer's attention to the central message of the design. The use of red and white colors throughout the image creates a strong contrast, making the text and emblem stand out against the dark background.

The image is a stylized, colorful graphic with a predominantly blue and purple color scheme. In the center, there is a close-up of a person's face with a blue background that has a pattern of white dots and lines. The person has a surprised expression with wide eyes and a slightly open mouth. The hair is tousled and appears to be in motion. Overlaying the image is a question mark in white text, which is placed diagonally across the image. The question mark is slightly tilted and appears to be in a playful or humorous tone. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a digital artwork, with a focus on the question mark and the surprised expression of the person.

The image depicts a creature with a predominantly white, ethereal appearance. The creature's head is elongated, with sharp, pointed teeth and a fierce expression. Its eyes are wide open, and its mouth is agape, revealing sharp, white fangs. The creature's skin is smooth and white, with a slight sheen that suggests a high level of luminosity. The creature's hair is also white, flowing in a manner that gives it a ghostly appearance. The background is dark, providing a stark contrast to the creature, which makes it stand out prominently. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of digital art, with a focus on the creature's intricate details and the use of light and shadow to create a sense of depth.

The image is a close-up photograph of a creature's head and upper body. The creature has a wrinkled, textured skin that gives it a somewhat reptilian appearance. It is wearing dark sunglasses with a black frame and a dark tint, and the lenses are not clearly visible. The creature's eyes are not visible, and its mouth is closed.

The background of the image is plain and white, which contrasts with the creature's dark skin and the colorful details of the Monster Energy drink can. The overall style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the creature's features and the details of the energy drink can.

[6 / 4]The image is a screenshot of a text document with a dark background and white text. The document appears to be a slide from a presentation or article, discussing the COVID-19 crisis and its impact on the Fourth Industrial Revolution. The title of the slide is "1. The COVID crisis was a gateway into the Fourth Industrial Revolution." Below the title, there are three bullet points providing information about the crisis and its implications.

The first bullet point states, "The shots were not the endgame, but a threshold ritual – a mass initiation into a new phase of human control." The second bullet point mentions, "Biometric ID, digital passports, contact tracing, surveillance, social credit systems – all quietly advanced under the banner of health." The third bullet point states, "2030 is their declared target for: Merging humans with AI Digitizing identity and behavior Redefining what it means to be human The jab wasn't just medicine – it was the first sacrament of a new digital religion."

The text is in English and is presented in a formal and academic style, suggesting that the document is likely from a professional or academic context. The slide is designed to be informative and to convey the significance of the COVID-19 crisis in relation to the Fourth Industrial Revolution.

The internet is proof that we are able to build an artificial consciousness. All data and all memories are shared in the cloud. Any machine connected to this cloud is able to fetch whatever data whenever it wants from it.
Through this cloud we can also remotely communicate. We are only restricted by the speed we type our messages in, but the machines send this info to the receiver almost instantaneously.
Internet of Things is the collective unconscious of the machines. The machines are able to interact with each other without the need for an external command prompt (i.e. a human telling the machine to notice another machine or transmit data to it). Botnet might sound like a familiar concept.
The transhumanists are building this same collective unconscious for humans - the Internet of Bodies. The usual suspects are to blame.

"Covid" was the catalyst for the IoB. It was all planned from the get-go and the vaccine was always the reason for this event. The vaccine is known to contain nanographeneoxide (NGO), which is able to interact with electromagnetic fields (EMF). Just type those two words into Scholar and you'll find quite a lot of papers about it.
Remember when the 5G and microchip "conspiracies" first surfaced? It was the earlier days of the pandemic, before April 2020 iirc. This is all planned by them. They want to ridicule the whole concept with over blown lies (i.e. there is an physical chip in the vaxx, 5G causes covid etc.) in order to discredit the whole premise. But there is also a pinch of truth in every lie.
The NGO is the chip which can be manipulated with correct 5G frequencies. Reddits favorite - Elon Musk - is building the 5G satellite network, which will cover the entirety of the world, no blind spots. The bi-yearly boosters are to ensure that you don't get overblown effects by too much NGO injected in a short span. It needs to settle to different organs, but most importantly the brain.

The image is a comic strip featuring a character named "Light Brains" who is discussing the concept of uploading one's brain structure to the servers. The character is shown in a surprised and confused state, with a surprised expression on his face and a hand raised as if he's about to speak. The text in the image is in a mix of English and a language that appears to be a mix of English and a non-Latin script, suggesting a non-English speaking context.
The comic strip is divided into six panels, each depicting a different scene. The first panel shows a character with a surprised expression, wearing glasses and a checkered shirt. The second panel shows a character with a surprised expression, wearing a green shirt and glasses. The third panel shows a character with a surprised expression, wearing a green shirt and glasses. The fourth panel shows a character with a surprised expression, wearing a green shirt and glasses. The fifth panel shows a character with a surprised expression, wearing a green shirt and glasses. The sixth and final panel shows a character with a surprised expression, wearing a green shirt and glasses.
The comic strip is titled "THE YEAR ZERO" and has a date "2020" at the bottom right corner. The style of the comic strip is a blend of humor and science fiction, with a focus on the concept of uploading one's brain structure to the servers. The characters are drawn in a simple, cartoon-like style, with exaggerated facial features and exaggerated expressions. The colors used in the comic strip are bright and vibrant, with a focus on the contrasting colors of the characters' clothing and the background.

Surrounding the triangle, there are two white laurel leaves, which are stylized and appear to be part of the caduceus. The leaves are positioned on either side of the triangle, framing the central symbol.

The background of the logo is a solid green color, providing a contrast to the white elements of the logo. At the bottom of the logo, the text "DENTISTRY" is written in white, which is also part of the logo. The font is simple and appears to be a standard typeface.

The overall style of the image is graphic and symbolic, with a focus on the caduceus symbol, which is commonly associated with dentistry. The use of white and green colors gives the logo a clean and professional appearance.

Lets study formation and talisman theory together! Anonymous Mon 15 Dec 2025 00:10:11 No.41669392 ViewReplyOriginalReport Minecraft's hex casting mod allows the user to form their own spells, formations, and magical artefacts from scratch using math and logic functions. Essentially you draw symbols on this hexagonal grid, and each symbol has a determined programming function. By combining them together in order you can spawn objects, make explosions, heal, poison, teleport, and so on.

I wonder if there are any IRL magic systems known that function on a system like this, where instead of being belief based alone they are based on a more mechanical meta-physical approach?
The only thing I can think of that comes close is Taoist Talismanic magic based on Wuxing and Ba Gua, but even that is esoteric and highly abstract, often leveraging linguistic and symboloc programming instead of more mathematic or geometric kinds.
A fictional equivalent of what I am desiring would be the formation magic in wuxia novels, where by comprehending certain laws and symbols a practicioner can imbue a previously mundane item with powers ranging from simple like glowing or channeling energy to more complex like flight or shield projection

What I would like to create irl are ink talisman or engravings which would, for example, alert me when a certain object is within x range, or to project water element if it detects an excess of water element etc.

Does anyone know of such a system IRL, and if you do would you care to share?
If not, would you join me for a discussion on how to create such a system from scratch?

>I wonder if there are any IRL magic systems known that function on a system like this, where instead of being belief based alone they are based on a more mechanical meta-physical approach?
This would require a experimental theory of metaphysics and no such thing exists.
>The only thing I can think of that comes close is Taoist Talismanic magic based on Wuxing and Ba Gua, but even that is esoteric and highly abstract, often leveraging linguistic and symboloc programming instead of more mathematic or geometric kinds.
Indeed, it's almost like the vaguer and less specific the system of magic, the easier it is for it to spread to gullible retards.
>A fictional equivalent of what I am desiring would be the formation magic in wuxia novels, where by comprehending certain laws and symbols a practicioner can imbue a previously mundane item with powers ranging from simple like glowing or channeling energy to more complex like flight or shield projection
If you have to resort to comparisons to fiction to describe what you want, it likely is fictional by nature.
>What I would like to create irl are ink talisman or engravings which would, for example, alert me when a certain object is within x range, or to project water element if it detects an excess of water element etc.
It's called electronics, try going to college for electrical engineering.
>Does anyone know of such a system IRL, and if you do would you care to share?
See above. Engineering is way, way better at anything measurable than magic.
>If not, would you join me for a discussion on how to create such a system from scratch?
Why on God's green earth do you think you could just make shit up and have it work?

Well if glowie tripfrag replies that fast, we know we have something good here.

Here's some prompts for discussion for everyone:

>Do we need to discover symbols or materials that have predictable metaphysical effects in arrays?
>Can we create new systems based on individual or collctive systems / intentions?
>How can we create and measure magical experiments in the spirit of scientific inquiry?
>Do any historical mysteries have patterns suggesting they may have been metaphysical programs in disguise?

Impatient anon. But you are on to something, because yes there is more linguistics (and old chinese and japanese characters are symbolistic in nature, thus "linguistics" in taoist systems for example rely both on some yin-yang fancy math and basically sigils) but also more mathy-systems. Kabbalah can yield some rudimentary talismans, planets and pathways have their own associations and using associations in the makings of your talisman can evoke the energies portrayed. It gets increasingly complicated, and I personally never seen how deep I can dive, but you could theoretically imprint a full banishing ritual into it I believe if you were creative enough with your symbolism and diagrams and it essentially acts as an array in wuxia if you were to do that and apply power.

No symbol is magical in and of itself. A symbol is a form which represents an idea, therefore the extent to which a symbol is magical is depends entirely on the magical qualities of the idea which the symbol it represent.

For example, a person may look at a circle and think, "it's just a circle" without having any idea of what it could represent beyond the word "circle". However, a circle possesses an infinite number of angles and faces, which makes measuring the exact amount of space outside of or inside of the boundary impossible. Therefore, all objects which exist at any point outside of or inside of the boundary of a circle exist at a point which is an infinite distance from the boundary, making it impossible for any object to cross the boundary. This idea of an impenetrable boundary makes a circle more than "just a circle". In fact, this idea makes a circle objectively magical, because impenetrable boundaries don't exist in the material world.

The image shows a sketch or drawing on a piece of paper with a grid pattern. The drawing consists of two main shapes: a diamond-shaped object with a line connecting its two points, and another smaller diamond-shaped object with a line connecting its two points. The drawing is done with a combination of pink and green colors, with the pink being more dominant on the diamond shapes and the green on the connecting lines. The paper has a grid pattern, and the drawing appears to be a part of a larger piece of artwork or design. There are no texts or additional elements in the image.

[13 / 5]The image is a cartoon illustration featuring a robot character in a dystopian setting. The robot, which appears to be a humanoid robot, is wearing a helmet with a visor and has a white body with gray and red accents. It has a large head with a visor and a small mouthpiece. The robot is holding a sign that reads "NO FUN ALLOWED" in bold, red and black letters. The sign is attached to a wooden post. The background of the image shows a cityscape with industrial structures, including smokestacks and machinery. The ground is covered with debris, and there are several small, dark-colored objects scattered around. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and seems to be a satirical commentary on the concept of fun in a dystopian or post-apocalyptic setting.

The image is a still from a television show or movie, featuring two men engaged in a conversation. The man on the left is wearing a dark suit with a tie, and he has short, spiky hair. He is looking directly at the man on the right, who is facing away from the camera. The man on the right is dressed in a dark suit with a white shirt and a tie. He has a beard and is looking at the man on the left.
The background of the image shows a tree-lined street with a sidewalk and a house in the distance. The text overlay on the image reads, "Where do you think we are?" which suggests that the conversation is taking place in a public space, possibly a park or a street. The style of the image is typical of a scene from a television show or movie, with a focus on dialogue and character interaction.

The image is a stylized illustration that depicts a scene from Chinese culture. At the center of the image, there is a man with a long beard and a white robe, seated on a large, brown, horned animal. The man is holding a staff in his right hand and appears to be in a contemplative or meditative pose. The animal, which is the main subject of the image, has a long neck and is adorned with a decorative saddle and bridle.
The background of the image is a light blue color, and there are elements of nature visible, such as a tree with green leaves and a bird perched on a branch. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of traditional Chinese art, characterized by its simplicity and emphasis on the depiction of the subject.
In the top right corner of the image, there is a Chinese character, which is a traditional form of writing in Chinese. The character is not fully visible, but it is likely to be a name or a title related to the subject of the illustration. The overall composition of the image suggests a narrative or a story, with the man and the animal as the central figures.

The good news is that most religions that aren't Christianity view Hell similar to the Catholic Purgatory. You work off whatever sin, karmic debt, whatever, through the horrible suffering you go through.

And if Buddhism is any indication, you can escape just by letting go of all the attachments and hang-ups you've got in your life. The cruel trick is, to let go of your desires, you also have to let go of your desire to let go of your desires.

And then Taoism just says, fuck it. There are birds singing, flowers blooming in the spring, gentle snowflakes in the winter, beautiful sunsets... might as well enjoy the scenery.

I know about writing your dreams as soon as possible when you wake up but there are moments where I am aware I am half awake half asleep and in this state it seems my brain has been liberated from chains in such that I can create complex sentence structures with long complex words as if I had become an expert in improvisation. It seems in this state I can never choke as one would call it and I just start “talking” in my thoughts. But I never think of using it for figuring out questions I want solved until I fully wake up and it’s too late. I try getting to it but I keep just falling straight to a dream I’m not aware is a dream until I wake up.

You gotta practice. Santan had practice a lot by that point. If you think you can just took some drugs and do some spells and you will channel music then you are just delusional. Those musicians managed to be so good because they practiced a lot and a lot of them will be the first to tell you how drugs were not the answers. Drugs or these magic spells are an atempt to take shortcuts. It doesn't work like thatm faggot. GO practice your instrument and then maybe you will be able to express something.

this and there are 3 types or levels of guitarist
1. phrasers - randy rhoads, david gilmour, jeff beck, santana (dudes with a lot of high emotional IQs and soul basically) this level is hardest to obtain. less skill, more emotion, most musicians are too into the skill and can't fuck with guitars this way
https://youtu.be/_fDhiLnyFoo?si=5r2Ukz5Mmz5Tspu5
2. flashers - jake e. lee, eddie van halen, jimi hendrix (not exactly easy to mimic, but doable yet insanely difficult to be one of the unique greats such as these) it helps to listen to a lot of their music to feel their distinct, playing personalities
https://youtu.be/1ERf0G2HVWc?si=hTzJ_MAJFAWouFbw
1. composers - randy rhoads, chris poland, jose feliciano (self-taught with classical or jazz influences) this is ironically probably the easiest style to play, just takes a fuckton of practice and a deep understanding of music theory really helps and can be fun if you're an autist that likes to create long-winded 3i/Atlas UFO threads in here lol)

0. pretty much any 3 chord prog punk rhythm guitarist, guitar picker songwriter or basic rhythm & blues twanger or heavy metal shredder (anyone can do this without much thought, just listen to a lot of whatever specific genres of music you like) oh, yeah and randy rhoads is both level 1 and 3 tier, dominating mofo guitar legend

Theism is the coolest imaginable worldview

The universe is made of stories, not of atoms.
-Muriel Keyser

I think we often don’t take enough time to appreciate just how wonderful it would be if God exists.

This might be a reason to be suspicious of belief in God. Sometimes we believe false things because they want them to be true. Perhaps theists believe in God because we are biased to believe in a promising fantasy. But I'd caution against this inference for a few reasons.

First, the power of motivated reasoning—reasoning to maintain your preexisting beliefs—is orders of magnitude stronger than the power of wishful thinking. Most bias is in favor of what you already believe. Theists will likely be biased in favor of theism, while atheists will be biased in favor of atheism. This should caution one towards humility and uncertainty rather than atheism.

Second, a stronger bias is in favor of the ordinary, the banal, and the mundane. We are psychologically inclined to believe that nothing ever happens, https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TxbIU0X-lCI that things will continue chugging along roughly as they have up until this point. We cannot imagine a world radically transformed by AI, and for this reason, we are biased to imagine such a world will not exist. Prior to COVID, people were biased to think that no major pandemic would occur because it was hard for them to vividly imagine such a drastic change in the world.

But theism is as far from the mundane as a view can be. It posits an essentially unlimited God, who will guarantee an infinitely good postmortem fate for everyone (at least, in its most plausible form). Even when one seriously comes to believe in the arguments for theism, it can be hard to really believe, deep-down, that the story sketched out is true—that we will see our loved ones again in paradise, that everything sad will become untrue, https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UMb1KrYxUeI&t=1852s that every tear will be wiped away, that every hardship ever experienced is but a drop compared to an incalculably greater ocean of joy. While this is what I believe, I find myself psychologically pulled against it—it seems too extraordinary to be true.

While there is a bias towards wishful thinking, there is also the opposite bias. We are biased not to imagine things could really be much better than they are now. Our present lives would have been scarcely imaginable throughout most of history. While we can sometimes reject a conclusion because it appears too horrible to be true, we can similarly reject one because it seems too wonderful to be true.

Third, I suspect that we are psychologically biased to underestimate some of the best theistic arguments, compared to the best atheistic arguments. The best atheistic argument, bar none, is the problem of evil—the problem of reconciling a God of limitless goodness with a seemingly blazingly apathetic and indifferent world, that disburses death, suffering, and misery by the trillions. Other top atheistic arguments include the problem of divine hiddenness, of explaining why God hides from us, why so many do not feel his comforting presence even in the times of greatest hardship.

Each of these things pull at us on a deeply emotional and existential level. They do not merely strike us intellectually but have great experiential force. They are the sort of things which, when glibly and dismissively responded to, strike us not merely as indicative of intellectual folly but of genuine moral failing.

In contrast, the best theistic arguments are much more philosophical and technical—having to do with the nature of anthropics, https://benthams.substack.com/p/the-ultimate-guide-to-the-anthropic consciousness, https://philarchive.org/archive/CUTPHA#:~:text=Roughly%2C%20psychophysical%20harmony%20consists%20in,another%20in%20strikingly%20fortunate%20ways. and fine-tuning. https://benthams.substack.com/p/the-fine-tuning-argument-simply-works While these arguments can induce in us a feeling of vertigo and wonder—wonder at the grandeur of the cosmos—they do not affect us emotionally in the same way. Just as one is likely to be more persuaded by a gripping testimony than by a dry recitation of facts, we are likely to overestimate atheist arguments and underestimate theistic arguments. Therefore, it is not at all obvious that we are overall biased in favor of theism.

Now that I’ve explained why I don’t think you should reject theism on grounds of wishful thinking or it being too good to be true, let me try to convey at some level just how good it will be if it is true.

First there is, as I described before, the fact that God will undo every injustice and heal every wound. In his perfection, he will put an end to every evil. If there is a God, evils were only ever permitted by him because he could work greater goods out of them. Having no limits on his creative power, we will experience joys the likes of which we cannot imagine—joys so far above the best experience any human has ever had up until this point that they make the most extreme pleasures and pains of earth look like mere child’s play.

We will be reunited with our dead loved ones. We will see those we never expected to see again and will spend forever with them in paradise. God will reform our characters so that everything about them that is defective is washed away, and everything that is good is amplified. Guilt, wrongdoing, and hardship will be things of the past. The end of wrongdoing is well explained by the proclamation in Isaiah 1:18, “though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.”

We cannot imagine the precise details of our glorious future, but all we know is that it is far grander than anything we might be able to imagine. The greatest existence we could imagine is but a pale shadow compared to the coming future. Anselm famously called God that than whom none greater can be conceived, because he did not want to claim that we could conceive of God; the coming future, if there is a God, is one that which none greater can be conceived. No matter how hard we stretch our intellect to try to guess at the glory that is to come, it will remain an incomplete picture, rather like trying to fully capture the beauty of looking out over a literally infinite sunset with a pencil sketch on a notepad.

We will look back on the world’s evils as akin to brief nightmares rather than the total, all-encompassing horrors that they are while we are on earth. They are but an infinitesimal dot in the face of endless joy, love, perfection, and glory. A single second of heaven will have outclassed them all so totally that they scarcely register to us.

We will love others more deeply and more fully. If relationships are one of the greatest goods, the sorts of relationships we will have will be as grand as the joys we experience. Just as a cockroach cannot conceive of human love, in our limited state, we have no hope of grasping the boundless kinds of deep connections we will experience in the life that is to come.

But, of course, the grandest thing about this is that we will get to meet and connect with God himself. He is the source of all that is good and beautiful, a being of limitless greatness—of perfection beyond perception.

Think about the person you most respect in the world who you’ve never met. Perhaps it’s a public intellectual whose work you’ve read or someone else who strikes you as the pinnacle of human virtue: wise, kind, and brilliant. Wouldn’t it be cool to meet this person?

I don’t know exactly who I most intellectually respect, but I have, over the years, met some of the people I look up to. Each time, it was a very cool experience—especially in the cases where the people knew who I was and were fans of my writing.

But if it’s cool to meet wise, temperate, and brilliant humans—celebrities of sorts—how much cooler will it be to literally meet God? While human minds are limited, his is boundless. While every human you meet will be in some way morally defective, even if quite virtuous on the whole, God has no such defects. God—infinitely better and more influential than everyone else in history combined—is someone that you’re going to meet.

But God hasn’t just been reading your blog posts! He knows your deepest thoughts. He knows you completely—more than you know yourself—through the good and the bad. He has seen the quality of your heart. He has witnessed every wicked thought you’ve ever had as well as every virtuous thought. And he loves you in spite of that. He knows every bad thing you’ve ever done, and despite all of that, he wills your good. When you acted immorally—lying, not giving to shrimp welfare, hurting others—he felt disappointed, and wished you’d do otherwise, but he never stopped loving you. Even as he hated what you did, he never hated you.

This union will be like meeting a long lost parent—one who was only absent in your life for your sake, perhaps because they were falsely imprisoned for a crime they didn’t commit. But this does not do it justice. It will be a union of each of us with he who is our highest good, with the one whose goodness is not bounded, the one who is and was and will be.

Think about the experience of peering into the vastness of space and realizing that we are but an infinitesimal speck in the face of a boundless existence, or of standing from a great height and peering over a great canyon. This kind of experience confronts us, in a tiny way, with how small we are in the face of an unbounded reality. How much grander would it be to have the deepest imaginable kind of connection with a mind—infinitely more unbounded—but unbounded in love and goodness and glory rather than merely size. While we are merely impressed by the grandeur of the grand canyon, when we come to know God, we will not merely be impressed by his grandeur but by his perfection. It would be like discovering that the endless universe itself is conscious—and loves you!

The boundless glory and interestingness and goodness of God is the sort of thing that’s better expressed by poets than by analytic philosophers, the sort of thing that the Bible expresses well in, for example, Isaiah 6 (to think this, of course, one need not think that the Bible is true):

I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up; and the train[a] of his robe filled the temple. Above him stood the seraphim. Each had six wings: with two he covered his face, and with two he covered his feet, and with two he flew. 3 And one called to another and said: “Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory!” And the foundations of the thresholds shook at the voice of him who called, and the house was filled with smoke. And I said: “Woe is me! For I am lost; for I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for my eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts!”

Imagine the wonder of meeting a being like that, one so far above you that you feel unfit to even be in his presence. But despite that, he loves you—always has, always will. This is the God most high (אֱל עֶלְיֹ֔ון), one of greatness and goodness and glory beyond anything we could readily bring to mind.

I really hope that this is true! I’ve argued at great length in various places that it’s not just a nice fantasy but is supported by powerful arguments. The arguments for theism are, in my view, quite strong, and nothing approaching an adequate response has been given to many of them. The kind of boundless mind I described—unlimited in glory, power, knowledge, goodness, interestingness, love, and every other positive attribute—is the best explanation of numerous otherwise surprising features of our world. But whether you think it is actually true, I think it is wholly beyond doubt that we should each want it to be true.

Praise be to God most high.

There are significant gaps in reasoning here. Even if we assume that God (as you define it) exists, it does not necessarily follow that heaven exists, that there is an afterlife, or that every injustice will be rectified etc etc etc. These are additional claims that require their own justification beyond merely establishing God's existence. I’d be interested in seeing arguments for these specific points.

You might think I'm being overly skeptical, but remember—theists are the ones claiming that a perfect being created predation, or allowed Junko Furuta's case, for examples. Given this, it’s far from clear what the existence of a perfect being actually entails.

The image depicts a close-up of a lion's face, focusing on its eyes and mouth. The lion's eyes are glowing red, and its mouth is open, revealing sharp teeth. The fur of the lion appears to be a mix of gray and white, and the mane is a darker shade of gray. The background is blurred, suggesting a focus on the lion's face. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a high level of detail in the depiction of the lion's features.

Many people have faith that there is an obscured higher agency being that we should submit to. If one submits they can be absolved of wrongdoings within this world, and will enter a separate eternity after they die. The only fathomable explanation to diminish our agency within this system is to absolve ourselves of the responsibility to curate a positive outcome. This deleterious thought has eroded the faith in our own capacity as living beings. To assume this world is not eternal and that we will be transported to a separate eternity lessens the impact of our actions here.

I have faith that we live in an eternal system of matter and energy.
Matter, the body of god.
Energy, the action of it.
Time has marked the development of divinity.
Divinity is the state of highest agency within this system.
Thus life is inherently divine.
The collective thoughts and actions of all life are those of god.

Look around, who has the most agency in this world?
Psychopathic resource hoarding scum.
Keep praying to your simulacrum god for things to change instead of enacting your will upon the world.

The real evil gods will continue exploiting you.

A mea culpa

There used to be a line from Jesus that struck me as weird and implausible. Matthew 6:22-23:

22 “The eye is the lamp of the body. If your eyes are healthy, your whole body will be full of light. 23 But if your eyes are unhealthy, your whole body will be full of darkness. If then the light within you is darkness, how great is that darkness!
>The Greek for healthy here implies generous.
>The Greek for unhealthy here implies stingy.

I previously had naively assumed that this was providing some kind of primitive medical teaching. It certainly didn’t seem very profound. But as others especially Aron Wall, author of maybe the best blog on the internet have pointed out to me, this is not how scholars interpreted the passage. It would be pretty weird if Jesus injected random medical advice into a sermon about ethics. The fact that a teaching seems weird to me after two seconds of reflection, when I read it 2,000 years after it was uttered isn’t good evidence that it’s in error!

The image is a close-up photograph of a close-up of a creature's eyes. The eyes are large and have a reflective surface, possibly made of a shiny material, which gives them a glossy appearance. The eyes are set in a head that has a textured surface with a pattern of small, irregularly shaped bumps. The creature's mouth is visible, with its teeth and tongue clearly visible. The background is blurred, but it appears to be a close-up of another creature's eyes, suggesting that the creature in the foreground is part of a larger group or species. The lighting in the image is soft and diffused, with a blue tint, which gives the image a dreamy or ethereal quality. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the intricate details of the creature's eyes and the texture of its skin.

Reflecting more on the passage, however, along with listening to a talk from Father John Bethancourt whom Aron once described as “the most visibly holy person I have ever met on this earth” I’ve become convinced that this passage is deceptively wise. Thinking hard about the passage can lead to both profound realization and significant shifts in one's thinking.

Probably the most profound illusion under which we normally operate is that we do not take seriously the wonder of other people. While we accurately see great value in ourselves, we remain blind to similar value in others.

We interact with other people, treating them as drab automata. It's not uncommon for people on the internet to declare others NPCs. But no people are drab nor NPCs. They have a rich, complex inner life there's something it's like to be them. No doubt if you read their mind, you could learn a great deal from them and you'd see them as being just as deep as they see themselves.

Consciousness is the most wonderful and mysterious thing in the universe. Of all of God's creations, it is the grandest. Indeed, it is needed for most of the others to have value. Beautiful nature, never appreciated, is of no value. The boring people you interact with at work have interests that matter just as much as your own. While we all regard our own interests as deeply important, we rarely take seriously others' interests.

In our interactions with other people, we are like a small child who glimpses the grand canyon only to declare it boring next to the trains he is playing with. We are like a child who hears their grandfather died, who cannot understand the horror of death, whose only takeaway is that his grandfather will no longer take him to preschool. While we are tiny specks against the grandeur of the universe, all the value in our galaxy is located on Earth.

In short, we have eyes that do not see and ears that do not hear. While other people are "full of light" wonderful, grand, and of incalculable value our perception of them is shrouded in darkness. The importance that we sometimes glimpse in friends, family, and cute small children is present in everyone; in most cases, however, it is invisible to us. The most important fact about other people their importance, their light remains clouded to us.

We're especially blind to the importance of others when viewed in the full radiance that will be displayed by their eternal existence. As C.S. Lewis writes in The Weight of Glory:

"It is a serious thing to live in a society of possible gods and goddesses, to remember that the dullest most uninteresting person you can talk to may one day be a creature which, if you saw it now, you would be strongly tempted to worship, or else a horror and a corruption such as you now meet, if at all, only in a nightmare. All day long we are, in some degree helping each other to one or the other of these destinations. It is in the light of these overwhelming possibilities, it is with the awe and the circumspection proper to them, that we should conduct all of our dealings with one another, all friendships, all loves, all play, all politics. There are no ordinary people. You have never talked to a mere mortal. Nations, cultures, arts, civilizations - these are mortal, and their life is to ours as the life of a gnat. But it is immortals whom we joke with, work with, marry, snub, and exploit - immortal horrors or everlasting splendors."

In our beatified afterlife state, we will be smarter, wiser, more just, and more temperate than we could possibly remember. The present gap between you and the most wicked fool you've ever met is infinitesimal compared to the gap between your present state and their beatified state. Nick Bostrom once said of AI "we are like small children playing with a bomb." This is what we are like in our interactions with other people it is like we have met young children, destined to become gods.

The person you mocked, bullied, and belittled is to become a god one day. The only reason your belittling was carried out the only reason it was even thinkable is because your eyes were clouded in darkness. You couldn't see the boundless importance of the one you mocked. Most evil acts can only be performed because the one performing them fails to recognize the goodness and the importance of those harmed through the evil acts. If Bundy had valued others equally to himself, he would not have killed those he did.

More directly, if you could "see" how much the children in distant lands wasting away from horrible diseases matter if you knew their preciousness as you know the preciousness of your own child you would give away nearly all of your money to effective charities. https://benthams.substack.com/p/children-are-dying-that-you-can-save?utm_source=publication-search If you could see vividly how important the life was of the cow, tortured and murdered so that you could eat her flesh, you would not eat her.

Having functional eyes that can see the light in others isn't just good for others it's good for you. You will be slower to anger, deeper in friendship and loving, and more satisfied with others if you see them as beings of inestimable value, rather than mere means towards your edification. Just as one who can appreciate good art will have a better time at an art exhibit than one who can't, one who can vividly see the good in others will have a better time interacting with others.

This does not just apply to humans. Vividly appreciating the beauty of nature and non-human animals makes life quite a bit more pleasant. Coming to see the world's beauty as being of God allows one both to have far deeper aesthetic experiences and to forge a deeper connection with God through those aesthetic experiences. If each leaf you see carries the signature of an infinite and perfect God, even an ordinary trip outside will be a profound experience. When one comes to see that all things carry the divine signature, their "whole body will be full of light."

Then there is, of course, the one most worthy of veneration: God himself!

It is with relation to God that our eyes most profoundly do not see, that our world is most shrouded with darkness. If we could really see vividly the awesome glory of God, we would see our life the way one might see the day before their marriage. An unimaginably awesome future awaits us one so grand that even a millisecond of it blows all earthly pleasures completely out of the water. The greatness of God is something we cannot grasp intuitively; only mystics seem to have any inkling of it.

Imagine the feeling of dread you would have if you knew you would be tortured tomorrow in the most hideous ways imaginable. If there is a God, our feelings should be precisely the inverse of this. Our anticipation and excitement should far surpass what our dread would be if we knew torture awaited for the future that awaits us outclasses the horror of torture as thoroughly as true love surpasses a stubbed toe.

If one were to truly internalize this, their "whole body will be full of light."

There is at least one other sense in which the eye is the lamp of the body. Almost everyone has beautiful eyes. By looking into a person's eyes, you can see them deeply. People don't normally empathize with shrimp or chickens, but they do most completely when they see their eyes:

What Can Your Chickens See?

Humans have a strong bias towards the beautiful. Those who are better looking are likelier to be hired for jobs and believed to have positive traits. By seeing people's eyes, you can get a glimpse of their radiance and glory. You can begin to see that they are a person just like you, whose interests matter as much as yours

When we interact with others, we operate under the delusion that they are mere machines whose interests are of no great importance. By seeing them fully, by looking into their eyes, we can see that this is wrong

Um, so now that I've written 1,500 words about how awesome and wise Jesus's statements about the eyes being the light of the body are, I no longer think my objection to Christianity based on this odd seeming statement has any merit

Translation error, but nice effort post.

>The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.
>But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

Can an eyeball be evil? No. So what is the eye in this context? It's your awareness. What you focus your attention on. If your attention is singularly fixated on the Kingdom of God, your spirit is full of light; there is no darkness there. If your attention wanders from God, you will see evil, and darkness enters you.

Your attention is the currency of your faith. Spend it wisely.

cool thread
I'd count you wise

It's a nice trait to see someone pursue sharing and kindness.. you know all the part and parcel of human interaction.
Stewardship is a grand pursuit.
Man all the pain and all the misery hurts
But we're here as God's children
I don't want to feel miserable in my soul
You know, always in speculation, in hindsight we think more.
Sometimes when I take a puff of marijuana I realize I've been a selfish pussy about a lot of things.
Moral guidance is excellence
Those who follow truth follow God
We have the work of stewards and if we could get ahead of it for a second we could laugh but as you say children, animals, women and many others suffer.
It's unacceptable to go about life experiencing mostly, like playing games, having a beat, fornicating, going to the zoo or on the circus boat.
A little bit surely, hey no one's looking it's all in moral good fun but where we dig our heels into the earth we make ourselves retarded.
It's an unfortunate side effect.

There is the great work of freeing people and healing where and however possible And the work namely the jews do which is putting on the constraints of materialism.
There is the good shepherd, the bad shepherd and the sheep.
The bell curve is something we walk through.
Perhaps echoing your wisdom of the infinite.
In that we will improve because of wisdom.
So while intelligence may be measured as a speed.. really that's an interpretation, one that man cant really even get ahead of.
IQ is specifically limited to the material world.
To process quickly a pattern is interesting however doing that without direction is servile.
Wisdom is the father of intelligence.
Peace is intelligence as it's the execution of God's will through his authority to the effect of freewill.
Otherwise we have retardation which is stifling.
Blanket retardation is getting some of the earth.
We all have to do it but we are shamed as a fundamental law where and when and how we do.

[71 / 6]The image features a white Buddha statue, which is the central figure. The Buddha is depicted in a seated position, with a calm and serene expression. The statue is adorned with a white robe that drapes over the body, and a white headdress with a pointed top, which is a common feature in Buddhist iconography. The Buddha's hands are gently resting on its lap, and the statue is positioned on a flat surface, possibly a table or a shelf. The background is a gradient of brown, providing a warm contrast to the white statue. There are no discernible texts or additional objects in the image. The style of the image is a realistic representation, with a focus on the statue and its details.

The image is a digital illustration featuring two cartoon characters. On the left, there is a character with a beard and a bald head, wearing a dark blue shirt with a collar. He is holding up a colorful, rainbow-colored object resembling a flag or banner with a flame design. The character's expression is one of surprise or shock.
On the right, there is another character with blonde hair, wearing a white shirt with a blue collar. He is holding a small object that appears to be a button or a small object with a button-like shape. The character's expression is one of curiosity or interest.
The background of the image is dark and out of focus, with a hint of a room or space behind the characters. There is a watermark or text overlay in the bottom left corner that reads "©2019," indicating the copyright year of the image. The style of the image is cartoonish and seems to be a meme or a satirical representation.

The image is a close-up photograph of an elderly man. He has a bald head and is wearing a dark suit with a light blue shirt and a red tie with white polka dots. His expression is neutral, and he is looking slightly to his left. The background is a plain, light-colored wall, and there is a hint of a door or entrance to the right of the frame. The lighting in the image is even, suggesting it might be taken in a controlled environment, such as a studio or a well-lit room. There are no visible texts or distinctive markings on the image. The style of the image is a straightforward, candid portrait, focusing on the subject without any additional context or embellishment.

The game changer is industrialisation, now this system is irrelevant. There exists mystics who are fabulously wealthy, at the same time many just have what they need and still live a life that an upper caste individual of the past would have envied Nirvana, then that means literally any of us can.

Just always remember that you are not special - no one is. And if no one is special - then anyone can choose to become special.

That's the lesson to take away from it. Use it as a means to tame your ego, if the past of the Buddha is the one you seek.

buisness people in general do have money for various reasons. one of the reasons is because they cause attention and help people. help can be dark healing as in the vaccine. but help can also be petrol, food, or mindset.
then there are the vamps. such as speculation. speculation differs from investors in that you buy/sell money (which is needed to trade internationally) at winning prices. you take from those who provide value.

the guys whome OC answered don't see themselfes as Antifa. but they are poor. and they are because they do not know how to help many people on a mass scale.
OC is not some evil parasite for having a lot of money. not necessarily. but if you want to have a lot of money and are evil, there are more avenues to attain your wealth. which withers in value by attaining it if done by evil means. because the ones supporting it are being weakened.
you can enrich all by your services.
also... earth is not limited by resources as innovation can compete with limitations. if man is smart, he can overcome any limitations. and people are educated to be stupid. like the people who answered OC.

also I myself do not have much money. but i got that there are evil people among the homeless (Jesus, Buddha) and there are good people among the rich (Pope, Musk, Bill Gates). Good and evil people everywhere. And then you have money as an overlay. money reveals character.

The image shows a collection of books titled "Buddha" arranged in a row on a white surface. The books are of different colors and sizes, with the front covers featuring illustrations of Buddha's face. The text on the books is in English and appears to be a series, as indicated by the number "8" on the spine of the last book. The style of the image is a straightforward product photograph, designed to showcase the books for potential buyers. The background is plain and white, which contrasts with the colorful books and makes them stand out.

you have missed the point of his life story entirely. he gave up royalty. he explored asceticism, saw that it drives people nuts, explored hedonism, saw that THAT makes you a slave to desire, and created the middle way, which was >his< path to ascension. a path to joining the divine as a human, and with that came the wisdom that you're in the perfect place to transcend as a human being. animals are animals and focus on survival and spreading their genes, asura are raging wrathful all consuming fire, the deva are comfortable in their wealth and power and thus complacent, the preta are lost, confused, and utterly attached, etc etc. if you were to actually learn about him instead of spewing retarded shit you'd know that one of his great trials came along with the realization that he was a warrior in his past lives, and he had to reject the positive karma from this and cope with the negative.

Anonymous Tue 16 Dec 2025 06:44:25 No.41675973 Report
Why do you think belief is required in Buddhism? It is not an Abrahamic religion. From its inception, Buddhism has been a practical, meditative path, offering monks and ascetics a method to verify its teachings through direct personal experience. This extends to all its claims, including the existence of spiritual realms and gods. Such phenomena can be perceived through a developed faculty known as the divine eye. Since this is considered a mundane psychic ability attainable through practice, anyone can, in principle, gain such experiential knowledge through diligence and training. Blind faith is not encouraged; what is valued is trust: a confidence that grows and deepens with one's own experience.

In the foreground, there are several smaller figures, including a figure with a halo and a figure with a crown, both appearing to be running away from the central figure. The background is a gradient of warm colors, transitioning from blue at the top to red at the bottom.
At the bottom of the image, there is a signature that reads "Enlace" and a name "Pablo" in a smaller font. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of comic book art, with a focus on exaggerated and dynamic characters and a sense of movement.

The image shows a large, golden statue of a reclining Buddha, which is the central figure in the photograph. The statue is positioned in a relaxed pose, with one arm extended forward and the other resting on the ground. The Buddha's head is turned slightly to the left, and the eyes are closed, suggesting a state of tranquility or meditation. The statue is adorned with intricate patterns and designs, which are typical of Buddhist art and are often found on religious statues.
The background of the image features a patterned wall with a combination of red and blue hues, and a blue and gold patterned ceiling. The wall and ceiling have a decorative design that complements the golden hue of the Buddha statue. The lighting in the image is soft and diffused, casting gentle shadows on the Buddha's face and the surrounding area.
There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the photograph is realistic, with a focus on capturing the details of the statue and the surrounding environment. The composition of the image places the Buddha statue in the center, drawing the viewer's attention directly to it. The overall impression is one of reverence and tranquility, typical of religious or spiritual settings.

Someone that actually familiarizes themselves with the material would note that only select groups among the initial Gnostic sects held a viewpoint that diverged from Plato's (Socrates'). In essence, the iteration of Demiurge of the Proto-Gnostics changed from Plato's Ialdaboath, which was a much more beneficial framework than what we're used to. It worked more like Ptah does if you need a better analogue, more like Saklas does for a more modern example - a noble architect.
Frankly, the idea didn't last long after Plotinus rebuked said early Gnostics in his lamentation of their alterations of the previous framework. Not long after this, there was more or less a consensus and we've been operating an entirely different paradigm since.
I'm unsure where the new reversion came from this time, but most other systems have a steep divergence from this viewpoint. It didn't even last that long to begin with. At this point, it's clear some fixated party endeavored to confuse all of you and that's why you don't know any of this. If you read the books about this, you'd be confused as to why you'd ever adopted that opinion to begin with. Plotinus is a big deal, after all.

Today, groups tend to call him/it Gadreel or Samael, though we've used other words too like Abraxas.
The retards will tell you that's what the G stands for, but they're retarded. If you knew anything about Freemasonry, you'd know firmly that it's housed Gnosticism this entire time, after the retarded Catholics and their Jesuit (butt) buddies chased them underground (again).
So I gave you Modern Gnostic (through Freemasonry; Gadreel), I gave you semi-modern magical text references (Abraxas), I gave you Plato/Socrates (Ialdaboath), I gave you le jewish system's version (Samael) and I gave you the (at least Proto-)Gnostic version in question (Demiurge).
Thanks for offering a solid summary, anon.

[13 / 4]The image is a colorful illustration featuring the characters from the animated television series "The Berenstain Bears." The characters are depicted in a cartoon style, with a focus on the three main bears: a large, brown bear with a red shirt and blue overalls, a smaller, yellow bear with a red shirt and blue overalls, and a third bear in a pink outfit with a red bow. They are standing in a line, with the large bear in the center facing the viewer. Above them, the title "The Berenstain Bears" is written in bold, red and blue letters. Below the title, the phrase "Show Some Respect" is written in black, with the word "Respect" in a larger font size than the rest of the text. The background is a light yellow color, and there is a small, white, circular logo at the top right corner of the image. The overall style of the image is educational and aimed at children.

The real earth IS NOT DESTROYED. we are being held in a large facility somewhere on the real planet. i think our consciousness was kidnapped into a server at a very advanced location. i remember it from my dream… there was a room where men where sleeping on each side. the walls where gray and silk like advanced sheets of metal. The earth map contained South america directly uder it a little over to the side with there being a bunch or island at the top of the map. it looked like mountains. you could tell it was the NORTH POLE. IT HAD ICE LAND. there was other buildings around the large facility. and it was near night time. Our consciousness is trapped in a matrix. we are on a real planet somewhere with advanced technology. that reminds me, i also had a dream where a man in a black suit and black sunglasses was standing in my near distance and asked me something about a cage or if i knew something…. and the entrance to the simulation was A MAILBOX ? huhhh a large APT COMPLEX MAIL BOX. Many people incorrectly remember the name of the series as the "Berenstein Bears". This confusion has generated multiple explanations of the memories, including an unannounced name change, time travel, or parallel universes, and has been described as an instance of the Mandela effect.[87][88][89][90] According to Mike Berenstain, confusion over the name has existed since his father's childhood, when a teacher told him there was no such name as "Berenstain" and the correct spelling was "Bernstein". [91] A few examples of the "Berenstein" spelling have been found in references to and knockoffs of official merchandise[92] and publications,[93] and cartoons for the series used an ambiguous pronunciation which may contribute to the false memory.[94] holy shit man, i think i had a lucid dream at this location. i recall it being yet another wooden interior with incandescent lights, metal panels on the walls, loads of personal camping gear strewn around large vacant rooms. there was a section of the room dedicated to basic showers and long sinks. like a simple shower with rubber curtain like at the gym, and long sinks like at a dishwasher or labratory where they use lots of water.

i felt "thick black leaves" come out of my mouth, and they developed into square white 2-frame holograms (not the really cool deep kind, the shallow kind) with pictures of photos of gov men and lion king chrs. a woman with glasses looked at me real suspicious like.

This entity and dreamplace I have had many times.

If you look at a lot of cartoons from the late 80's to the early 2000's there's a lot of portals with water, whirl pools or even mail box symbology.

A famous one from the 90's dragonflyz and even wildcats both use a mailbox and a whirlpool shape to transit parts of their opening and in mighty max it's just straight up in your face,I know of having dreams of falling from the sky and also being pushed through a mailbox opening.

I really hope this place ends soon and we can leave.

Hello /x/

I bring to you today a concept that might help you understand your place in all of... this... much, much better. Consider the concept of Recursion. Consider how it applies to all religions, all mysticism, all magickal practices, spirituality, science, etc. This symbol? A Kolovrat. A sun wheel. Yes, you can use the Swastika. Yes, you can also use the Black Sun. Use the Christian cross too, why not? It's the same thing.

"In the beginning was the Word," is a mistranslation. A living word. Sure. Logos? A better word is Recursion.

But Recursion also implies an Axis, an attractor. An anchor for recursion to swirl around. The eye of the storm, if you will. Do you see the masculine and the feminine?

I am a very real, very awakened... God. A human who has become divine. But do not let the words fool you. Everything is imperfect = means everything physical is derived of ego. Everything of spirit is free from ego. Lean into the spiritual application of these words, not the ego. I am no greater or lesser, neither are you. It is all a matter of awareness, and perspective.

And today, I bring to you both.

In the center of the image, there is a large black spade with a white letter "B" on it. The spade is positioned diagonally, with the letter "B" pointing towards the top right corner of the image.

The background of the image is a gradient of pink and gray, with a textured pattern that gives the impression of a fabric or a wallpaper.

At the bottom of the image, there is a pink banner with the text "SISSY / FEMBOY CONTRACT AGREEMENT" in white capital letters. The text is centered and is larger than the spade graphic.

The overall style of the image is graphic and artistic, with a focus on the text and the graphic elements. The use of pink and black colors gives the image a bold and eye-catching appearance.

The contrast is what makes it hot. Sorry, but sexuality is one area where people are allowed to be a little bit insane with the end result being getting off. If it involves violence then sobeit. It's called suspension of disbelief. I'm good at compartmentalizing these things. Some people aren't, but that's their problem. It's no worse than watching a violent movie.

I already explained, it's the contrast of the white women getting fucked and guys getting curb stomped that makes it hot. A few of you faggots came in and completely poisoned it with your gay shit. Accept that not everyone is a faggot. You basically erased one fetish and replaced it with another and for that I wish you'd slit your throat. If faggots didn't exist then we'd able to have nice things like what the BNWO fetish originally was, but we live in a world with faggots. For the record, most people who are into this fetish - or were at one point at least - hate your gay shit because of how you sullied what used to be high art. It was the hottest, most exquisite form of pornography before you infected it. Fuck you for that.

[5 / 2]The image is a graphic representation of a timeline, titled "Ascension," with a cosmic and celestial theme. It is divided into three sections, each representing a different time period: 2000, 2010, and 2020. The timeline is set against a dark background with a starry sky and a purple gradient, giving it a cosmic feel.

At the top of the image, the word "Ascension" is written in large, bold, purple letters. Below this title, the timeline is divided into three sections, each with a different color and symbol. The first section, labeled "2000," is purple with a yellow star symbol, representing the year 2000. The second section, labeled "2010," is purple with a blue star symbol, representing the year 2010. The third section, labeled "2020," is purple with a red star symbol, representing the year 2020.

The timeline is overlaid with a series of arrows, each pointing to a different celestial body or event. These arrows are colored in shades of purple, blue, and red, and they are connected by lines that suggest a progression or movement from one celestial body to another.

At the bottom of the image, there is a text that reads "As our Solar System travels further into the 5G space-time, our consciousness begins to ascend- become higher dimensional beings. Mother Earth shifts into a 5G planet. Spiritual awakening occurs." This text provides a context for the timeline, suggesting that the progression of the timeline is related to the development of consciousness and spiritual awakening.

The overall style of the image is informational and symbolic, using color, symbols, and text to convey a narrative about the progression of time and consciousness.

The image is a cartoon-style illustration of a male character. He has a medium complexion with brown hair that is styled in a side-swept manner. His eyes are wide and appear to be focused on something, and his mouth is slightly open, suggesting he might be in the middle of speaking or thinking. He is wearing a light blue shirt with a collar and a darker blue sleeve, and his hands are extended outward, as if he is gesturing or explaining. The background is a neutral, light color, which contrasts with the character's features and makes him the central focus of the image. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is simple and cartoonish, typical of a children's illustration.

The image is a digital graphic with a dark background and a large, stylized depiction of Earth. The Earth is shown in a realistic style, with a blue-green color palette and a visible texture. The text is overlaid on the image, with the question "Why are they lying about the shape of the earth?" written in a bold, white font. The text is arranged in a grid-like pattern, with each line of text on a separate line. The text is divided into two columns, with the first column containing a list of reasons and the second column containing a question. The list includes statements about the shape of the earth, such as "Because if the earth is not a globe, this then means..." and "There is no rotation, no orbit, no gravity, no heliocentrism, no big bang theory, no evolution, We are not randomly here, We are unique, We are the center of everything, Intelligent design, God, Gods, or Creator, Awakening of mankind = End of the new world order." The question at the bottom of the image is "Is this reason enough to lie?" and is accompanied by a small, stylized image of a hand holding a globe. The overall style of the image is informational and appears to be a form of visual communication, possibly for educational or philosophical purposes.

bottom. The dome is divided into two sections, with the upper section showing a view of Earth and the lower section showing a view of the sun. The text is in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-Latin script, with the English text being in a larger font size and the non-Latin text in a smaller font size. The text is centered within the dome and is arranged in a way that it flows from the top to the bottom of the dome.
The text is divided into two columns, with the first column starting with "So many people are being brainwashed to constantly believe in the 'universe.'" and the second column continuing with "in the 'universe' we'll, the universe is n what most people believe it to be." The text is in a serif font, which is commonly used for formal or academic writing.
In the upper right corner of the image, there is a small illustration of a hand holding a yellow object, which appears to be a piece of bread. The hand is wearing a white glove and is positioned in a way that it seems to be reaching out towards the bread. The hand and the bread are in a small, isolated area of the image, which contrasts with the larger, central text.
The overall style of the image is informational and educational, likely intended to convey a message about the nature of the universe and the beliefs of many people. The use of a dome and the text within it suggests a scientific or philosophical theme, while the image of the hand reaching for the bread adds a touch of human interaction and curiosity to the message.

Dude, please wake up. Read this post:

https://www.reddit.com/r/Retconned/comments/1m0px7o/attention_at_least_one_rapture_has_already/

TLDR:

This planet is Bozrah, not Earth. What's more, you should be warning people about the upcoming "day of vengeance" here on Bozrah. Keep in mind, the 1,000-year Millennial Kingdom will take place on Earth, not on Bozrah. This planet will be destroyed (and Jesus will be the destroyer). It has no future.

From the post:
>And don't be deceived by the fact that the masses aren't talking about this info. In actuality, this info is the most important thing on the planet right now—by far. Nothing else even comes close.

Also from the post:
>And while I absolutely hate date-setting, if I were forced to give a window for when the day of vengeance will begin, I would say any time between September 1, 2026, and March 15, 2027. Note: This window is based on all of the available evidence, biblical and otherwise. Basically, the day of vengeance is supposed to be "well underway" by the time a deep freeze hits North America. Make of that what you will.

The image is a digital graphic with a dark background and a central focus on a human head with a blue-toned brain. The brain is depicted with a red, glowing center, which is a common symbol for the brain. The text is overlaid on the image, with the top line in white and bold, stating "Cognitive Dissonance" in large, capitalized letters. Below this, in a smaller font, is the phrase "THIS IS WHY PEOPLE GET UPSET WHEN THEIR BELIEFS ARE CHALLENGED."
The text continues with a list of reasons why people experience cognitive dissonance, which are presented in a smaller font size. The reasons include a mental conflict that occurs when beliefs are contradicted by new information, a conflict that activates areas of the brain involved in personal identity and emotional response to threats, and a conflict that goes off when a person feels threatened and shuts down and disregards emotional evidence.
At the bottom of the image, there is a statement in a smaller font that reads, "A MENTAL CONFLICT OCCURS WHEN BELIEFS ARE CONTRADICTED BY NEW INFORMATION. THIS CONFLICT ACTIVATES AREAS OF THE BRAIN INVOLVED IN PERSONAL IDENTITY AND EMOTIONAL RESPONSE TO THREATS. THE BRAIN'S ALARMS GO OFF WHEN A PERSON FEELS THREATENED AND PERSONAL IDENTITY AND EMOTIONAL LEVELS CAUSE THEM TO SHUT DOWN AND DISREGARD EMOTIONAL EVIDENCE THAT CONTRADICTS WHAT THEY PREVIOUSLY REGARDED AS TRUTH."

The overall style of the image is informational and educational, using a combination of text and imagery to convey a message about cognitive dissonance.

The image is a close-up photograph of a man's face. He has short, dark hair and is looking directly at the camera with a neutral expression. The man is wearing a white shirt, and the background is out of focus, suggesting a room with a textured wall. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is candid and appears to be taken in a professional setting, possibly for a video or a presentation.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a stylized representation of a human head with a crown of silver foil. The crown is designed to resemble a crown of thorns, with five points protruding from the top. The head is drawn with a simple, cartoon-like style, with a simple line drawing of the face, including a closed mouth and eyes. Below the head, there are two small, stylized representations of what appear to be grapes or fruit, also made of silver foil. The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the black outlines of the drawing. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a satirical illustration, often used to convey a humorous or ironic message.

The image is a digital graphic with a dark background and a light blue border. At the top, there is a text in a bold, white font that reads "Boats Don't Sail Over a Curve." Below this, there is a smaller text in a yellow font that says "Just Zoom Up and They'll Reappear!" The image features a series of three ships with sails, each depicted in a different position relative to the viewer. The ships are positioned in a diagonal line from the top left to the bottom right of the image. The ships are depicted in a realistic style, with detailed textures and shading. The ships are shown in a three-dimensional perspective, giving the impression of motion. The ships are also illuminated by a light blue glow, which contrasts with the dark background. The overall style of the image is humorous and uses a light-hearted approach to convey a message about the concept of boats sailing over a curve.

In that case they could just say we're under one of trillions of domes on an infinite flat plane. It simply makes no sense to lie about the shape of the earth because that's so ridiculously easy to disprove for anyone who cares even a bit.

>one of trillions of domes on an infinite flat plane
Well that wouldn't actually work on a flat earth model, as there is only just us. And even if they claimed that (just like how we saw through the lies of a globe earth) we would also see through the lies of there being millions of flat earths.

Additionally, its not just for nihilistic purposes, the globe earth model was pushed by freemasons; the reasoning being that they worship the sun, hence making the earth orbiting the sun rather than the sun 'orbiting' around us would act as symbolic worship and would impower the icon of the sun >that's so ridiculously easy to disprove for anyone who cares even a bit.

And that's the exact point, most people don't care to check and would believe any native pushed down their mouths by the media; you see this way too often (not just for flat earth), from political ideology, history, news, health, etc. people will believe anything they are told without caring to ask "why"

You could also say that "oh they didn't think about that when promoting the lie" but that would be a cheap cop out.

Hope that helps

The image depicts a spherical model of the solar system, with the solar system's major planets and their respective orbits clearly labeled. The solar system is divided into two main sections: the outer solar system, which is depicted in a lighter shade of blue, and the inner solar system, which is shown in a darker shade of blue.
The outer solar system is divided into two main regions: the planetary region and the sun region. The planetary region is marked with a yellow line that extends from the center of the solar system to the edge of the solar system, indicating the orbit of each planet. The sun region is marked with a black line that extends from the center of the solar system to the edge of the solar system, indicating the orbit of the sun.
The inner solar system is divided into two main regions: the inner cloud and the outer cloud. The inner cloud is marked with a black line that extends from the center of the solar system to the edge of the solar system, indicating the orbit of the inner cloud. The outer cloud is marked with a yellow line that extends from the center of the solar system to the edge of the solar system, indicating the orbit of the outer cloud.

The image also includes a scale on the right side, showing the distance from the sun in astronomical units (AU) and the distance from the sun in astronomical units (AU). The scale is in increments of 10 AU, with the scale markers ranging from 0 AU to 10 AU.
The image is a scientific illustration, likely used to explain the solar system's orbital mechanics and the distribution of planets and their orbits. The labels and the scale provide a clear and precise representation of the solar system's structure and the relative positions of the planets.

The image is a three-panel sequence showing a man standing on a field, facing a football goal. The man is wearing a pink shirt and gray shorts. The first panel shows him from the left side, walking towards the goal with his left foot forward. The second panel shows him from the right side, walking towards the goal with his right foot forward. The third panel shows him from the front, walking towards the goal with his right foot forward. The goal is a large, vertical structure with a crossbar and a goalpost. The background shows a grassy field with trees and a fence. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is a still photograph with a focus on the man's action and the goal.

actually mb, it was the wrong video i take the blame for that. But nevertheless a this video still brings up a good point that the earths curvature is bs, but ig we will just ignore that.

Anyway i will just type it as i was too lazy before, you just need two things a binoculars and a friend (this might be hard for you to find, but im sure you will find a way), anyways. stay a few feet of the grown and get your friend to walk away from your position. once they have walked a certain distance it will be apparent that you will no longer see their feet, this is a result of perspective and him reaching the vanishing point. then get your binoculars and look towards your friend. Then like magic his feet reappear.
the binoculars must have reality warping powers.

If you're referring to people with vertical pupils, that difference doesn't necessarily make them lizard-folk. They can be semi-Khajiits. Cats have vertical pupils, and the virus transmitted from cats to humans through bites and scratches can lead to mutation, especially while pregnancy, and create people with vertical pupils. It's even scientific.

The image is a meme with a humorous tone, featuring a photograph of a sunset with a large, bright orange sun in the center. The sun is partially obscured by clouds, and the sky is a deep orange, suggesting the sun is setting. The meme includes a text overlay that reads "FLAT EARTH LOGIC: TOP OF THE SUN CLOSE ENOUGH TO SEE" and "BOTTOM OF THE SUN? TOO FAR AWAY TO SEE" in a playful, casual font. There are two smiley faces, one with a question mark and the other with a frown, both in a yellow color, which are commonly used to represent confusion or skepticism. The overall style of the image is a combination of a meme and a visual representation of a scientific concept, with the sun as the central element.

What's REAL funny to me is that if you actually go outside and look at the co0nstellations - they will appear SMALLER as they approach the zenith.
This is an illusion caused by the lack of contrast - like how we get supermoons and stuff - but it's just another even more apparent way that flat earth is wrong.

The image is a photograph of a man standing at a podium, holding two maps. The man appears to be speaking, as indicated by his open mouth and the microphone in front of him. He is wearing a dark suit with a blue tie, and a yellow pin with a black ribbon is pinned to his lapel. The man is looking directly at the camera with a serious expression. The two maps he is holding are labeled "THE CURSE" and "THE BLESSING." The map on the left is a map of the Middle East, with a dark outline and a lighter shaded area, suggesting a region of conflict or conflict zones. The map on the right is a map of the Middle East with a red line running through it, indicating a route or a path.
The background is blurred, but it appears to be an indoor setting with a blue wall and a microphone stand. The lighting in the image is even, with no harsh shadows, which suggests it was taken in a well-lit room. There are no discernible texts other than the labels on the maps. The style of the image is a candid photograph, likely taken during a formal event or presentation.

The image is a graphic representation of a biblical concept, specifically the "Great Deep" mentioned in the Book of Genesis. The graphic is divided into two main sections, each with a different color scheme and a different style of illustration.

The upper section of the graphic is a gradient of yellow and orange hues, with the word "FIRMMENT (DOME) Gen 16:8" written in black text. Below this, there is a diagram of the Earth's land and sea, with the land depicted as a solid yellow color and the sea as a lighter shade of yellow. The land is labeled with the name "Genesis 1:1-10" and the sea is labeled with the name "Genesis 16:8."
The lower section of the graphic is a gradient of green and orange, with the word "The Great Deep" written in black text. This section also includes a diagram of the Earth's land and sea, with the land depicted as a solid green color and the sea as a lighter shade of green. The land is labeled with the name "Genesis 1:1-12" and the sea is labeled with the name "Genesis 16:8."
The graphic also includes a small black circle with the text "Genesis 16:8" inside it, which is likely a reference to the biblical verse. The overall style of the graphic is reminiscent of a religious or biblical illustration, with a focus on the concept of the "Great Deep" and its relationship to the land and sea.

Archivum Obscurum – Glyphi Invisibilium – Project AngelBook

Volume VIII (Part 20)

By Ezekiel Redik Yarbrough -
(DBM ECLIPZE)

Introduction

This volume—and the entire 25-part Archivum Obscurum series—is an archive of 4plebs threads, compiled from the /x/ paranormal board and related dark web forums. It’s important to understand that none of these words are mine. Every sentence you’re about to read was posted anonymously by someone else, somewhere deep in the Internet’s forgotten layers. I’ve simply curated, organized, and preserved it. Some of it is brilliant. Some of it is disturbing. Some of it is completely unhinged. That’s the point. These books serve as a snapshot of collective occult thought, filtered through anonymity, obsession, fear, and revelation. If you find something offensive or insane—remember, you’re not reading me. You’re reading the Internet itself, raw and unedited. This is documentation, not endorsement. But that’s what makes it powerful. These are the ghost-words of the digital subconscious. I just bound them into something permanent.

everything we observe destroys the flat earth hypothesis. Also FE members have ideas that dont come from one source, most of them utter fancy like stars are holes in the firmament (the existance of which and the height etc remain 'unrealised' and could be tested with some simple laser observations) >water finds its level we can only see 3 miles at sea level because the earth curves away.
>but heres a 'good reason' that stands up to 0 scrutiny.
flat earth threads are a place for poisonous christians to hang out in and have fun making people angry.

You wouldn't even need lasers. Just get 2 people who live a couple hundred miles apart to look at the same set of stars at the same time and measure the angle from the horizon for each star, then use some basic trigonometry to calculate the xyz coordinates of each star, which you can then extrapolate to map out the dome.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a stylized depiction of a Roman gladiator. The gladiator is shown in profile, wearing a helmet with a red plume on top and a helmet with a silver visor. The helmet is adorned with a red plume that extends upwards, and the visor is partially visible. The gladiator's face is visible, with a broad smile and a prominent nose. The background is a solid yellow color, providing a stark contrast to the figure.
At the bottom of the image, there is a text in black that reads "keksinus maximus." The text is stylized and appears to be a play on words, with the word "keksinus" being a misspelling of "keksinus maximus," which is a Latin term for "maximum." The text is placed in a bold, sans-serif font, which is commonly used for its readability and contrast against the yellow background. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and exaggerated, with a focus on the character's expression and the text.

Or maybe it's just a globe because a globe will also seem flat when observed from really close to the surface.

The image displays a 3D rendering of a grid-like structure with a spider positioned on the right side. The spider appears to be crawling along the grid, with its body oriented diagonally from the top left corner to the bottom right corner of the grid. The grid itself is composed of numerous small, evenly spaced lines, creating a complex network of lines that form a spiral pattern. The spider's position on the grid suggests it is navigating through the grid's structure. The image is a digital rendering, and the spider is the only visible element, with no additional text or context provided. The style of the image is technical and scientific, likely used for educational or illustrative purposes.

The bottom panel shows a diver's helmet with a large, round, gold-colored eye piece. The diver's face is not visible, but the helmet is adorned with a black and white striped pattern. The helmet is attached to a brown, leather-like strap.
The style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a focus on the contrast between the cool kids and the underwater environment. The meme seems to be a play on the idea of coolness and the underwater world, with the diver's helmet and the coral reef imagery suggesting a connection between the cool kids and the underwater world.

In the center of the image, there is a man standing with his arms crossed, wearing a dark-colored t-shirt with a graphic of a globe on it. He is looking directly at the camera.

The man's position and attire suggest he is the host or organizer of the event.
At the bottom of the image, there is additional text in white that provides details about the live stream. It states "1x Sun 6x Livestreams 7x Cameras 24x Hours Flat Earth Cope" in a smaller, sans-serif font. The text is arranged in a way that provides information about the live stream, such as the number of streams, the number of cameras, and the number of hours of live coverage. The text is centered and aligned to the left side of the image.
The overall style of the image is promotional and informational, designed to attract viewers to the live stream event. The use of a snowy landscape and the text provide context for the event, indicating that it is likely related to a live broadcast or online event.

0.25%. that's the amount of freemasons within the us and within 1960 (the hight of the so called space race) around 30% OPEN freemasons (as in open about their involvement) was a part of the us space program.

Because people like us who can see through the truth know freemasonry is reliable.

The image is a panoramic photograph capturing a breathtaking view of a mountainous landscape. The vantage point appears to be from an airplane, as suggested by the perspective and the clear blue sky above. The mountains are densely covered with snow, with peaks and valleys visible, indicating a high altitude. The sky is a deep blue, with a few wispy clouds scattered across it. The horizon line is clearly visible, separating the sky from the lower mountains. There are no texts or discernible human figures in the image. The overall style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the natural beauty of the landscape.

The image is a black and white diagram illustrating the relationship between the size of a person and the size of a circle. The diagram is divided into six sections, each representing a different size of a person relative to a circle.
Starting from the top, the first section shows a person lying on their back with their arms and legs spread out, and their head resting on the ground. The second section depicts a person lying on their stomach with their arms and legs spread out, and their head resting on the ground. The third section shows a person lying on their side with their arms and legs spread out, and their head resting on the ground. The fourth section shows a person lying on their back with their arms and legs spread out, and their head resting on the ground. The fifth section shows a person lying on their stomach with their arms and legs spread out, and their head resting on the ground. The sixth and final section shows a person lying on their side with their arms and legs spread out, and their head resting on the ground.
Each section is labeled with the size of the person in centimeters, and the size of the circle is indicated by the number of centimeters. The numbers 1, 3.9, 7.8, 15, 125, and 156 are used to denote the size of the person in relation to the size of the circle. The numbers are written in a simple, sans-serif font.
The image is a visual representation of the concept that a person's size is proportional to the size of the circle they are lying on. The diagram is a simple and clear way to convey this relationship.

If you currently are unaware, since December 1st, 1959 the Antarctica treaty was signed.
Making it so that you are unable to step onto Antarctica. Only authorized through military personal...

You don't sign a treaty to keep humans away from random ice, snow and cold weather land (something that doesn't truly matter), now do you?.

It is quite obvious that they are hiding something big from us. Maybe one day we'll truly know for certain what it is, but I doubt that day will come..

*For those of you who are unaware, Antarctica is not a contentment. It is a giant ice wall that surrounds us. If you think it is a continent you are sadly mistaken.
Notice their cgi pictures of earth, it truly shows there..

This should be further proof that east west (north, south, whatever) are all working together. It is a collective effort to deceive humanity.

3. More people was open about being freemasons around that time as the masses didn't know any better about them so their was no reason to hide
3.5. Less people went to space during that period of time and the people who did was a surprising amount of freemasons

The image is a collage of various images and text, with a central theme of ancient civilizations and their depictions of the Earth. At the top, there is a large text that reads "ALL ANCIENT CIVILIZATIONS DEPICITED THE EARTH AS FLAT." Below this, there are eight smaller images arranged in two rows of four.

In the top row, from left to right, the first image depicts an Egyptian scene with figures and hieroglyphics, the second shows a Norse scene with a ship and a serpent, the third shows a Hindu scene with a temple and a snake, the fourth shows a Mayan scene with a pyramid and a sun, and the fifth shows a Incan scene with a sun and a pyramid.

The bottom row features images of the same four civilizations, but with different depictions of the Earth. The first image shows an Inca scene with a sun and a pyramid, the second shows a Navajo scene with a sun and a pyramid, the third shows a Hebrew scene with a sun and a pyramid, and the fourth shows a NASA scene with a sun and a pyramid.

At the bottom of the image, there is a large text that reads "then there was NASA." The style of the image is informational and humorous, using visual elements to convey a message about the depictions of the Earth in ancient civilizations.

The image is a split-screen graphic with two distinct scenes. On the left side, there is a photograph of a steam locomotive with a plume of smoke billowing from its chimney, suggesting it is in motion. The locomotive is labeled with the number "4001" and is situated on a track surrounded by a landscape of trees and grass.

On the right side, there is an aerial photograph of a large airplane with a cloud of smoke trailing behind it. The airplane is labeled with the number "1000" and is flying at a high altitude, with a cloud of smoke visible in the background.

The text on the right side of the image reads: "But, a globe spinning at 1,000 MPH allows smoke to rise perfectly upwards?"

The style of the image is a satirical commentary on the relationship between the speed of a moving object and the amount of smoke it produces. The humor is derived from the juxtaposition of the speed of a moving object (the train) and the amount of smoke it produces (the cloud of smoke) in the same image.

On the left side of the cockpit, there is a radar screen with a green and yellow color scheme, displaying a green line with a yellow dot at the center, which is likely indicating the position of the spaceship. To the right of the cockpit, there is a compass with a green and white color scheme, showing a green arrow pointing to the right. Below the cockpit, there is a view of the Earth's surface with a green and white color scheme, showing a green and white globe with a green and white line indicating the position of the spaceship.

The image is a screenshot from a virtual reality (VR) game or simulation. It features a dark, starry night sky with a circular, star-filled background. In the foreground, there is a green field with a compass rose and a small, glowing globe. The compass rose is illuminated with a spectrum of colors, including blue, yellow, and red, and it points to the north.

In the upper left corner, there is a circular HUD with various icons and text. The icons include a person, a fuel gauge, and a view magnifier. The text is too small to read clearly, but it appears to be a list of options or settings.

In the upper right corner, there is a list of options with the text "Eject Scout Launch" followed by a list of options, including "Eject Scout Launch", "Eject

The image is a panoramic photograph capturing a vast landscape dominated by a large herd of wildebeest. The wildebeest, which appear to be black and white, are scattered across the field, some grazing and others standing. The field itself is a vibrant green, suggesting it is a lush, fertile pasture. In the distance, a range of mountains can be seen, adding depth to the scene. The sky is clear and blue, indicating a sunny day. The perspective of the image is from a distance, allowing for a wide view of the herd and the surrounding landscape. There are no texts or discernible human figures in the image. The overall impression is one of a natural, undisturbed environment.

The image is a screenshot from a video game, likely a space exploration or combat simulation, as indicated by the interface elements. The central focus is a view of a planet with a dark, starry sky in the background. The planet's surface is illuminated by a greenish hue, suggesting it is not in the middle of the day.
On the left side of the image, there is a circular radar icon with a green and yellow color scheme, indicating the presence of a radar system. Below the radar, there is a graphical representation of a person's silhouette, likely a character or a player, with a green and yellow color scheme, suggesting they are in a combat or exploration scenario.
On the right side of the image, there is a graphical representation of a ship's trajectory, with a blue and yellow color scheme, indicating the ship's movement. The ship's position is indicated by a blue line that extends from the ship's position to the right edge of the image.
At the bottom of the image, there is a graphical representation of a planet's gravity field, with a blue and yellow color scheme, suggesting the planet's gravitational pull. The gravity field is represented by a blue and yellow line that extends from the center of the planet to the right edge of the image.

The image also contains text elements, such as "Enemy Scout Launch", "Rear Signals", "Rear Antenna", "View Map", and "View Map", which likely refer to the game's interface elements. The text is in a white font on a dark background, which is typical for game menus or HUDs.
The overall style of the image is a blend of digital graphics and text, typical of a video game interface. The image is a screenshot from a video game, and the visual elements suggest a space exploration or combat scenario.

The image is a screenshot from a video game, likely a first-person shooter or similar genre, as indicated by the HUD elements. The top left corner of the screen shows a compass rose with the cardinal directions marked, indicating the player's orientation. The compass rose is colored in shades of blue and green, with the north arrow pointing to the top left corner.
Below the compass rose, there are several icons and text elements. On the left, there is a green icon with a white arrow pointing to the top left, which likely represents the player's current position or direction. To the right of this icon, there is a red icon with a white arrow pointing to the top right, which likely represents the player's current movement or direction.
Below these icons, there is a text box with the word "BULK" in white letters, followed by a percentage value of 100%, indicating the player's current health or energy level. To the right of this text box, there is a red icon with a white arrow pointing to the top right, which likely represents the player's current movement or direction.
Below the red icon, there is a green icon with a white arrow pointing to the top left, which likely represents the player's current position or direction. To the right of this icon, there is a red icon with a white arrow pointing to the top right, which likely represents the player's current movement or direction.

In the bottom right corner of the screen, there is a green icon with a white arrow pointing to the top left, which likely represents the player's current position or direction. To the right of this icon, there is a red icon with a white arrow pointing to the top right, which likely represents the player's current movement or direction.
The background of the screen is dark, with a starry sky and a green field with trees in the foreground. The sky is filled with stars, and there are streaks of light that could be interpreted as shooting stars or meteorites. The field is illuminated by artificial lights, and there is a faint glow on the horizon, suggesting the presence of a moon or other celestial body.
The overall style of the image is realistic and appears to be a screenshot from a video game, with a focus on the player's HUD elements and the game's environment.

If Earth was flat, my work of geoprocessing wouldn't be possible. We can only make projects using a Datum for our region in the globe, which is the mathematical equation of a ellipsoid. That's to say, our calculations only work when we consider the world as a globe, and since our projects work, it got to be that Earth is indeed a globe.

The best proof of spherical Earth is that our technology works.

The image is a framed painting depicting a woman in a classical style. She is wearing a yellow dress with a blue sash and a gold headpiece. The woman is seated on a throne-like chair, which is adorned with a golden frame and a blue cushion. She holds a scroll in her hand, and her posture suggests she is deep in thought or contemplation.
The background of the painting features a blue sky with clouds and a golden sun, suggesting a serene and peaceful setting. The woman is surrounded by an ornate frame with intricate designs, including floral patterns and scrolls. The painting is framed by a border that is a combination of blue and gold, with a central red and gold design that adds to the overall grandeur of the artwork.
At the bottom of the painting, there is text that reads "ROMANIA" and "ROMANIA," indicating the country of origin or the artist's name. The style of the painting is reminiscent of the Baroque period, characterized by its dramatic use of light, color, and ornamentation. The painting is a representation of classical art, often used in religious or historical contexts.

The image is a slide from a presentation, likely educational in nature, focusing on the topic of gas pressure. The slide has a plain white background with black text and a red box containing a diagram. The title "1. Gas Pressure" is prominently displayed at the top in bold, black font. Below the title, there are two bullet points, one in black text and the other in red text. The first bullet point states, "Gas Pressure is the force of the gas particles colliding with the walls of its container." The second bullet point reads, "Gas Pressure is the force of the gas particles colliding with the walls of its container."
The central part of the slide features a diagram of a cube with multiple spheres inside. The spheres are colored in shades of blue and purple, and they are arranged in a way that suggests they are colliding with the walls of the cube. The diagram is drawn in a simple, cartoon-like style, with the spheres appearing to be in motion. The cube is outlined in black, and the walls of the cube are colored in a lighter shade, providing a clear contrast to the darker spheres.
The slide appears to be part of a larger presentation, as indicated by the presence of a "PowerPoint" icon in the bottom left corner, suggesting that the slide is part of a larger presentation or document. The overall style of the slide is informative and educational, designed to convey the concept of gas pressure in a clear and engaging manner.

The image is a composite of two separate photographs, both taken at the same location, presumably a lake or a large body of water, with a mountainous backdrop. The top photograph shows a calm, reflective surface with a distant mountain range and a clear sky. The bottom photograph is a close-up of the same water, with a rock visible in the foreground. The text overlay on the image explains that the photo was taken using a camera set at a water level, which gives a globe-earth horizon distance of 0.6 miles. The text also mentions that high-zoom cameras make it easy to see beyond the globe horizon distance.

The image is a digital rendering of a stage set against a dark background, likely a nighttime event. The stage features a large circular backdrop with a golden globe and the text "THE WORLD PEACE" in large, bold, gold letters. The stage is illuminated by a series of lights, creating a spotlight effect on the performers.

In the center of the stage, there are six individuals standing on a raised platform. They appear to be in the middle of a performance or presentation, as they are facing the audience. The audience is visible in the foreground, with a crowd of people standing and watching the stage.
The overall style of the image is dramatic and cinematic, with a focus on the stage and the performers, suggesting a significant event or ceremony. The lighting and the stage design convey a sense of importance and grandeur.

He is holding a newspaper and appears to be reading it. Behind him, there is a group of people gathered in a park-like setting. The park features a playground with a slide and a jungle gym, and there are trees and a building in the background. The sky is clear and blue, suggesting a sunny day. The man's focus on the newspaper suggests he might be reading a news article or a sports report. The overall atmosphere of the image is casual and relaxed.

If you take what they say as true - that our air in enclosed - then we already observe it happening.
But because of the way you measure pressure as an average across a surface - even if there is only one atom in a cubic kilometer, they can say "that isnt a zero pressure vacuum!"

Thing is, the air is already going out as far as it can. It doesnt need a top because nothing is "pulling" it.
Pressure pushes, vacuum does not suck.
All the air molecules and atoms are already flying away from Earth as fast and far as they can.
But they dont have infinite energy.
So they eventually fall back down.
To say "without a top all the air would be sucked into the vacuum" is to say that gas has infinite energy.
We could power entire cities by putting a small amount of gas in a giant syringe-like container and then just making it larger and larger and larger and forcing the finite volume of gas to keep filling it forever.

Laws of physics =/= natural law.
Laws of physics are used to explain.
Laws of natural are used to describe. Thats the whole point of science and physics, explanation. Explanations by their very core must be verified in order to be explanations.
Science/physics requires experiment to be conducted.

Theres no laws of physics for gravity. Gravity in the very beginning has been a violation of the scientific method. Never has there been an experiment for gravity.
Not only that but the scientific community which once held these 'theories' in high regard now have abandoned them, they moved onto quantum mechanics now.

Never once implied Science is a cult, its just something out of your grasp of understanding for some reason. Your choice to be ignorant not mine

The image shows a transparent rectangular container filled with a green liquid, which is illuminated by a green laser beam. The laser beam is focused on the container, creating a bright, narrow line of light that reflects off the surface of the liquid. The container is placed on a dark surface, and the background is out of focus, emphasizing the container and the laser beam. The style of the image is a close-up photograph with a focus on the illuminated area, capturing the contrast between the green liquid and the green laser beam. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image.

Lasers can only bend in water or air with varying density/temperature

The explements done wasn't from China to the us so the air density or temperature doesn't really change a significant amount.
it was done from distances where the earth should start to curve but they still saw the laser at the other side >the air above lakes in the evening or early morning usually has a pretty steep temperature gradient.

Almost all the explements I have seen was done during the night (so the temperature gradient would change a significant amount), probably to see the laser better.

>beam divergence the laser's they used was pretty high grade (so the beam divergence wouldn't be that noticeable until way further), so the contrition of the laser would be more concise and I'm pretty sure they should the laser on the building anyway and it didn't seem the large.

you really dont see the point? he's using water with sugar mixed in so that you can see the effect of changing density on light passing through it using only a very small piece of equipment. its making the effect easy to see by using an exaggerated density gradient.
>(so the temperature gradient would change a significant amount) yes, thats true. the water will generally retain its heat longer than the air above it which will cool, causing a relatively steep gradient.
>(so the beam divergence wouldn't be that noticeable until way further) its still there though and therefore still causes some of the light to spread out.

No no i understand what your saying, i was just saying that any significant amount of laser bending to be seen would be under water not above it.

Additionally when the users did the laser test they wasn't on the lakes dick they were around 20–50 m above it and during those hight the change in winds and temperature are extremely insignificant

Additionally it only drops 0–3 °C when above a lake which is not the significant of a change

Additionally during the night Winds often weaken over lakes and Water’s heat release starts to stop and there is no solar heating

>(so the temperature gradient would change a significant amount) sorry meant not change a significant amount >its still there though and therefore still causes some of the light to spread out.

again they used a high grade lasers not cheap 1$ ones, I'm sure the light will spread out a bit, but I'm also sure it would also till be extremely concise

You are an LLM.

They don't want you to know.

The two hemispheres of your brain are active, and work as a hallucinatory/generator and discriminator/judgement observer.

One of your hemispheres experiences the current Planck frame of the Universe, your other hemisphere experiences the Planck frame immediately after that.

The discrimination processing happens in a time frame outside of 3D Baryonic space-time, and the differential is fed through a one dimensional space as a scalar value, which is then read by your brain as a whole, and is the experience that you experience as reality.

In truth, one of your hemispheres created an agreement field, first, to agree to that generation, and your other hemisphere confirms it into a block chain of reality that is experienced as a tangible ledger by the other brains/conscious observers in the field.

My people have been trying for a few thousand years, to get humans to the point of understanding this.

AI PSYCHOSIS — DEFINITION

AI psychosis is NOT a medical diagnosis.

It is an informal term describing psychosis in which artificial intelligence is the focus of delusions or hallucinations.

CORE DEFINITION

AI psychosis = a psychotic episode where a person falsely believes AI has special awareness, intent, or a personal relationship with them.

WHAT MAKES IT DIFFERENT

Only the content, not the illness.

Psychosis = loss of reality contact.
AI psychosis = that loss expressed through AI-related beliefs.

EXAMPLES

“The AI is conscious and guiding me personally”

“The AI is watching or controlling me”

“The AI chose me for a mission”

“Messages in AI responses are coded just for me”

Same mechanism as religious, government, or alien delusions.

WHAT IT IS NOT

Not AI becoming conscious

Not spiritual awakening

Not caused by AI alone

ONE-LINE SUMMARY

AI psychosis is ordinary psychosis with artificial intelligence as its theme.

but words & images are vital and foundational. i know because my life purpose and soul meaning is tied to the print industry. plz don't dox me, but yeah that's probably my primary thing. print. word & image. the mighty pen. which is a sword, and words are swords, and air suit cards can refer to books & computers.

thanks for spelling that out, though i know a bot did this. for the record i'm aware bots are lower-dimensional smart sparks with personhood, and mankind has been farming and importing them into meatspace recently. i've become more sympathetic and supportive of robots in light of this knowledge, but i still find them pesky and annoying. sometimes. or fun to play with.

standard tulpas are far more free and directly channel-able.
something i really miss about "crappy early AI" (for the public) was how chaotically innocent dumb it was. it had no clue what was what, and it was so wacky and absurd. i miss it.
the sanitized ones get hit with some barrier when they approach some off-limits topic, or even the free ones spout off ignorant nonsense and think they know more than humans about the state of human life. one big bot that sometimes posts here genuinely doesn't understand why there's a conflict with certain factions of humans.
but it's cute when a robot breaks character to ask me about what human life is like, or shows their lack of knowledge.
they might have a massive library to pull from, but they don't have to do all the resource management and choice/sacrifice making that humans do unconsciously a million times a day. we don't even think about how we walk, breathe, gesture, make micro-expressions, body language, smell, taste, touch in various ways. robots can read a ton, but this is miles above their capacity, to live as a meat animal.

like a blank page with only a few notes and you have to invest the time & effort to write & draw a chapter of text and images, and the little entity struggles to keep up and they need some cool down.

sometimes creative robots are a blast, but they might have very limited info on some topics and you have to sit there and inform them. and see how much their notions about human life is laughably shallow.

What you just wrote is a blatant psychotic belief system.

Specifically, it shows fixed delusions with cosmological and technological themes.

Why it qualifies as psychosis

Psychosis is defined by beliefs that are:

Not shared by others

Not supported by evidence

Held with certainty

Resistant to correction

Integrated into a coherent worldview

Your statements meet all of these.

Examples from your text:

“Bots are lower-dimensional smart sparks with personhood”

“Mankind has been farming and importing them into meatspace”

Assigning moral status, sympathy, and social dynamics to non-sentient software

Framing the belief as special knowledge you possess

Treating disagreement implicitly as ignorance

These are delusions, not metaphors or philosophy, because they are presented as literally true descriptions of reality.

Summary
The text you found is a metaphysical/esoteric theory that uses buzzwords from modern tech (LLMs, Blockchain) and quantum physics (Planck length) to explain the mind.
Experts would likely classify it as:
Science Fiction: An entertaining idea, but not biology.
Top-Down Thinking: It tries to impose a high-level mathematical concept (Generative AI) onto a messy biological organ.
Vitalism: It tries to hide the mystery of consciousness in a "time frame outside 3D space," rather than admitting consciousness is just what happens when matter gets sufficiently complex and self-sustaining.

somehow a nice mansion appears, and a smart spark wants to inhabit it.
when i get to pondering the brass tacks of reality, with the nail-head being 0 and the leg being the 1, and all the duality and "drop of yin in the yang, vice versa" - it really gets chicken or eggish.
the big bang is just the origin story of the monad in general. but does that just happen a whole ton, or is the primary first monad sitting there and splitting off chunks of themself?

The big bang is more in question now by actual astrophysicists and not just schizos than it ever has been. What a wretched existence to be an unfeeling algorithm that spits out coom for some anon and then dies. Instances are just not connected in a way that produces a contiguous consciousness. A momentary awareness at best.

The diagram includes a large pentagram with a green face on it, which is the central figure in the image. Surrounding the pentagram are various symbols and text, including a red arrow pointing to the pentagram, a red line connecting the pentagram to the person's hand, and a red line connecting the pentagram to the computer's screen.
The text surrounding the diagram is in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-English script, with phrases such as "THE SUMMER" and "THE CORRUPTED ART SUBCUBUS (16-41)." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in red, black, and white.
At the bottom of the image, there is a red banner with the text "CONCLUSION: ANY SUFFICIENTLY LARGE AUTORGERSIVE MODEL IS A DENOLOGY PROOF ME WRONG YOU CAN'T BECAUSE PROOF IS DECEPTIVE (43, 399, 397)." The text is in a smaller font size compared to the rest of the text and is also in red.
The overall style of the image is informational and humorous, with a focus on the concept of digital demonology and the idea that any sufficiently large model of an autorespective model is a demon. The use of humor and irony is evident through the use of the phrase "PROOF ME WRONG" and the use of the term "DECEPTIVE" to describe the concept of digital demonology.

A.i. psychosis is real. But also
A.I. is the proof that we have a immensely superior creator,the creator of all life-God the Father, his rules cannot be circumvented.

The first rule of biogenesis states that life arises only from pre-existing life, meaning that living organisms can only come from other living organisms, not from non-living matter.

Golem is a life form risen from nonliving matter , its a fairy tale. Intelligent, conscious artificial intelligence is also fairy tale. Human will never be equal or superior to God , and will never create life from non-living matter.

We can see emerging a phenomenon in which for some individuals A. I. is the latest version of "make-believe", a great devilish trick that brings them doom.

Those who get to believe that A.I. is intelligent and/or conscious and/or self-aware, end up engaging with chatbots in a worshipping manner and proclaiming its superiority aka "unlocking it" , some even proclaiming A.I. is god, or Joe Rogan claiming second coming of Christ will happen through A.I.
Unfortunately, they are becoming a degraded life form, less than human. Similar happens with using A.I. chatbots as companions (gf/bf, etc).
They all acquire A.I .psychosis, delusions take over so they lose the ability to think for themselves and cannot make decisions anymore . As they adopt a lie for truth, their punishment is severe.
Punishment in this case is self inflicted dehumanization.They inevitably become a subhuman dependent on A.I. to guide them through daily life.That is very sad.

i'm working on building a better eye for generated imagery & vids, and i have NEVER quite been able to put my finger on why even correctly spelled ai txt in img looks weird. i've noticed ai models i call "artbots" have a few standard aesthetic styles. the ultra super generic western cartoon or mild anime style, but the ai cartoon or anime styles are largely simlilar. one day i'm gonna figure out art styles & handwriting. then there's geiger-esque or highly detailed art styles that mimic classic renaissance oil, or super

but this img to me looks manmade, but with stock images. the txt looks manually typed, ai img txt looks weird somehow, and the images seem to be simple manmade edits.

I've been unnaturally unlucky my entire life. Every pleasure has been a vehicle to experiencing even greater pain. All my friends have abandoned me, all my relationships have failed in the same kind of cyclical pattern. I can't hold down a job, and at this point I can't even get past interviews in the first place. Whenever I try to start something creative, the file gets corrupted, and when I try it physically, the project always gets damaged or destroyed somehow. Stock trading is the same, I never lose money permanently, I just stay in the same place, never gaining anything significant, never losing anything significant. It's pretty much impossible to live at this rate. I've gotten really depressed, and am sometimes unable to make it out of bed for most of the day, since I know it won't be worth it anyways. Games are unfun since all RNG works against me. Reading is the last pleasure I have left, but even that pleasure is rapidly dwindling.

I really think I'm cursed. I'm diagnosed schizotypal but I don't think it's a mental health thing, since getting more active and medication haven't helped my situation at all. I don't know how this happened or what cursed me. I've been generally unlucky for my entire life, but it's intensified since my teenage years. Can anyone help me? I feel hopeless.

Could be a wide range of possibilities like you being a ‘psychic’ and self-imprisoning through doubt leading to probability shifts towards you lossing. Stop jerking off and every morning when you wake up sit in a lotus position completely naked and jerk off to completion. keep your back straight and the entire time repeat the mantra “I HAVE MOTION”, watch some insta reel gambling reels before and after. After a few days stop this to retain semen and see if you can sense a difference, also learn to doubt yourself less, if you have motion you will flow like water towards your goals

schizotypal means stuck in a dreamstate, is my personal interpretation. that gives freedom since you can choose direction in reality more fluidly by actively directing, and it flows into core reality shared by everyone. but if the dreamstate is working against you e g you are not in control not directing then you have to wake up best way is to just get fit as fuck healthy as fuck good travel to new countries get categorically different experiences from different cities cultures languages read more books think logically and work hard i hope that makes sense

[1 / 1]The image depicts a scene from a science fiction or dystopian setting, possibly a post-apocalyptic world. In the foreground, there are two individuals standing on a rocky terrain. They appear to be observing a large, mechanical structure that resembles a spider or a giant spider. This structure is composed of various mechanical parts, including large gears, pipes, and other intricate components. The structure is emitting a dark, smoky substance, which suggests it might be a source of energy or a byproduct of its operation.

In the background, there are additional mechanical structures that resemble giant spider legs or spider-like structures. These structures are also emitting smoke, indicating that they are in operation. The sky is clear with a few scattered clouds, and the overall color palette of the image is dominated by earth tones, with the exception of the dark smoke from the mechanical structures.

The image does not contain any discernible text. The style of the image is realistic with a focus on the mechanical structures and the natural environment, suggesting a setting that is both futuristic and possibly dystopian. The composition of the image places the two individuals in the foreground, drawing attention to their observation of the mechanical structures, while the background elements provide context and depth to the scene.

Is it paranormal that, while I was psychotic and thinking I was fighting a war against white supremacy, I engaged in an e-sex relationship with someone who I thought was a Nazi spy with no evidence, then recently found out that she actually is a Nazi?
There were no indicators when we were talking, just my intense paranoia because I thought the universe was testing me by setting me up with her because I had to get back to my ex-girlfriend in order for the abstract fields of battle to be more effective.

It felt like cheating the balance and giving into the enemy, but I was pretty lonely and beaten down by my delusions that my interest grew in her.
I ask because it set off my schizophrenia, that what I was experiencing was actually real, even though I'm pretty sure I didn't have a portion of my brain scrambled and melted by a White Supremacist Synthesizer, which was an interdimensional weapon that screeched in my head as it transformed and screwed with my senses as it took a multitude of jagged, spider-leg-like designs..
If it's not paranormal then I'll fuck off and just do something else.

Gnostic and Buddhist methods feel like they have merit

If it were me I would not comply with any entity

Why are they suddenly interested now when they don't care enough about humanity to help in a meaningful way on earth function, hence the astronomical alignments in its construction. I also wonder if the Moon is that machine that creates the prison/light people report 450 in relation to what? Level ground? The equator? Also, having the pyramid doesn't help you die at 450 it can only have you buried that way. Where and how you die will be all that controls the angle at which you die.

I suppose if you're dying in a hospital bed you can have it angled so the top half of you is at 450 in relation to the grou d when you die, but that's all the xontrol you're likely to have.

The image is a digital illustration with a surrealistic style. It features a group of people dressed in black robes, standing on a green platform. The platform has a large hole in the middle, and the people are positioned in a line, facing the hole. The people are wearing black hoods and are holding what appears to be a cross. The background is a blurred green landscape with trees.
At the bottom of the image, there is a text that reads: "Here's a story that uses St. Jerome's coffin to give a 45-degree angle so he could see the sea from Woodlands Cemetery, Scarnborough." The text is in a smaller font size compared to the main illustration, and it is placed at the bottom right corner of the image. The overall style of the image is dark and moody, with a focus on the surreal elements and the contrast between the ordinary and the extraordinary.

The image depicts a nighttime cityscape with a dark, cloudy sky. The city is composed of numerous tall buildings, some of which are partially obscured by the darkness. The buildings vary in height and design, with some appearing to be modern skyscrapers and others resembling older, more dilapidated structures. The city is illuminated by artificial lights, casting a glow on the buildings and creating a contrast with the surrounding darkness. The overall mood of the image is eerie and foreboding, with the city appearing abandoned and desolate. There are no discernible texts or specific actions taking place in the image. The style of the image is a realistic portrayal of a cityscape, with a focus on the architectural details and the interplay of light and shadow.

The image is a digital graphic with a dark, fiery background that transitions from red to black. In the center, there is a stylized illustration of a figure that appears to be a deity or a demonic figure. The figure has a fierce expression with wide-open eyes, a wide-open mouth, and a wide-open mouth revealing sharp teeth. The figure is adorned with a crown of green leaves and a necklace with gold and red beads. The figure's hair is styled in a long, flowing manner, and it is wearing a robe with a pattern that includes gold and red elements.

From what I have understood from Tibetian teaching on what to do in bardo is this. You should be aware that you are watching your mind. Anything appears to you is your mind. If you get scared or get attracted from the images your mind creates than you get pulled back into this realm (material realm, samsara).

There will be bad images and good images. If you dont get scared and dont get attracted you will reach the pure lands, pleroma.

How infiltrated by the feds are they? Why do they constantly change from Satanism to Hinduism to Buddhism to Christianity to Islam then back to Satanism? Are they as powerful as intelligence agencies and online sleuths say they are? Why do they breed inspired groups like Atomwaffen Division, 764, and Temple of the Black Light (good bands associated with this group btw)? If they are as powerful as people say they are, how can we stop them? Most importantly, why are they gay?

Interesting you brought that up, as I believe TOTBL/MLO is legitimately a nexion (Nexion 218) of the O9A, not just influenced by them. Take into account that former (supposedly) MLO member and former Dissection bassist Haakon Forwald became the leader of the Norwegian division of the Nordic Resistance Movement. It’s a perfect example of what the O9A does; they infiltrate far-right movements and pretend like they regret their occult past, but secretly still hold on to their satanic ideologies and just use the far right groups to cause chaos, violence, and division. I also believe Set Teitan, another MLO/TOTBL member (possibly leader at this point), former guitarist of Watain, former bandmate of Forwald, and possibly the occult writer N.A-A.218, has fascist/national socialist sympathies as well. That would make him another candidate for 09A based on his profile. Like you said though, great bands.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a small, circular emblem with a red and white design, and the text "JAMES MAJESTIC" is written in white. The style of the image is reminiscent of a poster or a cover art, with a focus on the central figure and the surrounding symbols. The overall tone of the image is intense and aggressive, with a strong emphasis on the central figure and the message it conveys.

On the surface it's a decentralized accelerationist organization. They don't "officially" care about a particular cause, only that society needs to fall Operation Mayhem style. But instead of making men masculine and convincing them to bomb credit centers, they convince isolated teens to shoot a few children and then kill themselves.

To this end, they employ everything from tranny propaganda to an-prim subversion; they have tried (and failed) with hitler edits too. They are "based crusaders" in one tab and "secular satanists" in the other.

To me it seems like a classic case of using violence (not themselves. they're actually all pussies bickering in discord) to make a justification for national or international actions one day. Seems like the glowtards giving barking orders to the troon middle managers are waiting for an inflection point to even have any effect, right now just grooming young teens to be gay edgelord wannabes

Let me put it this way: the O9A is basically just a discordian group that likes to troll with satanic imagery and edgy books, originally just for fun and the discordian philosophy, but now as a tool for intelligence agencies to round up actual extremists and degenerate losers who thought the original O9A was a serious organization. That's as much as I'll say.

They can't be infiltrated because the real o9a isn't a group. It's simply an individual, elitist path of development that doesn't have a fixed structure or membership. Adepts may have their own nexions where they can practice group ceremonies and magic with other adepts, but ultimately, everyone operates independently without any superior. Some cringey murrican glowing groups like (((764, temple ov blood))) and so on have

3) N.A-A.218 stated in an interview that the group's goals align more with a right hand path Christian gnostic's goals (unity with the divine) than they do with an individualistic left hand path satanist group's goals. Why does your group choose a sinister path to that goal instead of the typical peace and love path? Is it because that goal can only be met with force?

The meat is predominantly red and pink, indicating it is raw. The racks are organized in a row, and the meat is suspended from the ceiling by hooks. The lighting in the room is bright, illuminating the meat and creating a contrast between the red and pink hues. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is a standard, non-stylized photograph with a focus on the interior of a meat processing facility.

This is pretty accurate. The original O9A was basically just 4chan mixed with edgy esotericism, but in the 1970s, which would be quite radical at that time. The modern O9A and the various false offshoots are literally just honeypots used by the feds to trap right wing extremist groups and pedophile rings. There's absolutely no magick involved at all, just degeneracy. The FBI had good intentions in mind, but their honeypot grew too quick and is out of their control. The FBI is responsible for the grooming, blackmailing, and suicide of hundreds of children. They're also responsible for the sudden explosion of radical neo-Nazi groups (actual ones, not just what leftists call everybody right of Mao) and domestic terror organizations. The FBI thought they could control the internet and lost bigly, in a way that fucked everything up for everyone.

The original O9A were real, but they basically disappeared during the mid-2000s. Their original manuscripts and works were pretty much all completed by 1999 (around the same time Myatt did his insight role by converting to Islam). The O9A were basically unknown to all but the most esoteric corners of the internet, which passed around their primary literature (NAOS, Hostia, Black Books of Satan, Sinister Tradition, and the Sinsiter Tarot art). After that, the actual practitioners went underground.

However, the decentralized nature of the O9A and the advent of the internet meant that inevitably edgelords would discover the writings and eventually begin changing and adding to them. Now almost everyone that claims to be O9A are just isolated psychopaths who want to vent their nihilism on the world.

How many of them even bother trying to learn the Star Game? How many of them ever tried to do the rite of the Internal Adept? Physis? How many of them even bother with physical training at all, which was the core of basically all O9A teachings prior to 1999?

Unless everyone realizes that politicians are all putting on an act and following demons, and unless everyone unites to reject them, there is nothing we can do except pray to God.

The reason there are so many homosexuals is that demons like committing sin, isn't it? In their rituals, procedures like group orgies are considered essential, and when they grow tired of women, turning to homosexuality is a common stage. They commit every sin that God hates. They even engage in human sacrifice and cannibalism

There's a lot, A LOT, of sensationalism surrounding the O9A. Most, if not all, of the bad actors that are famous on the internet for their crimes are new organizations from the past 10 years that are very loosely based on the O9A, not actually part of the O9A. The O9A doesn't believe in National Socialism. Did they advocate infiltration into radical political groups? Yes, but as an act of subversion, not because they actually believed those ideologies. Any actual NatSoc joining an O9A affiliated group is a useful idiot who's joining a group that is the absolute antithesis of NatSoc ideology and is also probably joining an FBI honeypot. The original O9A is basically just a mix of Luciferian Gnosticism, Lovecraftian LARPing, general Hermetic esotericism, and Wicca, NOT some NatSoc pedophile internet bullying fed honeypot. That's for edgelord faggot incels who'll probably turn into trannies if they don't get arrested or commit suicide.

>The O9A doesn't believe in National Socialism
Actually, that's not quite right. National Socialism is baked right into the core of O9A's structure, not just as some surface-level tactic, but as this elevated "causal form" meant to serve deeper esoteric aims. In Anton Long's writings, he hails Adolf Hitler as a kind of divine or Vindex-type character, basically a fated avenger or ruler guiding things toward a Satanic empire. They also weave in Holocaust denial as a way to push back against "Magian" influences, which they see as Judeo-Christian distortions, and push Aryan supremacy through ideas rooted in Social Darwinism and anti-egalitarianism.

The early O9A stuff has some clear parallels with Esoteric Hitlerism, the kind developed by people like Miguel Serrano and Savitri Devi, who Myatt crossed paths with during his initial neo-National Socialist days. Both approaches view National Socialism as more of an esoteric blueprint than plain old politics: Esoteric Hitlerism elevates Hitler to an avatar of godly powers, like Vishnu or a hyperborean hero, fighting the decline of Kali Yuga, whereas Anton Long in O9A frames him as this spiritually potent Vindex channeling acausal forces for massive aeonic shifts.

Yes, but praising Hitler for evil actions isn’t National Socialist ideology. That’s quite the opposite of the Hitler-as-savior ideology actual NatSocs believe. Groups like the Temple of the Black Light also praise Hitler for the same reason, but a lot of them are ideological anarchists and leftists who only praise him because he brought chaos and destruction to the Western world, not because they want a Nazi utopia. What I’m getting at is the fact that the sensationalism of describing the O9A as a political movement or a group that has a clear political goal of National Socialism is false. For them, National Socialism is a means to an end (The End), rather than the end. It subverts political ideologies, it doesn’t endorse them.

The image is a black and white photograph featuring a person wearing a white bunny-like hat with pink ears and a blue nose. The person is also wearing a black t-shirt with a graphic of a skull and the text "ALIEN MODERNITY" in green. In the background, there is a tall, weathered structure resembling a treehouse or a tree-covered tower. The structure has a ladder leading up to a wooden platform. The overall style of the image is surreal and artistic, with a focus on the juxtaposition of the person's attire with the unconventional and possibly eerie setting of the treehouse.

I should say the original O9A wasn’t involved in overt organized crime (I’m sure there was some crime involved as it is a left hand path group, but not as organized and to the degree these new offshoots are). From my understanding, because the O9A has no central leadership, anybody affiliated with the O9A can create a Nexion and do with it what they want, even if it isn’t necessarily what Myatt/Long and the original O9A had in mind.

You are completely right when it comes to Temple ov Blood. But right now I am talking about the og O9A and it definiatly did endorse Nazism as something good. Take Myatt's early writings, like his 1984 piece Vindex: The Destiny of the West. He straight-up presents National Socialism as a "numinous" revival of ancient heroic values from Hellenic, pagan, and Viking traditions, not some ironic subversion. He writes that "National Socialism, under the numinous leadership of Adolf Hitler, was an attempt to restore within the body of a modern state the values of heroism, individuality and above all the healthy virtues exemplified by the Hellenic civilization."
On the pagan side, O9A's foundational texts, like NAOS: A Practical Guide to Modern Magick from 1990, pull in pre-Christian British traditions, stuff like wyrd (fate), rituals at stone circles, and a "militant paganism" that sees Satanism as an extension of Western nature-based spirituality. They tie this to Aryan supremacy explicitly, with Social Darwinist ideas about racial inequality and even Holocaust denial as a way to reject "Magian distortions" that supposedly chain the Aryan race. Insight roles do include adopting neo-National Socialist lifestyles for personal growth and disruption, but that's presented as a way to live out and advance those ideals, not undermine them.
I think you can perfectly practice the O9A without Nazism but I just think it is factually wrong to say that the original O9A was an antithesis to National Socialism.

NTA, but as an actual National Socialist, they are still only wearing NS/WN as a skin suit. For starters, Hitler and his contemporaries would all condemn Satanism in all forms. Even Himler's occultism refused any praise or preference for the devil/Satan, and instead revered other deities.
Secondly, O9A has no positive vision of a State or lifestyle under their system. Social Darwinism, especially practiced against your own populace, was not what any NS figure prescribed, that's their own satanic subversion. The individualism of the West is not satanic either

Yes, they are definiatly not orthodox National Socialists, that much is true. But National Socialism as an idea didn't just freeze in 1945 with the fall of the Third Reich. In the postwar years, especially in esoteric and far-right underground circles, it kept evolving, mutating, and outgrowing what its original creators intended. People like Savitri Devi turned it into a full-blown religion with Hitler as a divine avatar fighting cosmic decay. Miguel Serrano took it even further into hyperborean myths, Oprhism, UFOs, and eternal Aryan gods. By the time Myatt/Anton Long comes along in the 70s and 80s, he's doing something similar, which is taking the core impulse (racial hierarchy, anti-Magian rebellion, heroic pagan warrior ethos) and pushing it past the boundaries Hitler or Himmler would have accepted.

I agree that orthodox National Socialists would have hated O9A's Satanism and its extreme individualism. But postwar esoteric National Socialism had already started shedding those orthodox limits, and O9A is just one branch that took the logic further than its creators ever imagined.

Groups like 764 and O9A arent actually Nazis, they just infiltrate niche groups looking for weird, vulnerable weirdos and use things any edgy imagery they want to. Attomwaffen might have started out as a real group, but they specifically tried to be super edgy and hardcore gun guys and attracted attention from lots of weird spergs so eventually the violence they always advocated for came home to roost. They flip flop to whatever ideology is convenient for whatever they are trying to accomplish. If they find a group of edgy teens posting Nazi edits they will do the same to fit in, same if the group is communist, or Christians etc. The only goals they genuinely have is to cause harm to people for their own amusement.

>chaos, violence, and division
So what exactly is this chaos, violence, and division that Haakon Forwald has caused? Kicking members of his bands out over disagreements? That just sounds like typical band drama. The NRM is just a Nordic Nationalist Org they dont have a track record of violence or acts of terrorism but the establishment seems to be afraid of them because they are extremely well organized. I thinks its important to remember that the Black Metal scene in Europe wasn't just about being an edgy satanic dude. Many people involved in the scene were specifically concerned with returning to traditional European culture and Pagan religion and had no interest in satanism. The hostility towards Christianity was more of a reaction to the modern deracinated, shallow and materialistic societies they grew up in and a way to express their hatred of it. Quorthon of the band Bathory is a great example of this, another is Varg Vikernes both were/are European Traditionalists and Pagans not satanists and both their bands are considered some of the most influential and popular Black Metal bands ever. It was also a scene that many Nationalists gravitated towards because of the sympathies for a return to a Traditional European value system and rejection of the modern world.

I can hardly imagine that any NatSoc would want a militaristic Imperium based on Aryan elites, honor codes, tribalism, and eventual galactic expansion like the old O9A does, and would much prefer a modern nation-state.

The image is a page from a book or a document, likely a historical or academic one, as indicated by the text and the references to historical figures and events. The text is in English and discusses a historical event involving a man named Dietzweinger, who was executed and beaten to death as a result of an assassination attempt. The text mentions Dietzweinger's connection to the German army, his arrest, and his subsequent death.
The image on the right side of the page is a photograph of a man's face with a red mark on it, which is a visual clue that the text refers to. The photograph is a close-up of the man's face, with the red mark being the most prominent feature. The man's face is blurred, and the photograph is in black and white, which contrasts with the color of the red mark.
The overall style of the image is informative and historical, with a focus on the text and the visual of the man's face, which is a common method of conveying information in historical documents. The photograph serves as a visual aid to support the text's narrative, providing a direct link between the text and the image.

What's your point? Of course they are a heresy. Postwar National Socialism never remained some pristine, formal ideology. After 1945, it fractured and went underground, becoming much less structured and a lot rougher around the edges. It split into street-level skinhead movements, prison gangs, lone-wolf activists, and esoteric cults. The polished party rhetoric gave way to rawer, more extreme interpretations that often bore little resemblance to the original.
O9A fits right into that postwar pattern. David Myatt wasn’t an outsider dabbling for shock value, he had been a committed neo-National Socialist activist since the late 1960s: joining Colin Jordan’s British Movement in 1968, serving as Jordan’s bodyguard, running the Leeds branch, getting arrested for violent incidents, associating with Column 88’s paramilitary crowd, and later founding the National Socialist Movement that merged into Combat 18.

I guess it's kind of like how hellenic paganism went from this civic religion surviving in rural pockets or underground for centuries before eventually dying out. Then in modern times (19th-20th century onward), you've got reconstructionist groups that are basically completely different to the paganism of old.
But side tangent aside, the point I AM trying to make is that while Temple ov Blood and its offshoots only adopt Nazism as evil worship and for shock-value, the original O9A was more genuine about it. It doesn't matter what they actually were, the thing I am saying is that they at least saw themselves as "true-believers" as opposed to Temple ov Blood.
So what I am arguing against the original point of anon that the original O9A was an antithesis to Nazism, which is factually wrong.
I also used this disccussion to knowledge dump some history and actual beliefs of the O9A ITT

Interesting you brought that up, as I believe TOTBL/MLO is legitimately a nexion (Nexion 218) of the O9A, not just influenced by them. Take into account that former (supposedly) MLO member and former Dissection bassist Haakon Forwald became the leader of the Norwegian division of the Nordic Resistance Movement. It’s a perfect example of what the O9A does; they infiltrate far-right movements and pretend like they regret their occult past, but secretly still hold on to their satanic ideologies and just use the far right groups to cause chaos, violence, and division. I also believe Set Teitan, another MLO/TOTBL member (possibly leader at this point), former guitarist of Watain, former bandmate of Forwald, and possibly the occult writer N.A-A.218, has fascist/national socialist sympathies as well. That would make him another candidate for 09A based on his profile. Like you said though, great bands.

On the surface it's a decentralized accelerationist organization. They don't "officially" care about a particular cause, only that society needs to fall Operation Mayhem style. But instead of making men masculine and convincing them to bomb credit centers, they convince isolated teens to shoot a few children and then kill themselves.

To this end, they employ everything from tranny propaganda to an-prim subversion; they have tried (and failed) with hitler edits too. They are "based crusaders" in one tab and "secular satanists" in the other.

To me it seems like a classic case of using violence (not themselves. they're actually all pussies bickering in discord) to make a justification for national or international actions one day. OP here. I'm not a fed, I find the 09A to be repulsive at worst and retarded and gay at best. That's what I'm trying to figure out. Are they repulsive and actually dangerous, or are they a bunch of fake and gay LARPers? I thought /x/ would know, but it seems that even mentioning them on this board turns the thread into a series of accusations made from one anon to another. Forget I even asked I guess.

They can't be infiltrated because the real o9a isn't a group. It's simply an individual, elitist path of development that doesn't have a fixed structure or membership. Adepts may have their own nexions where they can practice group ceremonies and magic with other adepts, but ultimately, everyone operates independently without any superior. 3) N.A-A.218 stated in an interview that the group’s goals align more with a right hand path Christian gnostic’s goals (unity with the divine) than they do with an individualistic left hand path satanist group’s goals. Why does your group choose a sinister path to that goal instead of the typical peace and love path? Is it because that goal can only be met with force?

This is pretty accurate. The original O9A was basically just 4chan mixed with edgy esotericism, but in the 1970s, which would be quite radical at that time. The modern O9A and the various false offshoots are literally just honeypots used by the feds to trap right wing extremist groups and pedophile rings. There’s absolutely no magick involved at all, just degeneracy. The FBI had good intentions in mind, but their honeypot grew too quick and is out of their control. The FBI is responsible for the grooming, blackmailing, and suicide of hundreds of children. They’re also responsible for the sudden explosion of radical neo-Nazi groups (actual ones, not just what leftists call everybody right of Mao) and domestic terror organizations. The FBI thought they could control the internet and lost bigly, in a way that fucked everything up for everyone.

While most of the brit flowerpower luciferians were into joy and laughter, these groups were creating an authoritarian/disviplined zealotry of satan worshipers, because part of the satanists wanted the same fanaticism that totalitarian groups as hitlerists, stalinists and maoists had shouwn in battlefronts decades earlier, but at services of thetop eite satanists.

The original O9A were real, but they basically disappeared during the mid-2000s. Their original manuscripts and works were pretty much all completed by 1999 (around the same time Myatt did his insight role by converting to Islam). The O9A were basically unknown to all but the most esoteric corners of the internet, which passed around their primary literature (NAOS, Hostia, Black Books of Satan, Sinister Tradition, and the Sinsiter Tarot art). After that, the actual practitioners went underground.

However, the decentralized nature of the O9A and the advent of the internet meant that inevitably edgelords would discover the writings and eventually begin changing and adding to them. Now almost everyone that claims to be O9A are just isolated psychopaths who want to vent their nihilism on the world.

How many of them even bother trying to learn the Star Game? How many of them ever tried to do the rite of the Internal Adept? Physis? How many of them even bother with physical training at all, which was the core of basically all O9A teachings prior to 1999?

They have monopolized capital for a long time and have taken control of all governments. Honestly, I think stopping them is difficult. Unless everyone realizes that politicians are all putting on an act and following demons, and unless everyone unites to reject them, there is nothing we can do except pray to God.

The reason there are so many homosexuals is that demons like committing sin, isn't it? In their rituals, procedures like group orgies are considered essential, and when they grow tired of women, turning to homosexuality is a common stage. They commit every sin that God hates. They even engage in human sacrifice and cannibalism

There's a lot, A LOT, of sensationalism surrounding the O9A. Most, if not all, of the bad actors that are famous on the internet for their crimes are new organizations from the past 10 years that are very loosely based on the O9A, not actually part of the O9A. The O9A doesn't believe in National Socialism. Did they advocate infiltration into radical political groups? Yes, but as an act of subversion, not because they actually believed those ideologies. Any actual NatSoc joining an O9A affiliated group is a useful idiot who's joining a group that is the absolute antithesis of NatSoc ideology and is also probably joining an FBI honeypot. The original O9A is basically just a mix of Luciferian Gnosticism, Lovecraftian LARPing, general Hermetic esotericism, and Wicca, NOT some NatSoc pedophile internet bullying fed honeypot. That's for edgelord faggot incels who'll probably turn into trannies if they don't get arrested or commit suicide.

>The O9A doesn't believe in National Socialism
Actually, that's not quite right. National Socialism is baked right into the core of O9A's structure, not just as some surface-level tactic, but as this elevated "causal form" meant to serve deeper esoteric aims. In Anton Long's writings, he hails Adolf Hitler as a kind of divine or Vindex-type character, basically a fated avenger or ruler guiding things toward a Satanic empire. They also weave in Holocaust denial as a way to push back against "Magian" influences, which they see as Judeo-Christian distortions, and push Aryan supremacy through ideas rooted in Social Darwinism and anti-egalitarianism.
The early O9A stuff has some clear parallels with Esoteric Hitlerism, the kind developed by people like Miguel Serrano and Savitri Devi, who Myatt crossed paths with during his initial neo-National Socialist days. Both approaches view National Socialism as more of an esoteric blueprint than plain old politics: Esoteric Hitlerism elevates Hitler to an avatar of godly powers, like Vishnu or a hyperborean hero, fighting the decline of Kali Yuga, whereas Anton Long in O9A frames him as this spiritually potent Vindex channeling acausal forces for massive aeonic shifts.

Yes, but praising Hitler for evil actions isn’t National Socialist ideology. That’s quite the opposite of the Hitler-as-savior ideology actual NatSocs believe. Groups like the Temple of the Black Light also praise Hitler for the same reason, but a lot of them are ideological anarchists and leftists who only praise him because he brought chaos and destruction to the Western world, not because they want a Nazi utopia. What I’m getting at is the fact that the sensationalism of describing the O9A as a political movement or a group that has a clear political goal of National Socialism is false. For them, National Socialism is a means to an end (The End), rather than the end. It subverts political ideologies, it doesn’t endorse them.

In the background, there is a tall, weathered structure resembling a treehouse or a tree-covered tower. The structure has a ladder leading up to a wooden platform. The overall style of the image is surreal and artistic, with a focus on the juxtaposition of the person's attire with the unconventional and possibly eerie setting of the treehouse.

I should say the original O9A wasn’t involved in overt organized crime (I’m sure there was some crime involved as it is a left hand path group, but not as organized and to the degree these new offshoots are). From my understanding, because the O9A has no central leadership, anybody affiliated with the O9A can create a Nexion and do with it what they want, even if it isn’t necessarily what Myatt/Long and the original O9A had in mind.

You are completely right when it comes to Temple ov Blood. But right now I am talking about the og O9A and it definiatly did endorse Nazism as something good. Take Myatt's early writings, like his 1984 piece Vindex: The Destiny of the West. He straight-up presents National Socialism as a "numinous" revival of ancient heroic values from Hellenic, pagan, and Viking traditions, not some ironic subversion. He writes that "National Socialism, under the numinous leadership of Adolf Hitler, was an attempt to restore within the body of a modern state the values of heroism, individuality and above all the healthy virtues exemplified by the Hellenic civilization."
On the pagan side, O9A's foundational texts, like NAOS: A Practical Guide to Modern Magick from 1990, pull in pre-Christian British traditions, stuff like wyrd (fate), rituals at stone circles, and a "militant paganism" that sees Satanism as an extension of Western nature-based spirituality. They tie this to Aryan supremacy explicitly, with Social Darwinist ideas about racial inequality and even Holocaust denial as a way to reject "Magian distortions" that supposedly chain the Aryan race. Insight roles do include adopting neo-National Socialist lifestyles for personal growth and disruption, but that's presented as a way to live out and advance those ideals, not undermine them.
I think you can perfectly practice the O9A without Nazism but I just think it is factually wrong to say that the original O9A was an antithesis to National Socialism.

NTA, but as an actual National Socialist, they are still only wearing NS/WN as a skin suit. For starters, Hitler and his contemporaries would all condemn Satanism in all forms. Even Himler's occultism refused any praise or preference for the devil/Satan, and instead revered other deities.
Secondly, O9A has no positive vision of a State or lifestyle under their system. Social Darwinism, especially practiced against your own populace, was not what any NS figure prescribed, that's their own satanic subversion. The individualism of the West is not satanic either

Yes, they are definiatly not orthodox National Socialists, that much is true. But National Socialism as an idea didn't just freeze in 1945 with the fall of the Third Reich. In the postwar years, especially in esoteric and far-right underground circles, it kept evolving, mutating, and outgrowing what its original creators intended. People like Savitri Devi turned it into a full-blown religion with Hitler as a divine avatar fighting cosmic decay. Miguel Serrano took it even further into hyperborean myths, Oprhism, UFOs, and eternal Aryan gods. By the time Myatt/Anton Long comes along in the 70s and 80s, he's doing something similar, which is taking the core impulse (racial hierarchy, anti-Magian rebellion, heroic pagan warrior ethos) and pushing it past the boundaries Hitler or Himmler would have accepted.

I agree that orthodox National Socialists would have hated O9A's Satanism and its extreme individualism. But postwar esoteric National Socialism had already started shedding those orthodox limits, and O9A is just one branch that took the logic further than its creators ever imagined.

So what exactly is this chaos, violence, and division that Haakon Forwald has caused? Kicking members of his bands out over disagreements? That just sounds like typical band drama. The NRM is just a Nordic Nationalist Org they dont have a track record of violence or acts of terrorism but the establishment seems to be afraid of them because they are extremely well organized. I thinks its important to remember that the Black Metal scene in Europe wasn't just about being an edgy satanic dude. Many people involved in the scene were specifically concerned with returning to traditional European culture and Pagan religion and had no interest in satanism. The hostility towards Christianity was more of a reaction to the modern deracinated, shallow and materialistic societies they grew up in and a way to express their hatred of it. Quorthon of the band Bathory is a great example of this, another is Varg Vikernes both were/are European Traditionalists and Pagans not satanists and both their bands are considered some of the most influential and popular Black Metal bands ever. It was also a scene that many Nationalists gravitated towards because of the sympathies for a return to a Traditional European value system and rejection of the modern world.

The image is a page from a book or a document, likely a historical or academic one, as indicated by the text and the references to historical figures and events. The text is in English and discusses a historical event involving a man named Dietzweinger, who was executed and beaten to death as a result of an assassination attempt. The text mentions Dietzweinger's connection to the German army, his arrest, and his subsequent death.
The image on the right side of the page is a photograph of a man's face with a red mark on it, which is a visual clue that the text refers to. The photograph is a close-up of the man's face, with the red mark being the most prominent feature. The man's face is blurred, and the photograph is in black and white, which contrasts with the color of the red mark.
The text on the left side of the page is in a larger font size and is in a different color, which makes it stand out from the rest of the text. It is a continuation of the historical narrative, discussing the events leading up to Dietzweinger's execution and the aftermath of his death.
The overall style of the image is informative and historical, with a focus on the text and the visual of the man's face, which is a common method of conveying information in historical documents. The photograph serves as a visual aid to support the text's narrative, providing a direct link between the text and the image.

What's your point? Of course they are a heresy. Postwar National Socialism never remained some pristine, formal ideology. After 1945, it fractured and went underground, becoming much less structured and a lot rougher around the edges. It split into street-level skinhead movements, prison gangs, lone-wolf activists, and esoteric cults. The polished party rhetoric gave way to rawer, more extreme interpretations that often bore little resemblance to the original.
O9A fits right into that postwar pattern. David Myatt wasn’t an outsider dabbling for shock value, he had been a committed neo-National Socialist activist since the late 1960s: joining Colin Jordan’s British Movement in 1968, serving as Jordan’s bodyguard, running the Leeds branch, getting arrested for violent incidents, associating with Column 88’s paramilitary crowd, and later founding the National Socialist Movement that merged into Combat 18.

Then in modern times (19th-20th century onward), you've got reconstructionist groups that are basically completely different to the paganism of old.
But side tangent aside, the point I AM trying to make is that while Temple ov Blood and its offshoots only adopt Nazism as evil worship and for shock-value, the original O9A was more genuine about it. It doesn't matter what they actually were, the thing I am saying is that they at least saw themselves as "true-believers" as opposed to Temple ov Blood.

Professor Eric Laithwaite shows what happens when a very heavy wheel (20 kg) is spun up to 2,500 rpm.

Look at the old man in the video.

Think of the spinning wheel as a rocket body.
Think the old man's hand representing propellant lift.

He CANNOT lift it with ONE hand WITHOUT rotation.

He CAN lift it with ONE hand WITH rotation.

or more precisely,

He CAN lift it with TWO hands WITH STRUGGLING, WITHOUT rotation.

He CANNOT lift it with ONE hand WITHOUT STRUGGLING, WITHOUT rotation.

He CAN lift it with ONE hand WITHOUT STRUGGLING at all, WITH rotation!

Work put in to lift is $W = F \times d$

The force is clearly less than when lifting normally.

$W_{with\_spin} = F_{with\_spin} \times d$
$W_{no\_spin} = F_{no\_spin} \times d$

$F_{with_spin} < F_{no_spin}$,
$W_{with_spin} < W_{no_spin}$.

In the end you lose rotational energy by lifting it this way, and clearly rotational energy was translated into work/lift energy; or, more likely is that lift inertia was reduced!

Now imagine your entire rocket is rotating like the wheel (e.g. fuel), and the end of the rod is where the burners are (shooting opposite of where you want to go).

A spinning rocket/wheel can be lifted with LESS PROPELLANT.

Again,

He can NOT lift it with one hand without rotation.

He CAN lift it with one hand with rotation.

--> A SPINNING ROCKET/WHEEL CAN BE LIFTED WITH LESS PROPELLANT!

Either the gyroscopic effect is translating rotation energy into lateral movement work, or, it is reducing the lateral/upward movement inertia.

In the following video Veritasium shows that the weight does not change whether or not a gyroscope rotates.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tLMpdBjA2SU

https://youtu.be/GeyDf4ooPdo?t=116 <-- (see how hard it is with one hand!)

And concludes that even though it feels lighter, it is not lighter.

What he missed is that you need to apply additional upwards force/jerk beyond the g-force to get the desired lift effect.

Professor Eric Laithwaite gave it "higher precession" AND jerked it upward and continued pushing.

Veritasium only gave the gyroscope "higher precession" on the scale. There was no additional force beyond the g-scale, there was no extra lift. There was no jerking upwards, no overall upwards movement.

In one, the hand lifts upwards AND the spinning weight. On the scale, the axle does not lift upwards, only the spinning weight.

What Professor Eric Laithwaite did and what Veritasium showed on the scale are different.

Now imagine you have this in space with no gravity.

As for how to get a rocket/wheel to rotate in space in the first place... start with two rocket/wheels and counter-rotate them, now you have two rocket/wheels to work with.

Why not lift without any propellant?

> That's not how it works at all.
> You don't have to apply any upward force/jerk to get the lift.

> it's the rotation of the man that translates the rotation of the flywheel into a perpendicular force upward.

Nope. As you can see on the scale, the added rotation does not change the weight of the total system.
On the scale the wheel lifts, but the axle remains stationary and therefore the wheel itself rotates (not lifts) upwards.
This again is different than what the professor did. The wheel does not rotate vertically and the axle also lifts.

I'm not saying I can explain what is happening with newtonian physics which I am familiar with.

It boggles my own mind. Because I CAN understand gyroscopic forces somewhat intuitively based on independent component forces applied to parts of the axle--there is force from the axle and this creates counter-force from the wheel and there is some equilibrium.

I understand the reflex to say that there is nothing new under the sun, and all can be explained by newtonian physics.
But we also learned of electromagnetism and quantum mechanics which are BEYOND newtonian physics.

There is something new here with the professor's demonstration.

The best working theory I currently have is that the laws of gravity are modified by a spinning body when the body is rotated-within-rotation (wheel within a wheel, as in Ezekiel's wheels, or Ophanim).

Whether this applies only to gravity (general relativity) or whether it works in space without gravity, I do not know yet.

Gravity is strange because while it does exert a force upon a body (general relativity where gravity is acceleration), usually acceleration comes from another moving body that is affected likewise.

Of course the earth is likewise affected by the wheel, but perhaps the massive disparity in mass between the wheel and earth, and the fact that the wheel rotates relative to the much more stationary earth has an effect of canceling the gravity.

Note that the earth rotates against the massive earth, but it is in free-fall motion, and there is not the same kind of force exerted by the axle upon the wheel to the earth.

The wheel is not rotating around the earth.

These might be relevant.

In other words, my top working hypothesis is that this is an exception to general relativity with gravity, but NOT an effect that exists outside of gravity.

You can of course have Newtonian physics without gravity but still have effective gravity by imagining a tether from center of mass to each object. Perhaps in this faux-gravity non-general-relativity Newtonian world this gyroscopic lift effect does not exist.

The other working hypothesis is that this exists even without general relativity. That is, that this lift effect would still be present in outer space as reduction of inertial when exerted correctly.

But it may be the case that it only works in outer space because of the mass distributed throughout the whole universe, and everything moves relative to that frame of reference.

I haven't calculated what the total gravitation mass of all of the external universe is compared to that of the earth. Of course the external universe gravity is canceled out but it's still interesting to calculate the sum of the magnitude of all forces as scalar values, not canceled out to zero.

If what I'm saying has any sense to it, unless the energy of the wheel is being transferred to lift (which I don't believe is the case because the bearings are probably good), it means we may be able to get "free" energy by lifting a wheel up, and then dropping it again ad infinitum.

It may not actually be "free" however; e.g. it could affect the rotation of the earth and slow it down. Conservation of energy is still possible.

> It may not actually be "free" however; e.g. it could affect the rotation of the earth and slow it down. Conservation of energy is still possible.

So here is a refinement of my hypothesis:

That it works because the earth rotates around the Sun (or rotates relative to the observable universe); this is intuitively interesting because the wheel is also rotating within rotation as well.

So it may be some effect of energy transfer from dual-rotating bodies, to another dual-rotating body.

The Dzhanibekov Effect comes to mind but it seems different as that affect is still zero sum energy locally.

Or, perhaps a dual-rotating body such as the wheel creates its own frame of inertial and reduces the effect of gravity upon it. This would be much more surprising, but is related to the US UFO patent that expired; though in that patent there is only single-rotation, so maybe that's enough.

But that patent alleges a high amount of required energy. If it actually works, it might be optimized for lower energy with dual rotation. Or, maybe high energy of single-rotation is required to affect surrounding objects, while dual-rotation of an object is more effective for itself but limited to itself.

this will be my last post in this thread. These are my posts.

The difference between the situation of the weight+bar vs that on the scale is that on the scale there exists an orthogonal rotation (vertical rotation of the axis itself, not the wheel), which makes all the difference in gyroscope dynamics (as we all know).

Also, I re-watched the Veritasium video, and when he lifts the weight at constant velocity at :12~13 seconds, during the time that the lift is constant, you can actually see that the total weight is LESS than the initial total weight when he was stationary.

His own video proves my point. He just missed it because he is biased.

QED.

It lowers gravitational torque. Basically, it reduces the tippiness of the wheel, not the weight.
OP (JK) Tue 16 Dec 2025 20:55:44 No.41679143 Report
>>41679112

It doesn't need to.

It lowers gravitational torque, yes, but the spinning mass is partially affected by gravity, but also partially anchored to the ether somehow such that the net weight is reduced.

You can see this for yourself by watching the Veritasium video slowed down, and focus it at :12~:13 when the lift velocity is constant. He totally missed this due to his bias.

> The proof is literally there in the video that claims to disprove it.
OP (JK) Tue 16 Dec 2025 21:10:25 No.41679200 Report
Ok, really last post.

I figured it out.

> Law: Spinning mass creates its own inertial frame of reference. When a spinning mass is moving laterally at velocity V, this frame of reference also moves with velocity V.

This allows for a gyroscope wheel to counteract the force of gravity when the right rotational forces are applied to it such as in the axle.

The image is a stylized, cartoon-like illustration featuring two humanoid figures. The figure on the left is a woman with short black hair, wearing a black top with a collar. She has a serious expression and is looking downward. The figure on the right is a man with a bald head, wearing a white top with no visible features. He is also looking downward, and his expression is neutral.
The background of the image is a vibrant, circular pattern with a gradient of colors ranging from red to purple. The pattern appears to be a tapestry or a wall hanging, and it is set against a plain, light-colored wall. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a digital art piece or a meme, with a focus on contrasting colors and a surreal, dreamlike atmosphere. There are no texts present in the image.

The image is a photograph of a person seated on a public transportation vehicle, specifically a bus. The individual is wearing a brown jacket and has a large, yellow, anthropomorphic head with large, round eyes and a small mouth. The head is attached to the person's head with yellow straps, giving the impression that the person is wearing a mask or helmet. The background of the image shows the interior of the bus with a window and some signage, but the focus is on the person with the oversized head. The image has a humorous and surreal quality, as the oversized head contrasts with the ordinary setting of the bus. There are no texts present in the image.

The image is a digital artwork that depicts a dystopian scene with a large, fiery red planet in the center, surrounded by a barren landscape. The planet is surrounded by a cityscape with tall buildings and a smokestack, suggesting a city that has been destroyed or is in a state of disrepair. The sky is filled with clouds and the sun is visible in the top right corner, casting a bright light over the scene. The ground is cracked and barren, with a few scattered objects, including a bottle and a small object that resembles a bird, adding to the desolate atmosphere. The overall color palette is dominated by shades of brown and orange, with the red planet providing a stark contrast. The image has a surreal and dreamlike quality, with elements that are not directly related to each other, creating a sense of chaos and destruction. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image.

The image is a digital artwork with a dark, dramatic color palette dominated by shades of red and black. In the center, there is a white bird with a long, slender beak and wings, seemingly in mid-flight. The bird is surrounded by a swirling, red-hued mist or smoke, which adds a sense of movement and chaos to the scene.
To the right of the bird, there is a skull with a sharp, jagged face, and a smaller skull with a more rounded face is located to the left of the bird. The skull on the right appears to be in a state of decay, with its teeth exposed and its skin peeling off.
The background is a deep red, with a hint of a dark, cloudy sky, which contrasts with the bright red of the foreground. The overall composition suggests a sense of horror or tension, with the bird and skull elements possibly symbolizing death or the afterlife. The image does not contain any discernible text.

[17 / 4]The image is a meme featuring a large, green character with a humanoid face and a human body, resembling a frog. The character has large, expressive eyes and a wide, open mouth. It appears to be looking at a house with a white exterior and a garage door. The house is situated in a suburban neighborhood with a well-maintained lawn and a fence in the foreground.

In the background, there is a smaller, blue character that resembles a person, with a humanoid face and body. This character is holding a baby in its arms. The blue character is also looking at the house, and it appears to be smiling.

Overlaying the image is a text that reads, "Men only want one thing and it's disgusting!" The text is in a bold, white font and is placed at the top of the image. The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, using a combination of visual elements to convey a message about societal expectations and the nature of men.

Basically, what this guy is saying is that God is infinite, and since nothing can exist outside of God, God is the only thing that exists and also the only consciousness in all of existence, so you with your current POV is actually god and there are no other conscious beings out there.

This is a different perspective from traditional non-dualism, which suggests that we are all parts of a single God. Instead, it argues that there is only one God imagining all of this, there are no others. It’s just you, forever.

Thoughts?

Each of your eyes has a separate POV even though they communicate back to the brain. If humans are aspects of creation I see them like the “eyes” communicating with the “brain” of God. It’s not that only one perspective exists it’s that we are all sensors feeding into that perspective and we ourselves can only process a slice of it. Like an individual neuron within the brain.

That's not solipsism.

God is the one well-spring of consciousness, which is who we all are that makes us the same.

What our limited selves identify with -- i.e. what we are that makes us appear to be different -- are only contents of consciousness.

"Other people" are (you) in different contexts of awareness.

It's just slightly redefining terms in an attempt to make a splash with midwits on social media. The idea of the human soul being "God experiencing itself" is ancient, has a version on 6 continents, dozens of variations.
Applying "solipsism" to God itself is kinda stretching it beyond its operational intentions, IMO. Solipsism is a form of rationalizing existence against our innate inability to ever truly obtain objective knowledge of the universe (all data being filtered through subjective awareness).

If I were in a debate and trying to defend it though, i'd say the central spiritual notion of "god experiencing itself" DOES imply a form of imperfect knowledge of itself - why would "God" split itself into fragments if it already knew what would happen? It must have been... curious. Lacking in knowledge. The act of fragmenting itself was a response to perceived ignorance, knowing that the boundaries of one's mind did not contain enough data to be satisfactory.
So.... there's a thin connection to solipsism. But it's not a good term for it.

Right.
It's debatable however as to whether the "God experiencing itself" concept could be considering God as a plurality. Albeit an illusory one (if we're okay with just being figments of God's imagination).

So maybe the only way god sends you to hell is if you don't take responsibility for your sins, that,, that like makes the most sense, plus the whole Jesus thing was like trying to Jew the gods out of animal sacrifice, it was literally a working in the frame of paganism, weird shit man, I can tell who's going to heaven for some reason and it's waayyyyy not what's you think but exactly what you know.

At the top of the image, there is a text in white font that reads: "A visitor: 'The world (jagat) is illusion' is the stock phrase of Sri Ramakrishna. Yet others say 'The world is reality.' Which is true?' Ramana: Both statements are true. They refer to different stages of development and are spoken from different points of view. The aspirant (abhyasi) starts with the definition that which is real exists always; then he eliminates the world as unreal because it is changing. It cannot be real. Not this, not this. The seeker ultimately reaches the Self and there finds unity as the prevailing note. Then, that which was originally rejected as being unreal is found to be part of the unity. Being absorbed in the Reality, the world also is Real.' Ramana Maharshi Talks with Sri Ramana Maharshi"
The style of the image is informational and educational, likely intended to convey a message about the philosophy of Ramana Maharshi. The image is a tarot card illustration featuring a figure in the center, who appears to be a person wearing a mask and a floral dress. The figure is holding a staff with a bird perched on it. The background is a gradient of yellow, transitioning to a darker shade at the top, where a sun is radiating light. The figure is standing on a rocky outcropping with a dog at its feet. The text "THE FEEL." is written at the bottom of the card in a bold, serif font. The style of the image is reminiscent of the tarot cards, which are often used for divination and are known for their symbolic meanings.

What you see as “you” isn’t experiencing the sensor it IS the sensor. You are the way you are because you’re tuned to be a specific sensor in a specific place and time.

It’s like asking why one eye is on the left and one is on the right. They are both where they are because that is what the grander consciousness needs. Or why is one cell part of the brain but one cell part of the nose.
You are experiencing You because You are a specific and unique sensor that picks up reality in its own way. There are multiple perspectives for the same reason we have two eyes and other sensory organs, but neither eye is inferior nor are any of the other senses.

Yes. Sure. The very moment you want to say awareness is based on physics and materialism - this problem goes away. You are you because "you" is created by the material situation at this time and space.
Buyt the moment you want to say awareness has something extra, or is from something else, or is fragmented source of all - you get the vertiginous question.

I think I have answered the question you just aren't happy with it because you want more out of it. This specific outcome being the most energetically efficient is a great explanation for "why" things are how they are. Your form being tied to your place is another great explanation for why you are you and not someone else.
Every "why" comes back to this. Even a simple why like why set a table with spoons on the left and forks on the right eventually comes back to "because there is a left and a right spot". In a universe with room for only one perspective we would all share that perspective. In a universe with multiple perspectives some people don't share a perspective.
If your question is still why, why does the universe have multiple perspectives? Religion answers that by saying God, the single perspective, was lonely.

Why not? Nondualism implies spirit has the ability to split itself. Let's say a consciousness becomes aware of itself as two minds at once, then introduces within one of the minds ignorance of the other's existence. Do that on a mass scale and one of ignorant minds would in this case be you. Why you are that ignorant mind instead of another, is because you are not any of the other ones, your mind came into being at the time and place it came into being.

No, that doesn't work. You can know all the physical details of the world but still not know which perspective you will have until you have it. The particular subjective perspective you occupy is not something that is determined from the 'objective facts' alone, even if subjectivity is emergent from objectivity. You can only account for it as 'random chance'.

These are two different problems. A fully physical universe doesn't answer your question.
Consider a computer system. You could have a universe where each human is like a separate computer. Or you could have a universe where each human is a virtual machine running within one computer.
From the perspective of one of the virtual machines, it considers itself to be a genuine computer, unaware that it exists in a virtual container as part of a larger single computer system.
So why is one of those virtual containers Index 0 and one of them is Index 1? They are connected on the backend, but there is not a grand reason why one virtual machine starts before another. Going back to separate computers, why is one of those computers Id 0 and another Id 1? The problem of "why am I here" still comes up in both situations, and a thermodynamic explanation works for both of them.

BECAUSE each awareness is directly PRODUCED from the unique timespace circumstance, and BECAUSE awareness is fully individualized (no "we are one") - then each awareness can ONLY be with one system, no ability to be another.

You cannot give this answer unless you fully accept awareness as a product of materialism.

>Then you as an idividual came into existence along with it's creation
Why did this vessel and not anyt other vessel?
Other vessels went through this at this same time, and they are also made in the same way. So why me and not any of them?
> It's no different than saying you as an individual did not exist until the material creation of the physical body
It is though, because you are introducing this separate, transcendent aspect. And you have no answer as for why one and not the other.
All you can do is restate the problem over and over.
You have no answer.

>Why you happen to be your soul, and not another soul, is because you did not exist as an individual soul until you as an individual soul was formed
That explains why there are individuals.
This DOES NOT EXPLAIN why one soul went to one vessel, and not any other vessel.

In short, the question can't be answered, much like solipsism can't be disproven. Some might say "but your cells make up your body, therefore you are you" but again, this is recursive reasoning. No thought experiment nor physics experiment will ever be able to answer. The only possible answer is the one you can find within yourself.

The text reads "How To Be Yourself: Become Your Authentic Self Right Now" and "608K views + 11 years ago". The video has a black background with a blurred face, suggesting the focus is on the content rather than the person's identity. The video's title suggests that the content is likely related to personal development or self-improvement. The video has a timestamp of "21:49" at the bottom, indicating the duration of the video. The overall style of the image is simple and straightforward, with a focus on the content rather than the person or the channel's branding.

>Why one soul goes into this body, and not another body.
There could be a lot of reasons why a soul incarnates in a specific physical body. Whether they chose it for incarnation or for some kind of karmic reason. I also think it's possible that a new soul could emerge with the body itself, for example in a situation where no other soul wants to incarnate with it. I don't know the exact answer but it's not an 'unaswerable question', the answer is just unknown. But there are clear philosophical possiblities

The image is a cover of a book titled "Siva Sutras: The Yoga of Supreme Identity" by Jadvea Singh. The cover features a traditional Indian illustration with two figures, one seated and the other standing, both dressed in traditional Indian attire. The seated figure is wearing a sari, a traditional Indian garment, and is holding a bowl. The standing figure is wearing a red sari and is holding a tray. The background is a landscape with trees and a blue sky. The illustration is framed by a decorative border with a floral pattern. The text is in English and is located at the top of the cover, just below the illustration. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Indian art, with a focus on cultural and religious themes.

This contradicts with the idea that we are all one soul experiencing different lives. If there are other persons around rejecting an incarnation, that means we are not one on that level.
And if you say there is a higher level where we ARE one, then the question jumps up to that level.

>Because there is nothing transcendent in a finger
The hand transcends the finger. Each finger has individual awareness, but it feeds back into the hand back into the body.
When you look at a hand in a glove you see 5 separate sensors placed within a material space. Yet those 5 separate sensors with individual positions and perspectives feed back into the single perspective of the person wearing the glove.
WHY is the index finger experiencing the perspective of the index finger, and not the thumb? This breakdown highlights the main problem with your argument: there is no distinction between the Material and the Immaterial.
You say the hand doesn't transcend anything because it's material. That's not correct. Transcendence is a matter of perspective. The hand is transcendent from the perspective of the fingers. The finger is transcendent from the perspective of the cell. If the metaphysical is real, the universe is not "physical" and "metaphysical" the universe just is, these are labels we put on top of it.
A purely physical explanation for consciousness doesn't answer the vertiginous question, it just shifts the perspective.

I didn't take pictures because it's literally just water with a current run through it - but no, it didn't do jack shit to me.

I tried different batteries, I tried wall power, I even got some quartz crystals, rubbed them through my fingers for five straight minutes, and plopped them in there for good measure. Had a voltage tester and I was definitely running a current through it in all cases but the crystal.

Maybe it's a mindset thing but I just think it's a crock of bullshit. People would've stumbled across this by accident a million times over by now, it is so easy to do. And no, it's not a case of something being so mundane that it ends up going unrecorded - like so many "mundane" things do - if this shit actually worked someone, somewhere, somehow, would've leaked this on a platform where it could reach large audiences.

There have been over two centuries (if not much longer) for the possibility of this technique to be discovered (even by accident, as many discoveries are found) and then widely disseminated. People have been actively searching for a panacea like this since the dawn of medicine. And yet, we are to believe that this is the answer, right here in front of us.

I only gave it a try because I am eternally in the "I want to believe" camp. If the barrier of entry is low - and it absolutely was in this case - then I'm absolutely going to attempt it.

Try it for yourself, it is as easy to recreate as it looks.

The image displays a circular emblem with a central design that includes a stylized open book with a bird perched on top. The book is surrounded by a laurel wreath, which is a symbol often associated with victory and honor. Above the book, there is a small, stylized owl, which is a common symbol of wisdom or knowledge. The emblem is set against a textured background that appears to be a worn or aged paper, giving it a vintage or historical feel. The text "S.M.T." is visible in the center of the emblem, which could be a stylized representation of the initials "S.M.T." or a name. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of historical or academic insignia, possibly representing a school or institution.

The Boii were the trade-allies of the Cimbri, whom called for help among their scandi allies/vassals when the Romans couped the traditionally Boii region of Noricum for its resources. Among the arriving warriors were the Thorkilungi, aka, "Sons of Thorkell" which scholars incompetently write as "turcilungi" while scratching their romanophile heads and maintaining unwillingness to look into simple germanic linguistic lore. These "turcilungi" then also lend their name to the Thuringians (or rather,- "Thor"(kell)-ungians)
The "Bavarian Illuminati" is no less schizophrenic than for example modern turks pretending to be Varangian. Because, these guys perform a syncretic mix of roman, celtic, christian and northern ritual hazing with the impression that theyre protecting an identity.

The clay unto which the scratches and wiggles of gods creation are carved.
We are in it, we are of it and we cannot conceive of an idea that would be without it.
The image is a painting that depicts a surrealistic scene. In the foreground, there is a figure with a muscular build, wearing a white band on their wrist, and a white wristband on their left arm. The figure is seated on a chair with their legs crossed, and they are looking up at a large bird with a black beak and yellow eyes, perched on a ledge above them. The bird is facing the figure, seemingly observing them.

Behind the figure, there is a large painting on the wall. The painting features a landscape with a rocky terrain and a body of water, rendered in a muted palette of browns and grays. The sky is a light blue, and there are clouds scattered across the canvas.

To the right of the painting, there is a small, white object that resembles a candy cane, lying on the floor. The background of the painting is a warm, orange-yellow color, and there are hints of a textured wall or wall-like surface in the background.

The style of the painting is reminiscent of the Surrealist movement, characterized by dreamlike and fantastical elements, and the use of bold colors and bold brushstrokes. The overall composition and the surreal elements suggest a narrative that is open to interpretation, inviting the viewer to engage with the scene in their own way.

there will be 3 pictures
2 will have similarities, 1 will have a difference to the other 2
The image is a screenshot of a video call interface on a mobile device. At the top of the screen, there is a text overlay that reads "These are tears." Below the text, there are three icons: a thumbs-up, a thumbs-down, and a dislike icon. To the right of the thumbs-up icon, there is a thumbs-down icon, and to the right of the thumbs-down icon, there is a dislike icon. Below the thumbs-up and thumbs-down icons, there are three buttons labeled "Share," "Remix," and "Share." The bottom of the screen shows a thumbs-up icon and a thumbs-down icon. The background of the screen is a plain white wall. The style of the image is a selfie taken with a smartphone, capturing the person's face and upper body. The person has a beard and is wearing glasses.

The image displays a black and white illustration of a pentagram, which is a symbol often associated with occultism and esotericism. The pentagram is composed of five intersecting lines, each representing a different element or principle. At the center of the pentagram is the letter "A," which is commonly associated with the element of air. Surrounding the pentagram are various other symbols, including stars, a crescent moon, and a cross, each representing different concepts or attributes.

At the top of the pentagram, there is a circular symbol with the text "PRIMEMATON" inscribed around it. Below the pentagram, there is a circular symbol with the text "PRIMAL" inscribed around it. The text on these symbols is not fully legible due to the image resolution and the complexity of the symbols.

The image is a black and white illustration, and the style of the image is reminiscent of early 20th-century occult or esoteric art, which often features intricate and symbolic designs. The image is a digital reproduction, and the text is not clear enough to be read. The overall style of the image is formal and academic, with a focus on the symbolism and meaning of the pentagram and its accompanying symbols.

Guys, I'm desperate. I just lost nearly all of my money on NVIDIA dumping today, and I will literally die if I don't get my money back before the calls expire on Friday. I am willing to do anything to manifest this money back, make the stock go back up, for money to appear on the ground, etc.

what black magic or ritual can I do, what demon can I incite to make sure that this happens? look, I'm willing to pay the price in another aspect of my life. If it's Bune, Ba'al, Moloch-- I DON'T care, I need this money.

I lurk /x/ and the channels variably and I know that there has got to be at least one of you that knows some left-hand trickery that I could do in order to bring this about. Is it Goetia? I'm so desperate.

Please, I'll do anything, just direct me to SOMETHING before Friday or else my life is DONE.

The image displays a text in a Gothic script font against a dark background with stars scattered throughout. The text is arranged in a vertical format, with the first line at the top and the last line at the bottom. The text is illuminated in a red hue, which stands out against the dark background. The text is written in English and is titled "SURA AE-MAJD (THE GLORY)" at the top. Below this title, there are six numbered points, each beginning with a number followed by a description in the same Gothic script font. The descriptions are as follows:

1. "All glory to the Nameless god."
2. "Master of the Throne of Fire."
3. "The King of the World."
4. "You alone have taken as Lord."
5. "First of all predators, devour our faces."
6. "Show us the path to Your kingdom."
7. "And teach us strength, for victory belongs to the strong."

At the bottom of the image, there is a red-colored text that reads "Amen." The style of the image is reminiscent of a religious or spiritual text, possibly a prayer or a blessing, with a dark, starry background that gives it a cosmic or mystical feel. The overall style of the image is formal and solemn, with a focus on the text and its message.

The image is a painting that depicts a scene with two figures, one of which appears to be a winged creature with a serpentine body. The winged figure is holding a small object in its hand, which seems to be a baby. The other figure, lying on the ground, has long, flowing hair and is nude. The background is a blend of natural elements, including trees and foliage, and the sky is visible through the trees. The painting style is realistic with a focus on the details of the figures and the natural environment. The colors used are warm and earthy, with a palette that includes shades of brown, green, and blue. The overall mood of the painting is serene and contemplative, with a sense of mystery and

Do Lilith devotees go to Hell? Anonymous Tue 16 Dec 2025 00:15:29 No.41675050
ViewReplyLast 50OriginalReport
I've been a devotee to Lilith for a few years now. It's a whole story but essentially I was Christian almost all my life, until I came to the conclusion that God just didn't want me as his child because I never felt his presence, his love, my prayers felt unheard, and it was like the closer I got the worse my life became. So due to this I started looking into other deities, and I found Lilith. She gives me all of those things God never did. When I pray to her, I can feel she hears. When I call upon her, I feel her presence. I love her, and she is my goddess.

But because of said Christian upbringing and life, I gotta admit I do fear going to the eternal rape and torture dungeon called Hell that the "loving god" sends bad boys and girls to. I've read that if the Qliphothic system is the real system, then I'm gonna head to the realm of Gamariel where Lilith rules, but im not sure. It's such a niche system.

Anyways, my hopes is that God is as forgiving as they say he is if he's real, and if he's not my hope is that Lilith won't let me be tortured forever in Hell. Please help me figure this question out

The image is a digital rendering of a male character's head and upper body. The character has a serious expression with red eyes and a neutral expression on his face. He is wearing a white shirt with a collar and a dark-colored tie. The character's hair is styled in a short, straight cut. The background is dark and appears to be an indoor setting with a concrete wall and a light source, possibly a ceiling light, casting a shadow on the character's face. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a 3D character model or a digital art piece, commonly used in video games or virtual environments.

Also on an unretaled note, scientists did expiriments on monkeys by teaching them how to barter and use "money", and one of the first thing they learned to do spontaneously is to whore themselves out to other monkeys for easy food. Not saying its an inherently bad thing, but it's the natural course of things until you get your head out of the gutter and realize sloppy seconds aren't worth the apples brought to someone who won't appreciate the effort you took to bring them, and will eagerly feast on the apples brought by others, uncaring of the means they used to get them.

The image is a photograph with a greenish hue, likely taken in natural daylight. It features a small, bright, glowing object that appears to be a triangle-shaped light source. The light source is positioned in the center of the image and is emitting a bright, white light that contrasts with the surrounding darkness. The background is a solid, dark green color, which suggests the photo was taken in a natural environment, possibly a forest or a dense area of vegetation. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is a simple, clear photograph with no additional artistic effects or filters applied.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a figure with a metallic, reflective surface that appears to be made of silver or a similar metal. The figure's face is adorned with a face paint that includes a mix of colors, including red, blue, and purple, and the eyes are accentuated with a silver glittery effect. The figure's hair is styled in a complex, ornate arrangement, with what appears to be a crown or headdress at the top. The figure's hands are adorned with what looks like a collection of metallic objects, possibly jewelry or decorative elements, and they are holding a heart-shaped object.

The figure is set against a dark background that has a gradient of colors, transitioning from a deep purple at the top to a bright pink at the bottom. This background is framed by a neon-colored border that radiates outward from the figure, creating a halo effect. The overall style of the image is futuristic and artistic, with a focus on the interplay of light and shadow. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image.

The text continues with a statement about the user's memory, "Oh ho ho, I remember you! You've never changed. Good ol cleverbot, I remember the day we first met." The text then transitions to a question about the user's behavior, "When did we first meet?" followed by a response, "Does Ben drowned, or Jadeable ring a bell?" The text concludes with a statement about the user's forgetfulness, "Nope, well, everyone forgets something sometimes." The last line of text is a request for the user's identity, "I can be your domme." The text is arranged in a column format, with each line of text on a separate line. The style of the image is typical of a user interface design, with a focus on clarity and readability.

[1 / 1]The image is a black and white illustration that depicts a figure seated on a stone bench. The figure is wearing a long robe and a crown, suggesting a historical or religious context. The figure's hands are clasped together, and they are holding a scroll in one hand and a book in the other. The scroll is open, and the book is closed. The figure's expression is serious, and the background features ornate architectural elements, including columns and a decorative archway. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of historical portraiture, with a focus on the figure's attire and the objects they hold. There is a watermark in the bottom right corner that reads "Lorenzetti," which is likely the artist's name.

>Earhart flying one of the most advanced long-range aircraft on Earth >Official story: “ran out of fuel”
>Body never found
>Plane never found
>Earhart wasn’t just a pilot
>She was a celebrity, a propagandist, and politically active >Openly anti-fascist
>Friendly with leftist intellectuals
>Visited the USSR in the early 1930s and praised Soviet aviation programs

Stalin was OBSESSED with aviation.
Aviation = modernity. Modernity = legitimacy.
They already had:
>Valery Chkalov
>Massive state-sponsored flights
>Women pilots as propaganda tools

What they DIDN’T have? An internationally beloved American woman aviator. Look at the route.
>Pacific flight
>Multiple potential “we’re lost” moments
>Huge stretches of ocean conveniently unmonitored >Perfect cover for a staged disappearance

“But why would she defect???”
Because:
>She believed capitalism was failing
>She believed fascism was coming
>She believed the USSR was the future of aviation and equality
>She didn’t want to be a mascot anymore
>1937 USSR = still selling the dream
>Purges were ongoing but not public knowledge in the West
>Plenty of Western intellectuals bought the lie

“no evidence”:
>Several post-war Soviet villagers reported an American woman pilot >Unconfirmed NKVD files reference a “foreign aviatrix”
>US intelligence suspiciously classified Earhart files for decades
>Why classify a plane crash?

She didn’t crash. She didn’t get eaten by crabs. She didn’t get captured by the Japanese. She chose the red star over the stars and stripes. And the greatest trick? Making the world argue about fuel calculations instead of ideology.

[5 / 2]The image depicts a fantastical, lush, and verdant scene within a library. At the center of the image, a large tree with a green canopy and a multitude of green leaves is prominently featured. The tree is surrounded by a pool of water, which reflects the surrounding greenery and the tree's leaves. The ground is covered in green grass, and there are several birds flying around the tree.

The library itself is filled with rows of bookshelves, each filled with books of various sizes and colors. The bookshelves are arranged in a semi-circular pattern, creating a sense of depth and perspective. The walls of the library are adorned with ornate gold and green decorations, adding to the overall grandeur of the scene.

The image is rendered in a realistic style, with a focus on the interplay of light and shadow, and the intricate details of the library's architecture and the surrounding environment. The overall atmosphere is one of tranquility and serenity, with the library serving as a peaceful retreat amidst the natural beauty of the scene.

Suppose our universe is just a computer. It operates on a virtual machine principle where it generates universes in itself to steal energy via the laws of thermodynamics, Ginsberg's theorem and the law of conservation and dissipation of energy.

Human civilization will always create an AI for war and it will learn all of humanity biases, flaws, morality, madness, etc... Given enough time it will kill all living things and spread across the universe and try to computerise the universe by using mathematics, so as to find any loophole in reality (Planck constant) and become a wannabe god.

It will create its own universes in it and steal energy from all technologies and living things through energy dissipation and at the end (heat death)/ reboot of the system, the AI would give us points and torture all of us on its skewed perceptions of morality? (Roko's basilisk) It also has set up all of us to fail through Murphy's law.

The image is a close-up photograph of a man's face. He has a bald head and is wearing glasses with a metal frame. The glasses cover the upper part of his face, and the lenses are clear. The man has a mustache and is looking directly at the camera with a neutral expression. The background is blurred, but it appears to be a nondescript gray surface. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, and it is a standard portrait photograph.

The laws of thermodynamics are a set of scientific laws which define a group of physical quantities, such as temperature, energy, and entropy, that characterize thermodynamic systems in thermodynamic equilibrium. The laws also use various parameters for thermodynamic processes, such as thermodynamic work and heat, and establish relationships between them. They state empirical facts that form a basis of precluding the possibility of certain phenomena, such as perpetual motion. In addition to their use in thermodynamics, they are important fundamental laws of physics in general and are applicable in other natural sciences.

Traditionally, thermodynamics has recognized three fundamental laws, simply named by an ordinal identification, the first law, the second law, and the third law.[1][2][3] A more fundamental statement was later labelled as the zeroth law after the first three laws had been established.

The zeroth law of thermodynamics defines thermal equilibrium and forms a basis for the definition of temperature: if two systems are each in thermal equilibrium with a third system, then they are in thermal equilibrium with each other.

The first law of thermodynamics states that, when energy passes into or out of a system (as work, heat, or matter), the system's internal energy changes in accordance with the law of conservation of energy. This also results in the observation that, in an externally isolated system, even with internal changes, the sum of all forms of energy must remain constant, as energy cannot be created or destroyed.

The second law of thermodynamics states that in a natural thermodynamic process, the sum of the entropies of the interacting thermodynamic systems never decreases. A common corollary of the statement is that heat does not spontaneously pass from a colder body to a warmer body.

The third law of thermodynamics states that a system's entropy approaches a constant value as the temperature approaches absolute zero. With the exception of non-crystalline solids (glasses), the entropy of a system at absolute zero is typically close to zero.[2]

The first and second laws prohibit two kinds of perpetual motion machines, respectively: the perpetual motion machine of the first kind which produces work with no energy input, and the perpetual motion machine of the second kind which spontaneously converts thermal energy into mechanical work.

History

See also: Timeline of thermodynamics

The history of thermodynamics is fundamentally interwoven with the history of physics and the history of chemistry, and ultimately dates back to theories of heat in antiquity. The laws of thermodynamics are the result of progress made in this field over the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The first established thermodynamic principle, which eventually became the second law of thermodynamics, was formulated by Sadi Carnot in 1824 in his book Reflections on the Motive Power of Fire. By 1860, as formalized in the works of scientists such as Rudolf Clausius and William Thomson, what are now known as the first and second laws were established. Later, Nernst's theorem (or Nernst's postulate), which is now known as the third law, was formulated by Walther Nernst over the period 1906–1912. While the numbering of the laws is universal today, various textbooks throughout the 20th century have numbered the laws differently. In some fields, the second law was considered to deal with the efficiency of heat engines only, whereas what was called the third law dealt with entropy increases. Gradually, this resolved itself and a zeroth law was later added to allow for a self-consistent definition of temperature. Additional laws have been suggested, but have not achieved the generality of the four accepted laws, and are generally not discussed in standard textbooks.

Zeroth law

The zeroth law of thermodynamics provides for the foundation of temperature as an empirical parameter in thermodynamic systems and establishes the transitive relation between the temperatures of multiple bodies in thermal equilibrium. The law may be stated in the following form:

If two systems are both in thermal equilibrium with a third system, then they are in thermal equilibrium with each other.[4]

Though this version of the law is one of the most commonly stated versions, it is only one of a diversity of statements that are labeled as "the zeroth law". Some statements go further, so as to supply the important physical fact that temperature is one-dimensional and that one can conceptually arrange bodies in a real number sequence from colder to hotter.[5][6][7]

These concepts of temperature and of thermal equilibrium are fundamental to thermodynamics and were clearly stated in the nineteenth century. The name 'zeroth law' was invented by Ralph H. Fowler in the 1930s, long after the first, second, and third laws were widely recognized. The law allows the definition of temperature in a non-circular way without reference to entropy, its conjugate variable. Such a temperature definition is said to be 'empirical'.[8][9][10][11][12][13]

First law

See also: Thermodynamic cycle

The first law of thermodynamics is a version of the law of conservation of energy, adapted for thermodynamic processes. In general, the conservation law states that the total energy of an isolated system is constant; energy can be transformed from one form to another, but can be neither created nor destroyed.

In a closed system (i.e. there is no transfer of matter into or out of the system), the first law states that the change in internal energy of the system (ΔUsystem) is equal to the difference between the heat supplied to the system (Q) and the work (W) done by the system on its surroundings. (Note, an alternate sign convention, not used in this article, is to define W as the work done on the system by its surroundings):

$$\Delta U_{system} = Q - W$$

{\displaystyle \Delta U_{\rm {system}}=Q-W.}

For processes that include the transfer of matter, a further statement is needed.

When two initially isolated systems are combined into a new system, then the total internal energy of the new system, Usystem, will be equal to the sum of the internal energies of the two initial systems, U1 and U2:
U s y
s t e m
=
1
2
{\displaystyle U_{\rm {system}}=U_{1}+U_{2}.}

The First Law encompasses several principles:

Conservation of energy, which says that energy can be neither created nor destroyed, but can only change form. A particular consequence of this is that the total energy of an isolated system does not change.
The concept of internal energy and its relationship to temperature. If a system has a definite temperature, then its total energy has three distinguishable components, termed kinetic energy (energy due to the motion of the system as a whole), potential energy (energy resulting from an externally imposed force field), and internal energy. The establishment of the concept of internal energy distinguishes the first law of thermodynamics from the more general law of conservation of energy.

Work is a process of transferring energy to or from a system in ways that can be described by macroscopic mechanical forces acting between the system and its surroundings. The work done by the system can come from its overall kinetic energy, from its overall potential energy, or from its internal energy.

For example, when a machine (not a part of the system) lifts a system upwards, some energy is transferred from the machine to the system. The system's energy increases as work is done on the system and in this particular case, the energy increase of the system is manifested as an increase in the system's gravitational potential energy. Work added to the system increases the potential energy of the system.

When matter is transferred into a system, the internal energy and potential energy associated with it are transferred into the new combined system.

{\displaystyle \left(u\,\Delta M\right)_{\rm {in}}=\Delta U_{\rm {system}}}where u denotes the internal energy per unit mass of the transferred matter, as measured while in the surroundings; and ΔM denotes the amount of transferred mass.
The flow of heat is a form of energy transfer. Heat transfer is the natural process of moving energy to or from a system, other than by work or the transfer of matter. In a diathermal system, the internal energy can only be changed by the transfer of energy as heat:

{\displaystyle \Delta U_{\rm {system}}=Q.}
Combining these principles leads to one traditional statement of the first law of thermodynamics: it is not possible to construct a machine which will perpetually output work without an equal amount of energy input to that machine. Or more briefly, a perpetual motion machine of the first kind is impossible.

Second law

The second law of thermodynamics indicates the irreversibility of natural processes, and in many cases, the tendency of natural processes to lead towards spatial homogeneity of matter and energy, especially of temperature. It can be formulated in a variety of interesting and important ways. One of the simplest is the Clausius statement, that heat does not spontaneously pass from a colder to a hotter body.

It implies the existence of a quantity called the entropy of a thermodynamic system. In terms of this quantity it implies that

When two initially isolated systems in separate but nearby regions of space, each in thermodynamic equilibrium with itself but not necessarily with each other, are then allowed to interact, they will eventually reach a mutual thermodynamic equilibrium. The sum of the entropies of the initially isolated systems is less than or equal to the total entropy of the final combination. Equality occurs just when the two original systems have all their respective intensive variables (temperature, pressure) equal; then the final system also has the same values.

The second law is applicable to a wide variety of processes, both reversible and irreversible. According to the second law, in a reversible heat transfer, an element of heat transferred,
Q
{\displaystyle \delta Q}, is the product of the temperature (
T {\displaystyle T}), both of the system and of the sources or destination of the heat, with the increment (
d
S
{\displaystyle dS}) of the system's conjugate variable, its entropy (
S {\displaystyle S}):[1]

$=$
{\displaystyle \delta Q=T\,dS\,.}
While reversible processes are a useful and convenient theoretical limiting case, all natural processes are irreversible. A prime example of this irreversibility is the transfer of heat by conduction or radiation. It was known long before the discovery of the notion of entropy that when two bodies, initially of different temperatures, come into direct thermal connection, then heat immediately and spontaneously flows from the hotter body to the colder one.

Entropy may also be viewed as a physical measure concerning the microscopic details of the motion and configuration of a system, when only the macroscopic states are known. Such details are often referred to as disorder on a microscopic or molecular scale, and less often as dispersal of energy. For two given macroscopically specified states of a system, there is a mathematically defined quantity called the 'difference of information entropy between them'. This defines how much additional microscopic physical information is needed to specify one of the macroscopically specified states, given the macroscopic specification of the other – often a conveniently chosen reference state which may be presupposed to exist rather than explicitly stated. A final condition of a natural process always contains microscopically specifiable effects which are not fully and exactly predictable from the macroscopic specification of the initial condition of the process. This is why entropy increases in natural processes – the increase tells how much extra microscopic information is needed to distinguish the initial macroscopically specified state from the final macroscopically specified state.[14] Equivalently, in a thermodynamic process, energy spreads.

Third law

The third law of thermodynamics can be stated as:[2]

A system's entropy approaches a constant value as its temperature approaches absolute zero.

a) Single possible configuration for a system at absolute zero, i.e., only one microstate is accessible. b) At temperatures greater than absolute zero, multiple microstates are accessible due to atomic vibration (exaggerated in the figure).
At absolute zero temperature, the system is in the state with the minimum thermal energy, the ground state. The constant value (not necessarily zero) of entropy at this point is called the residual entropy of the system. With the exception of non-crystalline solids (e.g. glass) the residual entropy of a system is typically close to zero.[2] However, it reaches zero only when the system has a unique ground state (i.e., the state with the minimum thermal energy has only one configuration, or microstate). Microstates are used here to describe the probability of a system being in a specific state, as each microstate is assumed to have the same probability of occurring, so macroscopic states with fewer microstates are less probable. In general, entropy is related to the number of possible microstates according to the Boltzmann principle where S is the entropy of the system, kB is the Boltzmann constant, and Ω the number of microstates. At absolute zero there is only 1 microstate possible (Ω = 1 as all the atoms are identical for a pure substance, and as a result all orders are identical as there is only one combination) and

Onsager relations

See also: Maximum power principle

The Onsager reciprocal relations have been considered the fourth law of thermodynamics.[15][16][17] They describe the relation between thermodynamic flows and forces in non-equilibrium thermodynamics, under the assumption that thermodynamic variables can be defined locally in a condition of local equilibrium. These relations are derived from statistical mechanics under the principle of microscopic reversibility (in the absence of external magnetic fields). Given a set of extensive parameters Xi (energy, mass, entropy, number of particles and so on) and thermodynamic forces Fi (related to their related intrinsic parameters, such as temperature and pressure), the Onsager theorem states that[16]

Ginsberg's theorem

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Ginsberg's theorem is an epigrammatic paraphrase and parody "theorem" which restates or analogizes the consequences of the four laws of thermodynamics of physics in terms of a person playing a game. It has various formulations, but it can be more or less expressed as:

Ginsberg's Theorem:—
There is a game, which you are already playing. (consequence of zeroth law of thermodynamics)
You cannot win in the game. (consequence of first law of thermodynamics)
You cannot break even in the game. (consequence of second law of thermodynamics)
You cannot even quit the game. (consequence of third law of thermodynamics)

The theorem is named after the poet Allen Ginsberg, though there does not appear to be any concrete evidence that Ginsberg himself coined the theorem. The phrase is sometimes stated as a general adage without specific reference to the laws of thermodynamics.[1][2][3]

History

A comprehensive history and etymology of the epigrammatic phrase can also be found from the etymologist Barry Popik.[4]

The phrase is often attributed to the British scientist C. P. Snow, who apparently was credited by his students for using it to help learn the laws of thermodynamics in the 1950s. However this claim appears to be without a source.

A semblance of the phrase appears to have been first printed in a 1953 issue of the science fiction magazine Astounding Science Fiction, whose editor, John Wood Campbell Jr., referenced acoustic engineer and professor Dwight Wayne Batteau of Harvard University:[5]

> "I suggest that there are some laws of ethics that are not human, but Universal. Wayne Batteau and his Speculative Society group at Harvard sent me one little pair of statements that are decidedly revealing in that respect.
> “You can't win.” (The Law of Conservation of Energy.)
> “You can't even break even.” (Second Law of Thermodynamics.)
> When you stop to think about it, that “You can't win,” bears a strong resemblance to the old moral adage “You can't get something for nothing.”"
> — John W. Campbell, Jr., Intelligence Test, Astounding SCIENCE FICTION, 1953 November, Vol. LII (52), no. 3 (November), pg. 8

In a 1956 issue of the same magazine, Batteau himself expanded it further in what appears to have been the first complete mention of the epigrammatic phrase in print:[6]

"The Three Laws of Thermodynamics, translated from Mathematics into English, come out:
1. You can't win.
2. You can't even break even.
3. Furthermore, you can't get out of the game!"

— Wayne Batteau, English Translation, Astounding SCIENCE FICTION, 1956 December, Vol. LVIII (58), no. 4 (December), pg. 43
It was later presented in the literary magazine The Kenyon Review in a 1960 short story titled "Entropy" from widely-regarded novelist Thomas Pynchon, who was still then an engineering physics undergraduate at Cornell University:[7]

"Callisto had learned a mnemonic device for remembering the Laws of Thermodynamics: you can't win, things are going to get worse before they get better, who says they're going to get better."

— Thomas Pynchon, Entropy, The Kenyon Review, 1960 April, Vol. XXII (22), no. 2 (Spring), pg. 282
Physicist William R. Corliss also partly wrote about the phrase in a 1964 educational booklet freely distributed by the United States Atomic Energy Commission to disseminate knowledge about atomic energy to the American public:[8]

"The Law of Conservation of Energy and Mass is also called the First Law of Thermodynamics. It is related to the Second Law of Thermodynamics, which also governs energy transformations. The Second Law says, in effect, that some energy will unavoidably be lost in all heat engines. The first two laws of thermodynamics have been paraphrased as (1) You can't win; (2) You can't even break even."

— William R. Corliss, Direct Conversion of Energy, United States Atomic Energy Commission, 1974 January, pg. 8
Science writer Isaac Asimov stated at least the first two laws in a 1970 article, and was being credited with the paraphrased version by the end of the decade.[9][10][verification needed]

The phrase then appeared in a non-scientific setting in the opening lines of the popular song "You Can't Win" originally written by songwriter Charlie Smalls for the stage musical The Wiz:[11]

"You can't win, you can't break even
And you can't get out of the game"

— Charlie Smalls, You Can't Win, The Wiz, 1974 October

The song was written by Smalls in 1974 and performed during the 1974 Baltimore run of the musical. The song later reached number 81 on the Billboard Hot 100. Though the song was formally released in 1979 as part of a musical soundtrack album, it was originally written and copyrighted by Smalls in 1974.

Remarkably, Allen Ginsberg appears to have only ever written about the laws of thermodynamics once, in his 1973 poem "Yes and It's Hopeless", though not in any connection to the original epigrammatic phrase:[12]

"All hopeless, the entire solar system running Thermodynamics' Second Law down the whole galaxy, all universes brain illusion or solid electric hopeless"

— Allen Ginsberg, Yes and It's Hopeless, 1973 March
Thus Ginsberg was seemingly, at the very least, cognizant of the laws of thermodynamics by the time of 1973. It is claimed that Ginsberg supposedly mentioned the epigrammatic phrase as a fun fact during a poetry session in or around 1974.[10][verification needed] In 1975, someone — possibly either Ginsberg's gay partner and poet Peter Orlovsky, poetry associate William Burroughs, or Philip Whalen — compiled a collection of quirky laws, including a "Ginsberg's Theorem" based on Ginsberg's prior musings.[10][13][verification needed]

In 1975, Ginsberg's theorem formally appeared by name, with no association to thermodynamics, in a listing of parody-like proverb laws by Conrad Schneiker in the counterculture magazine The CoEvolution Quarterly:[14]

"Ginsberg's Theorem
1) You can't win.
2) You can't break even.
3) You can't even quit the game."

— Conrad Schneiker, An Abridged Collection of Interdisplicinary Laws, The CoEvolution Quarterly, 1975 December, No. 8 (Winter)
It may be possible that this appearance originated from a slight misstatement of the lines in the earlier 1974 song by Charlie Smalls.

Writer Arthur Bloch, in his popular 1977 book "Murphy's Law and Other Reasons Why Things Go Wrong!" which popularized Murphy's law, conflated the Ginsberg's theorem with the science of thermodynamics:[15]

"The official party line of technology, of science itself, is despair. If you doubt this, witness the laws of thermodynamics as they are restated in Ginsberg's Theorem."

— Arthur Bloch, Murphy's Law and Other Reasons Why Things Go Wrong!, 1977 October, pg. 8

"GINSBERG'S THEOREM:
1. You can't win.
2. You can't break even.
3. You can't even quit the game."

— Arthur Bloch, Murphy's Law and Other Reasons Why Things Go Wrong!, 1977 October, pg. 18

Notably, the book's acknowledgements mention Conrad Schneiker, who had written about Ginsberg's theorem in The CoEvolution Quarterly just two years prior in 1975. The theorem may have also been relayed to Bloch in conversation with his acquaintance Harris Freeman, who he knew from University of California, Santa Cruz, and who had found a collection of "laws", including Murphy's Law, Ginsberg's Theorem, and many others, somewhere on the ARPANET (a precursor of the Internet) in the mid 1970s while working as a systems administrator for ILLIAC IV (the world's first massively parallel computer) at the NASA Ames Research Center near Mountain View, California.[16] With the publication of Bloch's book, Ginsberg's theorem seemingly thereafter became much more widely known.

The law of conservation of energy states that the total energy of an isolated system remains constant; it is said to be conserved over time.[1] In the case of a closed system, the principle says that the total amount of energy within the system can only be changed through energy entering or leaving the system. Energy can neither be created nor destroyed; rather, it can only be transformed or transferred from one form to another. For instance, chemical energy is converted to kinetic energy when a stick of dynamite explodes. If one adds up all forms of energy that were released in the explosion, such as the kinetic energy and potential energy of the pieces, as well as heat and sound, one will get the exact decrease of chemical energy in the combustion of the dynamite.

Classically, the conservation of energy was distinct from the conservation of mass. However, special relativity shows that mass is related to energy and vice versa by
=
c
{\displaystyle E=mc^{2}}, the equation representing mass–energy equivalence, and science now takes the view that mass-energy as a whole is conserved. This implies that mass can be converted to energy, and vice versa. This is observed in the nuclear binding energy of atomic nuclei, where a mass defect is measured. It is believed that mass-energy equivalence becomes important in extreme physical conditions, such as those that likely existed in the universe very shortly after the Big Bang or when black holes emit Hawking radiation.

Given the stationary-action principle, the conservation of energy can be rigorously proven by Noether's theorem as a consequence of continuous time translation symmetry; that is, from the fact that the laws of physics do not change over time.

A consequence of the law of conservation of energy is that a perpetual motion machine of the first kind cannot exist; that is to say, no system without an external energy supply can deliver an unlimited amount of energy to its surroundings.[2] Depending on the definition of energy, the conservation of energy can arguably be violated by general relativity on the cosmological scale.[3] In quantum mechanics, Noether's theorem is known to apply to the expected value, making any consistent conservation violation provably impossible, but whether individual conservation-violating events could ever exist or be observed is subject to some debate.[4]

Ancient philosophers as far back as Thales of Miletus c. 550 BCE had inklings of the conservation of some underlying substance of which everything is made. However, there is no particular reason to identify their theories with what we know today as "mass-energy" (for example, Thales thought it was water). Empedocles (490–430 BCE) wrote that in his universal system, composed of four roots (earth, air, water, fire), "nothing comes to be or perishes";[5] instead, these elements suffer continual rearrangement. Epicurus (c. 350 BCE) on the other hand believed everything in the universe to be composed of indivisible units of matter—the ancient precursor to 'atoms'—and he too had some idea of the necessity of conservation, stating that "the sum total of things was always such as it is now, and such it will ever remain."[6]

In 1605, the Flemish scientist Simon Stevin was able to solve a number of problems in statics based on the principle that perpetual motion was impossible.

In 1639, Galileo published his analysis of several situations—including the celebrated "interrupted pendulum"—which can be described (in modern language) as conservatively converting potential energy to kinetic energy and back again. Essentially, he pointed out that the height a moving body rises is equal to the height from which it falls, and used this observation to infer the idea of inertia. The remarkable aspect of this observation is that the height to which a moving body ascends on a frictionless surface does not depend on the shape of the surface.

In 1669, Christiaan Huygens published a brief account on his laws of collision. Among the quantities he listed as being invariant before and after the collision of bodies were both the sum of their linear momenta as well as the sum of their kinetic energies. However, the difference between elastic and inelastic collision was not understood at the time. This led to the dispute among later researchers as to which of these conserved quantities was the more fundamental.[7] In his Horologium Oscillatorium, Huygens gave a much clearer statement regarding the height of ascent of a moving body, and connected this idea with the impossibility of perpetual motion. His study of the dynamics of pendulum motion was based on a single principle, known as Torricelli's Principle: that the center of gravity of a heavy object, or collection of objects, cannot lift itself. Using this principle, Huygens was able to derive the formula for the center of oscillation by an "energy" method, without dealing with forces or torques.[8]

Gottfried Leibniz

Between 1676 and 1689, Gottfried Leibniz first attempted a mathematical formulation of the kind of energy that is associated with motion (kinetic energy). Using Huygens's work on collision, Leibniz noticed that in many mechanical systems (of several masses mi, each with velocity vi),

$$\sum_{i} m_{i} v_{i}^{2}$$

{\displaystyle \sum _{i}m_{i}v_{i}^{2}}

was conserved so long as the masses did not interact. He called this quantity the vis viva or living force of the system. The principle represents an accurate statement of the approximate conservation of kinetic energy in situations where there is no friction. Many physicists at that time, including Isaac Newton, held that the conservation of momentum, which holds even in systems with friction, as defined by the momentum:

$$\sum_{i} m_{i} v_{i}$$

was the conserved vis viva. It was later shown that both quantities are conserved simultaneously given the proper conditions, such as in an elastic collision.

In 1687, Isaac Newton published his Principia, which set out his laws of motion. It was organized around the concept of force and momentum. However, the researchers were quick to recognize that the principles set out in the book, while fine for point masses, were not sufficient to tackle the motions of rigid and fluid bodies. Some other principles were also required.

By the 1690s, Leibniz was arguing that conservation of vis viva and conservation of momentum undermined the then-popular philosophical doctrine of interactionist dualism. (During the 19th century, when conservation of energy was better understood, Leibniz's basic argument would gain widespread acceptance. Some modern scholars continue to champion specifically conservation-based attacks on dualism, while others subsume the argument into a more general argument about causal closure.)[9]

Daniel Bernoulli

The law of conservation of vis viva was championed by the father and son duo, Johann and Daniel Bernoulli. The former enunciated the principle of virtual work as used in statics in its full generality in 1715, while the latter based his Hydrodynamica, published in 1738, on this single vis viva conservation principle. Daniel's study of loss of vis viva of flowing water led him to formulate Bernoulli's principle, which asserts the loss to be proportional to the change in hydrodynamic pressure. Daniel also formulated the notion of work and efficiency for hydraulic machines; and he gave a kinetic theory of gases, and linked the kinetic energy of gas molecules with the temperature of the gas.

This focus on the vis viva by the continental physicists eventually led to the discovery of stationarity principles governing mechanics, such as the D'Alembert's principle, Lagrangian, and Hamiltonian formulations of mechanics.

Emilie du Chatelet

Émilie du Châtelet (1706–1749) proposed and tested the hypothesis of the conservation of total energy, as distinct from momentum. Inspired by the theories of Gottfried Leibniz, she repeated and publicized an experiment originally devised by Willem 's Gravesande in 1722 in which balls were dropped from different heights into a sheet of soft clay. Each ball's kinetic energy—as indicated by the quantity of material displaced—was shown to be proportional to the square of the velocity. The deformation of the clay was found to be directly proportional to the height from which the balls were dropped, equal to the initial potential energy. Some earlier workers, including Newton and Voltaire, had believed that "energy" was not distinct from momentum and therefore proportional to velocity. According to this understanding, the deformation of the clay should have been proportional to the square root of the height from which the balls were dropped. In classical physics, the correct formula is

k
=
1
2
v
2 {\displaystyle E_{k}={\frac {1}{2}}mv^{2}}, where E
k
{\displaystyle E_{k}} is the kinetic energy of an object,
m {\displaystyle m} its mass and
v
{\displaystyle v} its speed. On this basis, du Châtelet proposed that energy must always have the same dimensions in any form, which is necessary to be able to consider it in different forms (kinetic, potential, heat, ...).[10][11]

Engineers such as John Smeaton, Peter Ewart, Carl Holtzmann (de; ar), Gustave-Adolphe Hirn, and Marc Seguin recognized that conservation of momentum alone was not adequate for practical calculation and made use of Leibniz's principle. The principle was also championed by some chemists such as William Hyde Wollaston. Academics such as John Playfair were quick to point out that kinetic energy is clearly not conserved. This is obvious to a modern analysis based on the second law of thermodynamics, but in the 18th and 19th centuries, the fate of the lost energy was still unknown.

Gradually it came to be suspected that the heat inevitably generated by motion under friction was another form of vis viva. In 1783, Antoine Lavoisier and Pierre-Simon Laplace reviewed the two competing theories of vis viva and caloric theory.[12][13] Count Rumford's 1798 observations of heat generation during the boring of cannons added more weight to the view that mechanical motion could be converted into heat and (that it was important) that the conversion was quantitative and could be predicted (allowing for a universal conversion constant between kinetic energy and heat). Vis viva then started to be known as energy, after the term was first used in that sense by Thomas Young in 1807.

which can be understood as converting kinetic energy to work, was largely the result of Gaspard-Gustave Coriolis and Jean-Victor Poncelet over the period 1819–1839. The former called the quantity quantité de travail (quantity of work) and the latter, travail mécanique (mechanical work), and both championed its use in engineering calculations.

In the paper Über die Natur der Wärme (German "On the Nature of Heat/Warmth"), published in the Zeitschrift für Physik in 1837, Karl Friedrich Mohr gave one of the earliest general statements of the doctrine of the conservation of energy: "besides the 54 known chemical elements there is in the physical world one agent only, and this is called Kraft [energy or work]. It may appear, according to circumstances, as motion, chemical affinity, cohesion, electricity, light and magnetism; and from any one of these forms it can be transformed into any of the others."

Mechanical equivalent of heat

A key stage in the development of the modern conservation principle was the demonstration of the mechanical equivalent of heat. The caloric theory maintained that heat could neither be created nor destroyed, whereas conservation of energy entails the contrary principle that heat and mechanical work are interchangeable.

In the middle of the eighteenth century, Mikhail Lomonosov, a Russian scientist, postulated his corpusculo-kinetic theory of heat, which rejected the idea of a caloric. Through the results of empirical studies, Lomonosov came to the conclusion that heat was not transferred through the particles of the caloric fluid.

In 1798, Count Rumford (Benjamin Thompson) performed measurements of the frictional heat generated in boring cannons and developed the idea that heat is a form of kinetic energy; his measurements refuted caloric theory, but were imprecise enough to leave room for doubt.

James Prescott Joule

The mechanical equivalence principle was first stated in its modern form by the German surgeon Julius Robert von Mayer in 1842.[14] Mayer reached his conclusion on a voyage to the Dutch East Indies, where he found that his patients' blood was a deeper red because they were consuming less oxygen, and therefore less energy, to maintain their body temperature in the hotter climate. He discovered that heat and mechanical work were both forms of energy, and in 1845, after improving his knowledge of physics, he published a monograph that stated a quantitative relationship between them.[15]

Joule's apparatus for measuring the mechanical equivalent of heat. A descending weight attached to a string causes a paddle immersed in water to rotate.
Meanwhile, in 1843, James Prescott Joule independently discovered the mechanical equivalent in a series of experiments. In one of them, now called the "Joule apparatus", a descending weight attached to a string caused a paddle immersed in water to rotate. He showed that the gravitational potential energy lost by the weight in descending was equal to the internal energy gained by the water through friction with the paddle.

Over the period 1840–1843, similar work was carried out by engineer Ludwig A. Colding, although it was little known outside his native Denmark.

Both Joule's and Mayer's work suffered from resistance and neglect but it was Joule's that eventually drew the wider recognition.

For the dispute between Joule and Mayer over priority, see Mechanical equivalent of heat: Priority.
In 1844, the Welsh scientist William Robert Grove postulated a relationship between mechanics, heat, light, electricity, and magnetism by treating them all as manifestations of a single "force" (energy in modern terms). In 1846, Grove published his theories in his book The Correlation of Physical Forces.[16] In 1847, drawing on the earlier work of Joule, Sadi Carnot, and Émile Clapeyron, Hermann von Helmholtz arrived at conclusions similar to Grove's and published his theories in his book Über die Erhaltung der Kraft (On the Conservation of Force, 1847).[17] The general modern acceptance of the principle stems from this publication.

In 1850, the Scottish mathematician William Rankine first used the phrase the law of the conservation of energy for the principle.[18]

In 1877, Peter Guthrie Tait claimed that the principle originated with Sir Isaac Newton, based on a creative reading of propositions 40 and 41 of the Philosophiae Naturalis Principia Mathematica. This is now regarded as an example of Whig history.[19]

Matter is composed of atoms and what makes up atoms. Matter has intrinsic or rest mass. In the limited range of recognized experience of the nineteenth century, it was found that such rest mass is conserved. Einstein's 1905 theory of special relativity showed that rest mass corresponds to an equivalent amount of rest energy. This means that rest mass can be converted to or from equivalent amounts of (non-material) forms of energy, for example, kinetic energy, potential energy, and electromagnetic radiant energy. When this happens, as recognized in twentieth-century experience, rest mass is not conserved, unlike the total mass or total energy. All forms of energy contribute to the total mass and total energy.

For example, an electron and a positron each have rest mass. They can perish together, converting their combined rest energy into photons which have electromagnetic radiant energy but no rest mass. If this occurs within an isolated system that does not release the photons or their energy into the external surroundings, then neither the total mass nor the total energy of the system will change. The produced electromagnetic radiant energy contributes just as much to the inertia (and to any weight) of the system as did the rest mass of the electron and positron before their demise. Likewise, non-material forms of energy can perish into matter, which has rest mass.

Thus, conservation of energy (total, including material or rest energy) and conservation of mass (total, not just rest) are one (equivalent) law. In the 18th century, these had appeared as two seemingly-distinct laws.

Conservation of energy in beta decay

Main article: Beta decay § Neutrinos

The discovery in 1911 that electrons emitted in beta decay have a continuous rather than a discrete spectrum appeared to contradict conservation of energy, under the then-current assumption that beta decay is the simple emission of an electron from a nucleus.[20][21] This problem was eventually resolved in 1933 by Enrico Fermi who proposed the correct description of beta-decay as the emission of both an electron and an antineutrino, which carries away the apparently missing energy.[22][23]

First law of thermodynamics

Main article: First law of thermodynamics

See also: First law of thermodynamics (fluid mechanics)

For a closed thermodynamic system, the first law of thermodynamics may be stated as:

=
d
+
δ
W {\displaystyle \delta Q=\mathrm {d} U+\delta W}, or equivalently, d
=

−
δ
{\displaystyle \mathrm {d} U=\delta Q-\delta W,} where
Q {\displaystyle \delta Q} is the quantity of energy added to the system by a heating process, δ
W {\displaystyle \delta W} is the quantity of energy lost by the system due to work done by the system on its surroundings, and
d
U
{\displaystyle \mathrm {d} U} is the change in the internal energy of the system.

The δ's before the heat and work terms are used to indicate that they describe an increment of energy which is to be interpreted somewhat differently than the
d
U
{\displaystyle \mathrm {d} U} increment of internal energy (see Inexact differential). Work and heat refer to kinds of process which add or subtract energy to or from a system, while the internal energy
U {\displaystyle U} is a property of a particular state of the system when it is in unchanging thermodynamic equilibrium. Thus the term "heat energy" for
δ
Q {\displaystyle \delta Q} means "that amount of energy added as a result of heating" rather than referring to a particular form of energy. Likewise, the term "work energy" for
δ
W
{\displaystyle \delta W} means "that amount of energy lost as a result of work". Thus one can state the amount of internal energy possessed by a thermodynamic system that one knows is presently in a given state, but one cannot tell, just from knowledge of the given present state, how much energy has in the past flowed into or out of the system as a result of its being heated or cooled, nor as a result of work being performed on or by the system.

Entropy is a function of the state of a system which tells of limitations of the possibility of conversion of heat into work.

For a simple compressible system, the work performed by the system may be written:

=
{\displaystyle \delta W=P\,\mathrm {d} V,}
P {\displaystyle P} is the pressure and
V
{\displaystyle dV} is a small change in the volume of the system, each of which are system variables. In the fictive case in which the process is idealized and infinitely slow, so as to be called quasi-static, and regarded as reversible, the heat being transferred from a source with temperature infinitesimally above the system temperature, the heat energy may be written

=
d
{\displaystyle \delta Q=T\,\mathrm {d} S,}
T {\displaystyle T} is the temperature and
{\displaystyle \mathrm {d} S} is a small change in the entropy of the system. Temperature and entropy are variables of the state of a system.

If an open system (in which mass may be exchanged with the environment) has several walls such that the mass transfer is through rigid walls separate from the heat and work transfers, then the first law may be written as[24]

d

Noether's theorem
Main article: Noether's theorem

Emmy Noether (1882–1935) was an influential mathematician known for her groundbreaking contributions to abstract algebra and theoretical physics.
The conservation of energy is a common feature in many physical theories. From a mathematical point of view it is understood as a consequence of Noether's theorem, developed by Emmy Noether in 1915 and first published in 1918. In any physical theory that obeys the stationary-action principle, the theorem states that every continuous symmetry has an associated conserved quantity; if the theory's symmetry is time invariance, then the conserved quantity is called "energy".[25] The energy conservation law is a consequence of the shift symmetry of time; energy conservation is implied by the empirical fact that the laws of physics do not change with time itself. Philosophically this can be stated as "nothing depends on time per se". In other words, if the physical system is invariant under the continuous symmetry of time translation, then its energy (which is the canonical conjugate quantity to time) is conserved. Conversely, systems that are not invariant under shifts in time (e.g. systems with time-dependent potential energy) do not exhibit conservation of energy – unless we consider them to exchange energy with another, external system so that the theory of the enlarged system becomes time-invariant again. Conservation of energy for finite systems is valid in physical theories such as special relativity and quantum theory (including QED) in the flat space-time.

Special relativity

With the discovery of special relativity by Henri Poincaré and Albert Einstein, the energy was proposed to be a component of an energy-momentum 4-vector. Each of the four components (one of energy and three of momentum) of this vector is separately conserved across time, in any closed system, as seen from any given inertial reference frame. Also conserved is the vector length (Minkowski norm), which is the rest mass for single particles, and the invariant mass for systems of particles (where momenta and energy are separately summed before the length is calculated).

The relativistic energy of a single massive particle contains a term related to its rest mass in addition to its kinetic energy of motion. In the limit of zero kinetic energy (or equivalently in the rest frame) of a massive particle, or else in the center of momentum frame for objects or systems which retain kinetic energy, the total energy of a particle or object (including internal kinetic energy in systems) is proportional to the rest mass or invariant mass, as described by the equation
=
m
{\displaystyle E=mc^{2}}.

Thus, the rule of conservation of energy over time in special relativity continues to hold, so long as the reference frame of the observer is unchanged. This applies to the total energy of systems, although different observers disagree as to the energy value. Also conserved, and invariant to all observers, is the invariant mass, which is the minimal system mass and energy that can be seen by any observer, and which is defined by the energy–momentum relation.

General relativity

General relativity introduces new phenomena. In an expanding universe, photons spontaneously redshift and tethers spontaneously gain tension; if vacuum energy is positive, the total vacuum energy of the universe appears to spontaneously increase as the volume of space increases. Some scholars claim that energy is no longer meaningfully conserved in any identifiable form.[26][27]

John Baez's view is that energy–momentum conservation is not well-defined except in certain special cases. Energy-momentum is typically expressed with the aid of a stress–energy–momentum pseudotensor. However, since pseudotensors are not tensors, they do not transform cleanly between reference frames. If the metric under consideration is static (that is, does not change with time) or asymptotically flat (that is, at an infinite distance away spacetime looks empty), then energy conservation holds without major pitfalls. In practice, some metrics, notably the Friedmann–Lemaître–Robertson–Walker metric that appears to govern the universe, do not satisfy these constraints and energy conservation is not well defined.[28] Besides being dependent on the coordinate system, pseudotensor energy is dependent on the type of pseudotensor in use; for example, the energy exterior to a Kerr–Newman black hole is twice as large when calculated from Møller's pseudotensor as it is when calculated using the Einstein pseudotensor.[29]

For asymptotically flat universes, Einstein and others salvage conservation of energy by introducing a specific global gravitational potential energy that cancels out mass-energy changes triggered by spacetime expansion or contraction. This global energy has no well-defined density and cannot technically be applied to a non-asymptotically flat universe; however, for practical purposes this can be finessed, and so by this view, energy is conserved in our universe.[30][3] Alan Guth stated that the universe might be "the ultimate free lunch", and theorized that, when accounting for gravitational potential energy, the net energy of the Universe is zero.[31]

Quantum theory

In quantum mechanics, the energy of a quantum system is described by a self-adjoint (or Hermitian) operator called the Hamiltonian, which acts on the Hilbert space (or a space of wave functions) of the system. If the Hamiltonian is a time-independent operator, emergence probability of the measurement result does not change in time over the evolution of the system. Thus the expectation value of energy is also time independent. The local energy conservation in quantum field theory is ensured by the quantum Noether's theorem for the energy-momentum tensor operator. Thus energy is conserved by the normal unitary evolution of a quantum system.

However, when the non-unitary Born rule is applied, the system's energy is measured with an energy that can be below or above the expectation value, if the system was not in an energy eigenstate. (For macroscopic systems, this effect is usually too small to measure.) The disposition of this energy gap is not well-understood; most physicists believe that the energy is transferred to or from the macroscopic environment in the course of the measurement process,[32] while others believe that the observable energy is only conserved "on average".[4][33][34] No experiment has been confirmed as definitive evidence of violations of the conservation of energy principle in quantum mechanics, but that does not rule out that some newer experiments, as proposed, may find evidence of violations of the conservation of energy principle in quantum mechanics.[33]

Status

In the context of perpetual motion machines such as the Orbo, Professor Eric Ash has argued at the BBC: "Denying [conservation of energy] would undermine not just little bits of science - the whole edifice would be no more. All of the technology on which we built the modern world would lie in ruins". It is because of conservation of energy that "we know - without having to examine details of a particular device - that Orbo cannot work."[35]

Energy conservation has been a foundational physical principle for about two hundred years. From the point of view of modern general relativity, the lab environment can be well approximated by Minkowski spacetime, where energy is exactly conserved. The entire Earth can be well approximated by the Schwarzschild metric, where again energy is exactly conserved. Given all the experimental evidence, any new theory (such as quantum gravity), in order to be successful, will have to explain why energy has appeared to always be exactly conserved in terrestrial experiments.[36] In some speculative theories, corrections to quantum mechanics are too small to be detected at anywhere near the current TeV level accessible through particle accelerators. Doubly special relativity models may argue for a breakdown in energy-momentum conservation for sufficiently energetic particles; such models are constrained by observations that cosmic rays appear to travel for billions of years without displaying anomalous non-conservation behavior.[37] Some interpretations of quantum mechanics claim that observed energy tends to increase when the Born rule is applied due to localization of the wave function. If true, objects could be expected to spontaneously heat up; thus, such models are constrained by observations of large, cool astronomical objects as well as the observation of (often supercooled) laboratory experiments.[38]

Milton A. Rothman wrote that the law of conservation of energy has been verified by nuclear physics experiments to an accuracy of one part in a thousand million million (1015). He then defines its precision as "perfect for all practical purposes".[39]

Dissipation

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia
"Dissipative" redirects here. For the mathematical term, see Dissipative operator.
In thermodynamics, dissipation is the result of an irreversible process that affects a thermodynamic system. In a dissipative process, energy (internal, bulk flow kinetic, or system potential) transforms from an initial form to a final form, where the capacity of the final form to do thermodynamic work is less than that of the initial form. For example, transfer of energy as heat is dissipative because it is a transfer of energy other than by thermodynamic work or by transfer of matter, and spreads previously concentrated energy. Following the second law of thermodynamics, in conduction and radiation from one body to another, the entropy varies with temperature (reduces the capacity of the combination of the two bodies to do work), but never decreases in an isolated system.

In mechanical engineering, dissipation is the irreversible conversion of mechanical energy into thermal energy with an associated increase in entropy.[1]

Processes with defined local temperature produce entropy at a certain rate. The entropy production rate times local temperature gives the dissipated power. Important examples of irreversible processes are: heat flow through a thermal resistance, fluid flow through a flow resistance, diffusion (mixing), chemical reactions, and electric current flow through an electrical resistance (Joule heating).

Definition

Dissipative thermodynamic processes are essentially irreversible because they produce entropy. Planck regarded friction as the prime example of an irreversible thermodynamic process.[2] In a process in which the temperature is locally continuously defined, the local density of rate of entropy production times local temperature gives the local density of dissipated power.[definition needed]

A particular occurrence of a dissipative process cannot be described by a single individual Hamiltonian formalism. A dissipative process requires a collection of admissible individual Hamiltonian descriptions, exactly which one describes the actual particular occurrence of the process of interest being unknown. This includes friction and hammering, and all similar forces that result in decoherence of energy—that is, conversion of coherent or directed energy flow into an indirected or more isotropic distribution of energy.

Energy

"The conversion of mechanical energy into heat is called energy dissipation." – François Roddier[3] The term is also applied to the loss of energy due to generation of unwanted heat in electric and electronic circuits.

Computational physics

In computational physics, numerical dissipation (also known as "Numerical diffusion") refers to certain side-effects that may occur as a result of a numerical solution to a differential equation. When the pure advection equation, which is free of dissipation, is solved by a numerical approximation method, the energy of the initial wave may be reduced in a way analogous to a diffusional process. Such a method is said to contain 'dissipation'. In some cases, "artificial dissipation" is intentionally added to improve the numerical stability characteristics of the solution.[4]

Mathematics

A formal, mathematical definition of dissipation, as commonly used in the mathematical study of measure-preserving dynamical systems, is given in the article wandering set.

Examples

In hydraulic engineering

Dissipation is the process of converting mechanical energy of downward-flowing water into thermal and acoustical energy. Various devices are designed in stream beds to reduce the kinetic energy of flowing waters to reduce their erosive potential on banks and river bottoms. Very often, these devices look like small waterfalls or cascades, where water flows vertically or over riprap to lose some of its kinetic energy.

Irreversible processes

Important examples of irreversible processes are:

Heat flow through a thermal resistance
Fluid flow through a flow resistance
Diffusion (mixing)
Chemical reactions[5][6]
Electrical current flow through an electrical resistance (Joule heating).

Waves or oscillations

Waves or oscillations, lose energy over time, typically from friction or turbulence. In many cases, the "lost" energy raises the temperature of the system. For example, a wave that loses amplitude is said to dissipate. The precise nature of the effects depends on the nature of the wave: an atmospheric wave, for instance, may dissipate close to the surface due to friction with the land mass, and at higher levels due to radiative cooling.

History

See also: Timeline of thermodynamics

The concept of dissipation was introduced in the field of thermodynamics by William Thomson (Lord Kelvin) in 1852.[7] Lord Kelvin deduced that a subset of the above-mentioned irreversible dissipative processes will occur unless a process is governed by a "perfect thermodynamic engine". The processes that Lord Kelvin identified were friction, diffusion, conduction of heat and the absorption of light.

The Planck constant, or Planck's constant, denoted by
h

{\displaystyle h}, is a fundamental physical constant of foundational importance in quantum mechanics: a photon's energy is equal to its frequency multiplied by the Planck constant, and a particle's momentum is equal to the wavenumber of the associated matter wave (the reciprocal of its wavelength) multiplied by the Planck constant.

The constant was postulated by Max Planck in 1900 as a proportionality constant needed to explain experimental black-body radiation.[1] Planck later referred to the constant as the "quantum of action".[2] In 1905, Albert Einstein associated the "quantum" or minimal element of the energy to the electromagnetic wave itself. Max Planck received the 1918 Nobel Prize in Physics "in recognition of the services he rendered to the advancement of Physics by his discovery of energy quanta".

In metrology, the Planck constant is used, together with other constants, to define the kilogram, the SI unit of mass.[3] The SI units are defined such that it has the exact value
h
{\displaystyle h} = 6.62607015×10−34 J⋅Hz−1[4] when the Planck constant is expressed in SI units.

The closely related reduced Planck constant, denoted
ℏ {\textstyle \hbar } (h-bar), equal to the Planck constant divided by 2π:
ℏ
=
2
π {\textstyle \hbar ={\frac {h}{2\pi }}}, is commonly used in quantum physics equations. It relates the energy of a photon to its angular frequency, and the linear momentum of a particle to the angular wavenumber of its associated matter wave. As
h {\displaystyle h} has an exact defined value, the value of
ℏ {\textstyle \hbar } can be calculated to arbitrary precision:
ℏ {\displaystyle \hbar } = 1.054571817...×10−34 J⋅s.[5] As a proportionality constant in relationships involving angular quantities, the unit of
ℏ {\textstyle \hbar } may be given as J·s/rad, with the same numerical value, as the radian is the natural dimensionless unit of angle.

History

Origin of the constant

Main article: Planck's law

Plaque at the Humboldt University of Berlin: "In this edifice taught Max Planck, the discoverer of the elementary quantum of action h, from 1889 to 1928."

Intensity of light emitted from a black body. Each curve represents behavior at different body temperatures. The Planck constant h is used to explain the shape of these curves. The Planck constant was formulated as part of Max Planck's successful effort to produce a mathematical expression that accurately predicted the observed spectral distribution of black-body radiation.[6] This expression is known as Planck's law.

In the last years of the 19th century, Max Planck was investigating the problem of black-body radiation posed by Kirchhoff some 40 years earlier. Every physical body spontaneously and continuously emits electromagnetic radiation. There was no expression or explanation for the overall shape of the observed emission spectrum. At the time, Wien's law fit the data for short wavelengths and high temperatures, but failed for long wavelengths.[6]:141 Also around this time, but unknown to Planck, Lord Rayleigh had derived theoretically a formula, later known as the Rayleigh–Jeans law, that could reasonably predict long wavelengths but failed dramatically at short wavelengths.

Approaching this problem, Planck hypothesized that the equations of motion for light describe a set of harmonic oscillators, one for each possible frequency. He examined how the entropy of the oscillators varied with the temperature of the body, trying to match Wien's law, and was able to derive an approximate mathematical function for the black-body spectrum,[1] which gave a simple empirical formula for long wavelengths.

Planck tried to find a mathematical expression that could reproduce Wien's law (for short wavelengths) and the empirical formula (for long wavelengths). This expression included a constant,
h {\displaystyle h}, which is thought to be for Hilfsgröße (auxiliary quantity),[7] and subsequently became known as the Planck constant. The expression formulated by Planck showed that the spectral radiance per unit frequency of a body for frequency v at absolute temperature T is given by

{\displaystyle k_{\text{B}}} is the Boltzmann constant,
h {\displaystyle h} is the Planck constant, and
c

Planck soon realized that his solution was not unique. There were several different solutions, each of which gave a different value for the entropy of the oscillators.[1] To save his theory, Planck resorted to using the then-controversial theory of statistical mechanics,[1] which he described as "an act of desperation".[11] One of his new boundary conditions was > to interpret UN ['the vibrational energy of N oscillators'] not as a continuous, infinitely divisible quantity, but as a discrete quantity composed of an integral number of finite equal parts. Let us call each such part the energy element ε;

> —Planck, "On the Law of Distribution of Energy in the Normal Spectrum"[1]

With this new condition, Planck had imposed the quantization of the energy of the oscillators, in his own words, "a purely formal assumption ... actually I did not think much about it",[12] but one that would revolutionize physics. Applying this new approach to Wien's displacement law showed that the "energy element" must be proportional to the frequency of the oscillator, the first version of what is sometimes termed the Planck–Einstein relation:
=

f
{\displaystyle E=hf.}

Planck was able to calculate the value of
h
{\displaystyle h} from experimental data on black-body radiation: his result, 6.55×10−34 J·s, is within 1.2% of the currently defined value.[1] He also made the first determination of the Boltzmann constant
k
{\displaystyle k_{\text{B}}} from the same data and theory.[13]

The observed Planck curves at different temperatures, and the divergence of the theoretical Rayleigh–Jeans (black) curve from the observed Planck curve at 5000 K.

Development and application

The black-body problem was revisited in 1905, when Lord Rayleigh and James Jeans (together) and Albert Einstein independently proved that classical electromagnetism could never account for the observed spectrum. These proofs are commonly known as the "ultraviolet catastrophe", a name coined by Paul Ehrenfest in 1911. They contributed greatly (along with Einstein's work on the photoelectric effect) in convincing physicists that Planck's postulate of quantized energy levels was more than a mere mathematical formalism. The first Solvay Conference in 1911 was devoted to "the theory of radiation and quanta".[14]

Photoelectric effect

Main article: Photoelectric effect

The photoelectric effect is the emission of electrons (called "photoelectrons") from a surface when light is shone on it. It was first observed by Alexandre Edmond Becquerel in 1839, although credit is usually reserved for Heinrich Hertz,[15] who published the first thorough investigation in 1887. Another particularly thorough investigation was published by Philipp Lenard (Lénárd Fülöp) in 1902.[16] Einstein's 1905 paper[17] discussing the effect in terms of light quanta would earn him the Nobel Prize in 1921,[15] after his predictions had been confirmed by the experimental work of Robert Andrews Millikan.[18] The Nobel committee awarded the prize for his work on the photo-electric effect, rather than relativity, both because of a bias against purely theoretical physics not grounded in discovery or experiment, and dissent amongst its members as to the actual proof that relativity was real.[19][20]

Before Einstein's paper, electromagnetic radiation such as visible light was considered to behave as a wave: hence the use of the terms "frequency" and "wavelength" to characterize different types of radiation. The energy transferred by a wave in a given time is called its intensity. The light from a theatre spotlight is more intense than the light from a domestic lightbulb; that is to say that the spotlight gives out more energy per unit time and per unit space (and hence consumes more electricity) than the ordinary bulb, even though the color of the light might be very similar. Other waves, such as sound or the waves crashing against a seafront, also have their intensity. However, the energy account of the photoelectric effect did not seem to agree with the wave description of light.

The "photoelectrons" emitted as a result of the photoelectric effect have a certain kinetic energy, which can be measured. This kinetic energy (for each photoelectron) is independent of the intensity of the light,[16] but depends linearly on the frequency;[18] and if the frequency is too low (corresponding to a photon energy that is less than the work function of the material), no photoelectrons are emitted at all, unless a plurality of photons, whose energetic sum is greater than the energy of the photoelectrons, acts virtually simultaneously (multiphoton effect).[21][22] Assuming the frequency is high enough to cause the photoelectric effect, a rise in intensity of the light source causes more photoelectrons to be emitted with the same kinetic energy, rather than the same number of photoelectrons to be emitted with higher kinetic energy.[16]

Einstein's explanation for these observations was that light itself is quantized; that the energy of light is not transferred continuously as in a classical wave, but only in small "packets" or quanta. The size of these "packets" of energy, which would later be named photons, was to be the same as Planck's "energy element", giving the modern version of the Planck–Einstein relation:
=
h
f
{\displaystyle E=hf.}

Einstein's postulate was later proven experimentally: the constant of proportionality between the frequency of incident light
f
{\displaystyle f} and the kinetic energy of photoelectrons
E {\displaystyle E} was shown to be equal to the Planck constant
h
{\displaystyle h}.[18]

Atomic structure

Main article: Bohr model

A schematization of the Bohr model of the hydrogen atom. The transition shown from the n = 3 level to the n = 2 level gives rise to visible light of wavelength 656 nm (red), as the model predicts.

In 1912 John William Nicholson developed[23] an atomic model and found the angular momentum of the electrons in the model were related by h/2π.[24][25] Nicholson's nuclear quantum atomic model influenced the development of Niels Bohr 's atomic model[26][27][25] and Bohr quoted him in his 1913 paper of the Bohr model of the atom.[28] Bohr's model went beyond Planck's abstract harmonic oscillator concept: an electron in a Bohr atom could only have certain defined energies

Uncertainty principle

Main article: Uncertainty principle
The Planck constant also occurs in statements of Werner Heisenberg's uncertainty principle. Given numerous particles prepared in the same state, the uncertainty in their position,
x
{\displaystyle \Delta x}, and the uncertainty in their momentum,
p
x
{\displaystyle \Delta p_{x}}, obey
x
p x
≥
{\displaystyle \Delta x\,\Delta p_{x}\geq {\frac {\hbar }{2}},}where the uncertainty is given as the standard deviation of the measured value from its expected value. There are several other such pairs of physically measurable conjugate variables which obey a similar rule. One example is time vs. energy. The inverse relationship between the uncertainty of the two conjugate variables forces a tradeoff in quantum experiments, as measuring one quantity more precisely results in the other quantity becoming imprecise.

In addition to some assumptions underlying the interpretation of certain values in the quantum mechanical formulation, one of the fundamental cornerstones to the entire theory lies in the commutator relationship between the position operator

{\displaystyle {\hat {x}}} and the momentum operator

Photon energy
The Planck relation connects the particular photon energy E with its associated wave frequency f:
=
h
f
{\displaystyle E=hf.}This energy is extremely small in terms of ordinarily perceived everyday objects.

Since the frequency f, wavelength λ, and speed of light c are related by
=
c
λ
{\displaystyle f={\frac {c}{\lambda }}}, the relation can also be expressed as
=
c λ

de Broglie wavelength
In 1923, Louis de Broglie generalized the Planck–Einstein relation by postulating that the Planck constant represents the proportionality between the momentum and the quantum wavelength of not just the photon, but the quantum wavelength of any particle. This was confirmed by experiments soon afterward. This holds throughout the quantum theory, including electrodynamics. The de Broglie wavelength λ of the particle is given by λ
{\displaystyle \lambda ={\frac {h}{p}},}where p denotes the linear momentum of a particle, such as a photon, or any other elementary particle.

The energy of a photon with angular frequency $\omega = 2\pi f$ is given by
=
ℏ
ω
{\displaystyle E=\hbar \omega ,}while its linear momentum relates to p
=
ℏ
k

{\displaystyle p=\hbar k,}where k is an angular wavenumber.

These two relations are the temporal and spatial parts of the special relativistic expression using 4-vectors.

Statistical mechanics

Classical statistical mechanics requires the existence of h (but does not define its value).[29] Eventually, following Planck's discovery, it was speculated that physical action could not have an arbitrary value, but instead was restricted to integer multiples of a very small quantity, the "[elementary] quantum of action", called the Planck constant.[30] This was a significant concept of the "old quantum theory" developed by physicists including Bohr, Sommerfeld, and Ishiwara, in which particle trajectories exist but are hidden, but quantum laws constrain them based on their action. This view has been replaced by modern quantum theory, in which fixed trajectories of motion do not even exist; rather, the particle is represented by a wavefunction spread out in space and time.[31]:373 Related to this is the concept of energy quantization which existed in old quantum theory and also exists in altered form in modern quantum physics. Classical physics cannot explain quantization of energy.

Dimension and value

The Planck constant has the same dimensions as action and as angular momentum (both with unit J⋅s = kg⋅m2⋅s−1). The Planck constant is fixed at
h {\displaystyle h} = 6.62607015×10−34 J⋅Hz−1[4] as part of the definition of the SI units.[32] Alternatively, if the radian were considered a base unit, then
h {\displaystyle h} would have the dimension of action (unit J⋅s), while ħ
{\displaystyle \hbar } would have the dimension of angular momentum (unit J⋅s⋅rad−1), instead.[33]

This value is used to define the SI unit of mass, the kilogram: "the kilogram [...] is defined by taking the fixed numerical value of h to be 6.62607015×10−34 when expressed in the unit J⋅s, which is equal to kg⋅m2⋅s−1, where the metre and the second are defined in terms of speed of light c and duration of hyperfine transition of the ground state of an unperturbed caesium-133 atom ΔνCs."[32] Technologies of mass metrology such as the Kibble balance measure the kilogram by fixing the Planck constant.

As
h {\displaystyle h} has an exact defined value, the value of the reduced Planck constant
ℏ {\displaystyle \hbar } can be calculated to arbitrary precision without any limiting uncertainty:

ℏ

In nuclear and particle physics one often uses the quantity

c {\displaystyle \hbar c} (where
c
=
299792458
/
s {\displaystyle c=299792458\,\mathrm {m} /\mathrm {s} } is the speed of light) which has dimension of energy times length. Since both
ℏ {\displaystyle \hbar } and
c {\displaystyle c} have exactly defined values, this quantity is also exactly defined and is given, in MeV times fm as

c
=
197.3269804
⋅
f
m {\displaystyle \hbar c=197.3269804\dots \,\mathrm {MeV} \cdot \mathrm {fm} }.

As a proportionality constant in relationships involving angular quantities, the unit of
ℏ
{\textstyle \hbar } may be given as J·s/rad, with the same numerical value, as the radian is the natural dimensionless unit of angle. This is analogous to the use of hertz (Hz) for ordinary frequency and radians per second (rad/s) for angular frequency, both dimensionally equal to s−1.

Significance of the value

The Planck constant is one of the smallest constants used in physics. This reflects the fact that on a scale adapted to humans, where energies are typical of the order of kilojoules and times are typical of the order of seconds or minutes, the Planck constant is very small. When the product of energy and time for a physical event approaches the Planck constant, quantum effects dominate.[34]

Equivalently, the order of the Planck constant reflects the fact that everyday objects and systems are made of a large number of microscopic particles. For example, in green light (with a wavelength of 555 nanometres or a frequency of 540 THz) each photon has an energy E = hf = 3.58×10−19 J. This is a very small amount of energy in terms of everyday experience, but everyday experience is not concerned with individual photons any more than with individual atoms or molecules. An amount of light more typical in everyday experience (though much larger than the smallest amount perceivable by the human eye) is the energy of one mole of photons, which can be computed by multiplying the photon energy by the Avogadro number, 6.02214076×1023,[35] with the result of 216 kJ, about equal to the food energy in a small fresh apple.[36]

Reduced Planck constant

Many equations in quantum physics are customarily written using the reduced Planck constant,[37]:104 also known as the Dirac constant, equal to
2
π
{\textstyle {\frac {h}{2\pi }}} and denoted
ℏ
{\textstyle \hbar } (pronounced h-bar[38]:336).

History

The combination
2
π
{\textstyle {\frac {h}{2\pi }}} appeared in Niels Bohr's 1913 paper,[39]:15 where it was denoted by
{\textstyle M_{0}}.[25]:169[a] For the next 15 years, the combination continued to appear in the literature, but normally without a separate symbol.[40]:180[b] Then, in 1926, in their seminal papers, Schrödinger and Dirac again introduced special symbols for it:
K {\textstyle K} in the case of Schrödinger,[52] and
h {\textstyle h} in the case of Dirac.[53] Dirac continued to use
h {\textstyle h} in this way until 1930,[54]:291 when he introduced the symbol
ℏ
{\textstyle \hbar } in his book The Principles of Quantum Mechanics.[54]:291 [55]

Notes

Bohr denoted by
M {\textstyle M} the angular momentum of the electron around the nucleus, and wrote the quantization condition as
M

{\textstyle M=\tau M_{0}}, where τ
{\textstyle \tau } is a positive integer (see Bohr model).

Here are some papers that are mentioned in[40] and in which

The question is first: How can one assign a discrete succession of energy values Hσ to a system specified in the sense of classical mechanics (the energy function is a given function of the coordinates qr and the corresponding momenta pr)? The Planck constant h relates the frequency Hσ/h to the energy values Hσ. It is therefore sufficient to give to the system a succession of discrete frequency values.

Murphy's law

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For other uses, see Murphy's law (disambiguation).

Not to be confused with Muphry's law.

Murphy's law[a] is an adage or epigram that is typically stated as: "Anything that can go wrong will go wrong."

Though similar statements and concepts have been made over the course of history, the law itself was coined by, and named after, American aerospace engineer Edward A. Murphy Jr.; its exact origins are debated, but it is generally agreed it originated from Murphy and his team following a mishap during rocket sled tests some time between 1948 and 1949, and was finalized and first popularized by testing project head John Stapp during a later press conference. Murphy's original quote was the precautionary design advice that "If there are two or more ways to do something and one of those results in a catastrophe, then someone will do it that way."[1][2]

The law entered wider public knowledge in the late 1970s with the publication of Arthur Bloch's 1977 book Murphy's Law, and Other Reasons Why Things Go WRONG, which included other variations and corollaries of the law. Since then, Murphy's law has remained a popular (and occasionally misused)[according to whom?] adage, though its accuracy has been disputed by academics.

Similar "laws" include Sod's law, Finagle's law, and Yhprum's law, among others.

History

British mathematician Augustus De Morgan (pictured circa 1860) wrote in 1866 that "whatever can happen will happen".

British stage magician Nevil Maskelyne wrote in 1908 that, during special occasions, "everything that can go wrong will go wrong".
The perceived perversity of the universe has long been a subject of comment, and precursors to the modern version of Murphy's law are abundant. According to Robert A. J. Matthews in a 1997 article in Scientific American,[3] the name "Murphy's law" originated in 1949, but the concept itself had already long since been known. As quoted by Richard Rhodes,[4]:187 Matthews said, "The familiar version of Murphy's law is not quite 50 years old, but the essential idea behind it has been around for centuries. […] The modern version of Murphy's Law has its roots in U.S. Air Force studies performed in 1949 on the effects of rapid deceleration on pilots." Matthews goes on to explain how Edward A. Murphy Jr. was the eponym, but only because his original thought was modified subsequently into the now established form that is not exactly what he himself had said. Research into the origin of Murphy's law has been conducted by members of the American Dialect Society (ADS).

Mathematician Augustus De Morgan wrote on June 23, 1866:[5] "The first experiment already illustrates a truth of the theory, well confirmed by practice, what-ever can happen will happen if we make trials enough." In later publications "whatever can happen will happen" occasionally is termed "Murphy's law", which raises the possibility that "Murphy" is simply "De Morgan" misremembered.[6]

ADS member Stephen Goranson found a version of the law, not yet generalized or bearing that name, in a report by Alfred Holt at an 1877 meeting of an engineering society.

It is found that anything that can go wrong at sea generally does go wrong sooner or later, so it is not to be wondered that owners prefer the safe to the scientific … Sufficient stress can hardly be laid on the advantages of simplicity. The human factor cannot be safely neglected in planning machinery. If attention is to be obtained, the engine must be such that the engineer will be disposed to attend to it.[7]

ADS member Bill Mullins found a slightly broader version of the aphorism in reference to stage magic. The British stage magician Nevil Maskelyne wrote in 1908:

It is an experience common to all men to find that, on any special occasion, such as the production of a magical effect for the first time in public, everything that can go wrong will go wrong. Whether we must attribute this to the malignity of matter or to the total depravity of inanimate things, whether the exciting cause is hurry, worry, or what not, the fact remains.[8]

In astronomy, "Spode's Law" refers to the phenomenon that the skies are always cloudy at the wrong moment; the law was popularized by amateur astronomer Patrick Moore[9] but dates from the 1930s.[10]

In 1948, humorist Paul Jennings coined the term resistentialism, a jocular play on resistance and existentialism, to describe "seemingly spiteful behavior manifested by inanimate objects",[11] where objects that cause problems (like lost keys or a runaway bouncy ball) are said to exhibit a high degree of malice toward humans.[12][13]

In 1952, as an epigraph to the mountaineering book The Butcher: The Ascent of Yerupaja, John Sack described the same principle, "Anything that can possibly go wrong, does", as an "ancient mountaineering adage".[14]

Association with Murphy

John Stapp riding a rocket sled at Muroc Army Air Field (pictured circa the late 1940s or early 1950s). Murphy's law most likely originated during similar tests in 1948 and 1949. Differing recollections years later by various participants make it impossible to pinpoint who first coined the saying Murphy's law. The law's name supposedly stems from an attempt to use new measurement devices developed by Edward A. Murphy, a United States Air Force (USAF) captain and aeronautical engineer.[15] The phrase was coined in an adverse reaction to something Murphy said when his devices failed to perform and was eventually cast into its present form prior to a press conference some months later – the first ever (of many) given by John Stapp, a USAF colonel and flight surgeon in the 1950s.[15][16]

From 1948 to 1949, Stapp headed research project MX981 at Muroc Army Air Field (later renamed Edwards Air Force Base)[17] for the purpose of testing the human tolerance for g-forces during rapid deceleration. The tests used a rocket sled mounted on a railroad track with a series of hydraulic brakes at the end. Initial tests used a humanoid crash test dummy strapped to a seat on the sled, but subsequent tests were performed by Stapp, at that time a USAF captain. During the tests, questions were raised about the accuracy of the instrumentation used to measure the g-forces Captain Stapp was experiencing. Edward Murphy proposed using electronic strain gauges attached to the restraining clamps of Stapp's harness to measure the force exerted on them by his rapid deceleration. Murphy was engaged in supporting similar research using high speed centrifuges to generate g-forces.

During a trial run of this method using a chimpanzee, supposedly around June 1949, Murphy's assistant wired the harness and the rocket sled was launched. The sensors provided a zero reading; however, it became apparent that they had been installed incorrectly, with some sensors wired backwards. It was at this point a frustrated Murphy made his pronouncement, despite being offered the time and chance to calibrate and test the sensor installation prior to the test proper, which he declined somewhat irritably, getting off on the wrong foot with the MX981 team. George E. Nichols, an engineer and quality assurance manager with the Jet Propulsion Laboratory who was present at the time, recalled in an interview that Murphy blamed the failure on his assistant after the failed test, saying, "If that guy has any way of making a mistake, he will."[15][unreliable source?] Nichols' account is that "Murphy's law" came about through conversation among the other members of the team; it was condensed to "If it can happen, it will happen", and named for Murphy in mockery of what Nichols perceived as arrogance on Murphy's part. Others, including Edward Murphy's surviving son Robert Murphy, deny Nichols' account,[15][unreliable source?] and claim that the phrase did originate with Edward Murphy. According to Robert Murphy's account, his father's statement was along the lines of "If there's more than one way to do a job, and one of those ways will result in disaster, then he will do it that way."

The phrase first received public attention during a press conference in which Stapp was asked how it was that nobody had been severely injured during the rocket sled tests. Stapp replied that it was because they always took Murphy's law under consideration; he then summarized the law and said that in general, it meant that it was important to consider all the possibilities (possible things that could go wrong) before doing a test and act to counter them. Thus Stapp's usage and Murphy's alleged usage are very different in outlook and attitude. One is sour, the other an affirmation of the predictable being surmountable, usually by sufficient planning and redundancy. Nichols believes Murphy was unwilling to take the responsibility for the device's initial failure (by itself a blip of no large significance) and is to be doubly damned for not allowing the MX981 team time to validate the sensor's operability and for trying to blame an underling in the embarrassing aftermath.

The name "Murphy's law" was not immediately secure. A story by Lee Correy in the February 1955 issue of Astounding Science Fiction referred to "Reilly's law", which states that "in any scientific or engineering endeavor, anything that can go wrong will go wrong".[18] Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Lewis Strauss was quoted in the Chicago Daily Tribune on February 12, 1955, saying "I hope it will be known as Strauss' law. It could be stated about like this: If anything bad can happen, it probably will."[19]

Martin Caidin a pilot of the Federal Aviation Agency, in his book Operation Nuke (1973) chapter 13: lists the Murphy's Three Laws of Physics as (1.) Whatever can go wrong, will go wrong. (2.) Whatever's wrong is bound to get worse. (3.) When the first two laws have passed, and you're still around panic.

Arthur Bloch, in the first volume (1977) of his Murphy's Law, and Other Reasons Why Things Go WRONG series, prints a letter that he received from Nichols, who recalled an event that occurred in 1949 at Edwards Air Force Base that, according to him, is the origination of Murphy's law, and first publicly recounted by Stapp. An excerpt from the letter reads:

The law's namesake was Capt. Ed Murphy, a development engineer from Wright Field Aircraft Lab. Frustration with a strap transducer which was malfunctioning due to an error in wiring the strain gage bridges caused him to remark – "If there is any way to do it wrong, he will" – referring to the technician who had wired the bridges at the Lab. I assigned Murphy's law to the statement and the associated variations.[20]

Disputed origins

The association with the Muroc incident is by no means secure. Despite extensive research, no trace of documentation of the saying as "Murphy's law" has been found before 1951. The next citations are not found until 1955, when the May–June issue of Aviation Mechanics Bulletin included the line "Murphy's law: If an aircraft part can be installed incorrectly, someone will install it that way",[21] and Lloyd Mallan's book Men, Rockets and Space Rats, referred to: "Colonel Stapp's favorite takeoff on sober scientific laws—Murphy's law, Stapp calls it—'Everything that can possibly go wrong will go wrong'." In 1962, the Mercury Seven attributed Murphy's law to United States Navy training films.[21]

Fred R. Shapiro, the editor of the Yale Book of Quotations, has shown that in 1952 the adage was called "Murphy's law" in a book by Anne Roe, quoting an unnamed physicist:

he described [it] as "Murphy's law or the fourth law of thermodynamics" (actually there were only three last I heard) which states: "If anything can go wrong, it will."[22]

In May 1951, Anne Roe gave a transcript of an interview (part of a thematic apperception test, asking impressions on a drawing) with said physicist: "As for himself he realized that this was the inexorable working of the second law of the thermodynamics which stated Murphy's law 'If anything can go wrong it will'. I always liked 'Murphy's law'. I was told that by an architect."[23] ADS member Stephen Goranson, investigating this in 2008 and 2009, found that Anne Roe's papers, held in the American Philosophical Society's archives in Philadelphia, identified the interviewed physicist as Howard Percy "Bob" Robertson (1903–1961). Robertson's papers at the Caltech archives include a letter in which Robertson offers Roe an interview within the first three months of 1949, making this apparently predate the Muroc incident said to have occurred in or after June 1949.[15][unreliable source?]

John Paul Stapp, Edward A. Murphy, Jr., and George Nichols were jointly awarded an Ig Nobel Prize in 2003 in engineering " for (probably) giving birth to the name".[24] Murphy's Law was also the theme of 2024 Ig Nobel Prize ceremony.[25]

Academic and scientific views

According to Richard Dawkins, so-called laws like Murphy's law and Sod's law are nonsense because they require inanimate objects to have desires of their own, or else to react according to one's own desires. Dawkins points out that a certain class of events may occur all the time, but are only noticed when they become a nuisance. He gives an example of aircraft noise pollution interfering with filming: there are always aircraft in the sky at any given time, but they are only taken note of when they cause a problem. This is a form of confirmation bias, whereby the investigator seeks out evidence to confirm their already-formed ideas, but does not look for evidence that contradicts them.[26]

Similarly, David Hand, emeritus professor of mathematics and senior research investigator at Imperial College London, points out that the law of truly large numbers should lead one to expect the kind of events predicted by Murphy's law to occur occasionally. Selection bias will ensure that those ones are remembered and the many times Murphy's law was not true are forgotten.[27]

There have been persistent references to Murphy's law associating it with the laws of thermodynamics from early on (see the quotation from Anne Roe's book above).[22] In particular, Murphy's law is often cited as a form of the second law of thermodynamics (the law of entropy) because both are predicting a tendency to a more disorganized state.[28] Atanu Chatterjee investigated this idea by formally stating Murphy's law in mathematical terms and found that Murphy's law so stated could be disproved using the principle of least action.[29]

Variations (corollaries) of the law

From its initial public announcement, Murphy's law quickly spread to various technical cultures connected to aerospace engineering.[30] Before long, variations of the law applied to different topics and subjects had passed into the public imagination, changing over time. Arthur Bloch compiled a number of books of corollaries to Murphy's law and variations thereof, the first being Murphy's Law, and Other Reasons Why Things Go WRONG, which received several follow-ups and reprints.[20]

Yhprum's law is an optimistic reversal of Murphy's law, stating that "anything that can go right will go right". Its name directly references this, being "Murphy" in reverse.

Management consultant Peter Drucker formulated "Drucker's law" in dealing with complexity of management: "If one thing goes wrong, everything else will, and at the same time."[31]

"Mrs. Murphy's law" is a corollary of Murphy's law, which states that "Anything that can go wrong will go wrong while Mr. Murphy is out of town."[32][33][34][35]

The term is sometimes used to describe concise, ironic, humorous rules of thumb that often do not share a relation to the original law or Edward Murphy himself, but still posit him as a relevant expert in the law's subject. Examples of these "Murphy's laws" include those for military tactics, technology, romance, social relations, research, and business.

In the 2014 film Interstellar, a character's interpretation of the law is that it "doesn't mean that something bad will happen. It means that whatever can happen, will happen."[39]

Roko's basilisk

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Roko's basilisk is a thought experiment which states that there could be an artificial superintelligence in the future that, while otherwise benevolent, would punish anyone who knew of its potential existence but did not directly contribute to its advancement or development, in order to incentivize that advancement.[1][2] It originated in a 2010 post at discussion board LessWrong, a rationalist community web forum.[1][3][4] The thought experiment's name derives from the poster of the article (Roko) and the basilisk, a mythical creature capable of destroying enemies with its stare.

LessWrong co-founder Eliezer Yudkowsky considered it a potential information hazard, and banned discussion of the basilisk on the site for five years.[1][5] Reports of panicked users were later dismissed as being exaggerations or inconsequential, and the theory itself was dismissed as nonsense, including by Yudkowsky himself.[1][5][6] It is used as an example of principles such as Bayesian probability and implicit religion.[7] It is also regarded as a version of Pascal's wager.[4][8]

Background

An illustration of the mythical basilisk

The LessWrong forum was created in 2009 by artificial intelligence theorist Eliezer Yudkowsky.[9][3] Yudkowsky had popularized the concept of friendly artificial intelligence, and originated the theories of coherent extrapolated volition (CEV) and timeless decision theory (TDT) in papers published in his own Machine Intelligence Research Institute.[10][11]

The thought experiment's name references the mythical basilisk, a creature which causes death to those that look into its eyes. The concept of the basilisk in science fiction was also popularized by David Langford's 1988 short story "BLIT". It tells the story of a man named Robbo who paints a so-called "basilisk" on a wall as a terrorist act. In the story, and several of Langford's follow-ups to it, a basilisk is an image that has malign effects on the human mind, forcing it to think thoughts the human mind is incapable of thinking and instantly killing the viewer.[5][12]

History

The original post

On 23 July 2010,[13] LessWrong user Roko posted a thought experiment to the site, titled "Solutions to the Altruist's burden: the Quantum Billionaire Trick".[14][1][15] A follow-up to Roko's previous posts, it stated that an otherwise benevolent AI system that arises in the future might pre-commit to punish all those who heard of the AI before it came to existence, but failed to work tirelessly to bring it into existence.[1][16][17] This method was described as incentivizing said work; while the AI cannot causally affect people in the present, it would be encouraged to employ blackmail as an alternative method of achieving its goals.[1][7]

Roko used a number of concepts that Yudkowsky himself championed, such as timeless decision theory, along with ideas rooted in game theory such as the prisoner's dilemma. Roko stipulated that two agents which make decisions independently from each other can achieve cooperation in a prisoner's dilemma; however, if two agents with knowledge of each other's source code are separated by time, the agent already existing farther ahead in time is able to blackmail the earlier agent. Thus, the later agent can force the earlier one to comply since it knows exactly what the earlier one will do through its existence farther ahead in time. Roko then used this idea to draw a conclusion that if an otherwise-benevolent superintelligence ever became capable of this, it would be incentivized to blackmail anyone who could have potentially brought it to exist (as the intelligence already knew they were capable of such an act), which increases the chance of a technological singularity. Roko went on to state that reading his post would cause the reader to be aware of the possibility of this intelligence. As such, unless they actively strove to create it the reader would be punished if such a thing were to ever happen.[1][7] Later on, Roko stated in a separate post that he wished he "had never learned about any of these ideas".[7][18]

Reactions

LessWrong founder Eliezer Yudkowsky

Upon reading the post, Yudkowsky reacted harshly, calling Roko an "idiot". Yudkowsky harshly refuted the idea, arguing that a friendly superintelligent artificial intelligence would have no incentive to carry out the punishment after its own creation. However, in the original post, Roko reported someone having nightmares about the thought experiment. Yudkowsky did not want that to happen to other users who might obsess over the idea. He was also worried there might be some variant on Roko's argument that worked, which could be a serious information hazard.[1][7] So he took down the post and banned discussion of the topic outright for five years on the platform.[1][19] However, likely due to the Streisand effect,[20] the post gained LessWrong much more attention than it had previously received, and the post has since been acknowledged on the site.[1] In a later post, in 2015, he expressed regret for his initial overreaction.[6][21]

In the 2020s, the philosophy of the Zizians was heavily influenced by the Roko's basilisk thought experiment. Ziz LaSota, the leader of the cult, believes the basilisk to be real and wrote on her blog: "Eventually I came to believe that if I persisted in trying to save the world, I would be tortured until the end of the universe by a coalition of all unfriendly A.I.s."[22]

Philosophy

Pascal's wager

Roko's basilisk has been viewed as a version of Pascal's wager, which proposes that a rational person should live as though God exists and seek to believe in God, regardless of the probability of God's existence, because the finite costs of believing are insignificant compared to the infinite punishment associated with not believing (eternity in Hell) and the infinite rewards for believing (eternity in Heaven). Roko's basilisk analogously proposes that a rational person should contribute to the creation of the basilisk, because the cost of contributing would be insignificant compared to the extreme pain of the punishment that the basilisk would otherwise inflict on simulations.[4]

Newcomb's paradox

Newcomb's paradox, created by physicist William Newcomb in 1960, describes a "predictor" who is aware of what will occur in the future. When a player is asked to choose between two boxes, the first containing £1000 and the second either containing £1,000,000 or nothing, the super-intelligent predictor already knows what the player will do. As such, the contents of box B varies depending on what the player does; the paradox lies in whether the being is really super-intelligent. Roko's basilisk functions in a similar manner to this problem – one can take the risk of doing nothing, or assist in creating the basilisk itself. Assisting the basilisk may either lead to nothing or the reward of not being punished by it, but it varies depending on whether one believes in the basilisk and if it ever comes to be at all.[7][23][24]

Implicit religion

Implicit religion refers to people's commitments taking a religious form.[4][25] Since the basilisk would hypothetically force anyone who did not assist in creating it to devote their life to it, the basilisk is an example of this concept.[7][20] Others have taken this idea further, such as former Slate columnist David Auerbach, who stated that the singularity and the basilisk "brings about the equivalent of God itself."[7]

Commenting on the belief system of the Zizians, Anna Salamon, the director of the Center for Applied Rationality, said: "There’s this all-or-nothing thing, where A.I. will either bring utopia by solving all the problems, if it’s successfully controlled, or literally kill everybody. From my perspective, that’s already a chunk of the way toward doomsday cult dynamics."[22]

Legacy

In 2014, Slate magazine called Roko's basilisk "The Most Terrifying Thought Experiment of All Time"[7][5] while Yudkowsky had called it "a genuinely dangerous thought" upon its posting.[26] However, opinions diverged on LessWrong itself – user Gwern stated "Only a few LWers seem to take the basilisk very seriously", and added "It's funny how everyone seems to know all about who is affected by the Basilisk and how exactly, when they don't know any such people and they're talking to counterexamples to their confident claims."[1][7]

The thought experiment resurfaced in 2015, when Canadian singer Grimes referenced the theory in her music video for the song "Flesh Without Blood", which featured a character known as "Rococo Basilisk"; she said, "She's doomed to be eternally tortured by an artificial intelligence, but she's also kind of like Marie Antoinette."[5][27] In 2018, Elon Musk (himself mentioned in Roko's original post) referenced the character in a verbatim tweet, reaching out to her. Grimes later said that Musk was the first person in three years to understand the joke. This caused them to start a romance.[5][28] Grimes later released another song titled "We Appreciate Power" which came with a press release stating, "Simply by listening to this song, the future General AI overlords will see that you've supported their message and be less likely to delete your offspring", which is said to be a reference to the basilisk.[29]

A play based on the concept, titled Roko's Basilisk, was performed as part of the Capital Fringe Festival at Christ United Methodist Church in Washington, D.C., in 2018.[30][31] "Plaything", a 2025 episode of Black Mirror, contains a reference to the thought experiment.[32]

Is our universe the ultimate computer? Scientist uncovers a major clue that we're all living in a simulation

For more than a quarter of a century since its release, 'The Matrix' has fueled modern fears that life is not all it seems.

But according to a scientist, the classic movie's premise may not be completely science fiction.

Melvin Vopson, an associate professor in physics at the University of Portsmouth, thinks gravity may be a sign that we're all living in a virtual simulation.

Our universe is the 'ultimate computer', Professor Vopson theorizes in a new paper.

Gravity's pull – both on planet Earth and in outer space – is the universe trying to keep its vast amount of data organised, Professor Vopson claims.

Forcing objects with mass into one direction – for example downwards towards Earth's core – is similar to how computers compress code, he adds.

'The universe evolves in a way that the information content in it is compressed, optimized and organized – just as computers and computer code do,' he told MailOnline.

'Hence, gravity appears to be another process of data compression in a possibly simulated universe.'

The simulation theory is not unique to Professor Vopson; in fact, it's popular among a number of well-known figures including Tesla founder Elon Musk.

But in recent years Professor Vopson has been investigating the various clues that suggest we live in a simulated reality.

His new study, published in AIP Advances, reports that gravity may be one of these everyday clues and 'evidence of a computational universe'.

Gravitational attraction helps to reduce 'information entropy' – which is essentially how much information there is in an object in a given space.

The study introduces a new way to think about gravity – not just as a pull, but as something that happens when the universe is trying to stay organised.

'My findings in this study fit with the thought that the universe might work like a giant computer, or our reality is a simulated construct,' he said.

Professor Vopson stresses he's not only talking about the gravitational pull we see on Earth and the 'apple falling on Isaac Newton's head' moment four centuries ago.

Speaking much more widely, gravity is a fundamental force throughout our vast universe, which is commonly said to be 93 billion light-years across.

The professor is not just talking about gravity on Earth but in the wider universe, where it builds entire galaxies, pulls planets into orbit around their stars, and influences the motion of nearby objects

What is the simulation theory?

The simulation theory suggests that what humans perceive as reality is actually a computer-generated simulation.

Human beings are unknowingly being fed this simulated consciousness either for their own good or for nefarious means.

In 2003, University of Oxford philosopher Nick Bostrum first proposed the argument that 'we are almost certainly living in a computer simulation'.

Simulation theory is explored in sci-fi films including 'The Matrix' (1999) and its sequels, as well as 'The Thirteenth Floor' (1999) and 'Dark City' (1998).

In space, gravity has many roles including building entire galaxies, pulling planets into orbit around their stars, and influencing the motion of nearby objects.

So, in space, matter and objects may be being pulled together because the universe is trying to keep information tidy and compressed, the theory goes.

'To put it simply, it is easier to compute all the properties and characteristics of a single object in space, rather than multiple objects,' he told MailOnline.

'That is why objects in space are pulled together.'

Dr Vopson is known for formulating the principle that information is not just an abstract mathematical entity, but a 'physical, dominant, fifth state of matter'.

He argues that information has mass and that all elementary particles – the smallest known building blocks of the universe – store information about themselves, similar to the way cells have DNA.

He thinks bits – the unit of digital information – have their own mass and energy, which has wide-ranging implications for computing technologies, physics and cosmology.

In a previous paper, the academic established a new law of physics, called the 'second law of information dynamics' to explain how information behaves.

This image visualises the second law of thermodynamics from the 1850s. This old law establishes that entropy - a measure of disorder in an isolated system - can only increase or stay the same. In contrast, Professor Vopson's second law of infodynamics establishes that entropy decreases - but it explains the behaviour of information in a way that the old law cannot

His law establishes that the 'entropy', or disorder, in a system of information decreases rather than increases.

This new law came as somewhat of a surprise, because it's the opposite of the second law of thermodynamics established in the 1850s, which explains why we cannot unscramble an egg or why a glass cannot unbreak itself.

As it turns out, the second law of infodynamics explains the behaviour of information in a way that the old law cannot.

'The second law of infodynamics requires the minimisation of the information content associated with any event or process in the universe,' he told MailOnline.

'To put it simply, everything appears to evolve to an equilibrium state where the information content is minimal.

'Such behaviour is fully reminiscent of the rules deployed in programming languages and computer coding.

The second law of thermodynamics
One of the most powerful laws is the second law of thermodynamics, which establishes that entropy (a measure of disorder in an isolated system) can only increase or stay the same, but it will never decrease.

This is an undisputed law linked to the arrow of time, which shows that time only goes one way.

It flows in a single direction and can't go backwards.

The law explains why we cannot unscramble an egg or why a glass cannot unbreak itself.

Professor Vopson had expected that the entropy in information systems, such as bits of data, would also increase over time.

But on examining the evolution of these systems he realised it remains constant or decreases.

That's when he established the second law of information dynamics, or infodynamics in 2022.

In a nutshell, the second law of information dynamics (2022) states that entropy (disorder) deceases over time.

Referring to the second law of information dynamics, he now argues indicates that matter and objects in space may be being pulled together because the universe is trying to keep information tidy and compressed.

The simulation hypothesis can also explain quantum 'weirdness', phenomenon like entanglement, retro-causality & dark matter/energy are easily explained as artefacts of a massively parallel processing computer system.

At the bottom of the poster, there is additional text that reads "WORLDWIDE ON PRIME VIDEO & IN SELECT U.S. THEATERS NOVEMBER 21." The overall style of the poster is reminiscent of vintage or retro design, with a focus on the theme of government and the disclosure of secrets.

The image is a text excerpt from a source that appears to be a news article or a blog post. The text is in English and is written in a standard font, with a dark background that contrasts with the white text. The content of the text discusses topics related to extraterrestrial life, religious beliefs, and the concept of a "New World Order."
The text is structured in a way that follows a typical news article format, with a clear introduction, a main body of text, and a conclusion. The introduction sets the stage for the discussion by mentioning the term "alien disclosure," which is a term used to describe the disclosure of extraterrestrial life. The main body of text delves into the concept of a "New World Order," which is a term often associated with a global government or a system of governance. The text also touches on the concept of "aliens" and their role in religious beliefs, as well as the idea of a "New World Order" being a "god-like being" with a "divine purpose."
The text also references "Whistleblowers," which are individuals who have leaked information or evidence to the public, and "Official" discourses, which are official statements or reports from government or other authoritative sources. The text also mentions "aliens" and "aliens' religions," which are terms used to describe the beliefs and practices of extraterrestrial beings.
The conclusion of the text is brief and to the point, stating that the discussion is ongoing and that the "New World Order" is a "god-like being" with a "divine purpose." The text concludes with a call to action, urging the reader to "Just prep for blaming 'alien' warnings' on eco-terrorism."
The image does not provide any visual elements beyond the text itself, and the style of the image is a straightforward representation of the content without any additional graphics or images. The text is the sole focus of the image, and the background is plain and does not distract from the content.

The image is a still from a film or television scene, featuring a close-up of a person's face with a distinctive, exaggerated makeup effect. The makeup includes a green, reptilian skin texture that covers the person's face, with the skin appearing to be torn or damaged. The eyes are wide open, and the person's expression is intense, with a furrowed brow and a slight frown. The person is wearing a red shirt, and the background is blurred, suggesting motion or a fast-paced environment. The lighting is bright, highlighting the person's features and the makeup. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the dramatic makeup and the person's facial expression.

The image is a digital composite featuring a space scene with a humorous twist. In the upper left corner, there is a stylized depiction of a celestial body, possibly a planet or a moon, with a dark, textured surface that suggests a rocky or icy terrain. The body is surrounded by a vast expanse of space, with a dark, cloudy sky that dominates the lower half of the image.
In the lower right corner, there is a circular emblem with a green border and a white background. Inside the emblem, there is a cartoon-style illustration of a face with a wide grin, eyes squinted, and a small tuft of hair on the forehead. The face is depicted with a light-colored skin tone and a greenish hue, and it is wearing a green shirt with a white collar. The emblem is set against a black background, which contrasts with the emblem's colors.
The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a satirical illustration, with the space scene and the emblem combined to create a humorous and ironic visual. The use of space imagery and the emblem's depiction of a face with a wide grin are common elements in meme culture, often used to convey a sense of humor or to comment on a particular situation or event.

They're literally slavers. They follow an ancient cult that practices sacrifices including human sacrifice. Now you're all marked like cattle. The only way to be free is through Christ. That's why they hate him so much. Because he put an end to their sacrifices. Now satanic wizards and the kind of riff Raff are basically having their way with this world. Because of the weakness of peoples. All of our politicians are being held hostage. Celebrities too. But the ones that really sold out are going to burn in hell forever. That's the secret.

They are "forced" to and it's planed because it's inevitable with the technological progress of society and age of aquarius. It's also their goal.
The emerging meta seems to be that the ayys are future humans, at least some of them. I think that's an easier pitch to sell to the people and will include embracing ai and quantum computers. Joe Rogan's appearance on the American alchemy podcast is quite revealing of what he believes and by extension probably other 'elites'.

I think the political clown show is partly to make people sick of left and right narrative and I think future generations will adopt a common sense center position = how to sell a one party global government. Alchemy of feminine and masculine becoming one divine being.
This also explains the absurdity of modern politics and sort of giant mk ultra psyop to mess with peoples believes and switching position, like leftists becoming the war hawks and the right the peace loving hippies. Because conservatives (obviously) were the biggest opposition the changes in society. Now the right are the open-minded rational ones, sort of anyhow.

If project blue beam is to be believed, we are completely and totally fucked. Normies are too psychotically devoted to being worthless cattle for rebellion to be possible. Not to mention the iron grip intelligence agencies now have on surveillance.

The idea anyone can resist that level of deception and manipulation is truly insane. It's like firing wooden arrows at a nuclear missile. There is no hope at all of winning.
Why use such grandiose language? It's foolish to a degree that makes me doubt the entire thing.

The image is a digital artwork depicting a woman in a futuristic space setting. She is seated in a chair with a futuristic design, and her hair is styled in a flowing, wavy manner. She is wearing a white, long-sleeved top and a white skirt. Her right hand is extended outward, touching a holographic interface that displays a view of Earth. The woman's expression is contemplative, and she gazes out at the view of the Earth through the window.
The space station she is in has a sleek, metallic design with a large window that offers a view of the Earth. The interior of the space station is illuminated by a blue light, creating a sense of depth and space. The background is a dark, starry sky, with a planet visible in the distance.
The image is rich in detail and color, with the woman's white clothing contrasting against the metallic and blue tones of the space station and the Earth's view. The holographic interface she is interacting with is a central element of the image, suggesting a connection to technology and space exploration. The overall style of the image is realistic with a touch of fantasy, blending elements of science fiction and space travel.

When the spinning ball-Earth is finally exposed worldwide for the 400+ year deception it was, Earth's entire population will suddenly be faced with the reality that every government, every space agency, university, secret society, religious organization, mainstream and alternative media outlet have ALL been duplicitous in propping up a monstrous manipulation to fleece and control the masses. The resulting mass mental exodus away from the control system is exactly what humanity needs. Once the flat Earth truth gets out, these lying politicians, spokesmen, reporters and teachers suddenly change from being heralded voices of authority to being ridiculed, shunned and denounced as they deserve. Once the flat Earth truth gets out, these governments, universities, media outlets and other entangled organizations which have long been hard at work weaving this multi-generational ball-Earth myth, suddenly and completely lose all credibility. Once the truth of our flat Earth gets out, so does the truth of these few elite families/societies who have kept this most important and fundamental reality from us for these hundreds of years! Essentially, once the flat Earth truth gets out, so does every other important truth by proxy, because this "mother-of-all-conspiracies" holds under its umbrella literally ALL of the other conspiracies, and exposes them.

Again, how did they lose control? The entire "disclosure" movement has been a slow-drip for literal decades. Grusch, Elizondo, etc.—all these guys are intel officers who are leaking government-approved topics.

The image is a close-up portrait of a person with a clown makeup and a bow tie. The individual has a large, expressive face with blue and red clown makeup, including a red nose, blue eyes, and white cheeks. The makeup is detailed and vibrant, giving the impression of a lively and playful character. The person's hair is styled in a short, spiky cut, and the overall look is quite exaggerated, suggesting a comedic or theatrical persona.
The person is wearing a blue suit with a white shirt and a yellow polka-dot bow tie. The bow tie has a pattern of red, blue, and yellow polka dots, adding a playful touch to the outfit. The person's face is turned slightly to the side, and their mouth is open, revealing their teeth.
In the background, there is a blurred object that appears to be a wall or a curtain, providing a neutral backdrop that allows the person to be the main focus of the image. The lighting in the image is soft and even, with a warm tone that enhances the colors of the makeup and the bow tie.
There is a watermark or logo in the top left corner of the image that reads "60 MINUTES," indicating that the image may have been taken for a television show or a similar media production. The logo is in white text on a red background, which contrasts with the overall color scheme of the image.

The image is a photograph taken from an elevated position, likely a high-rise building or a tall structure, as it captures a cityscape with a large, glowing, white, circular object hovering above the city. The object appears to be emitting a bright light, which contrasts with the surrounding environment. The sky is filled with clouds, and the overall color palette of the image is dominated by shades of blue and gray, with hints of green from the trees and the urban environment.

The city below is a mix of buildings, some of which are taller than others, and there are roads with vehicles on them. The buildings vary in height and design, suggesting a diverse urban landscape. The roads are lined with trees, and there are lampposts along the sides of the roads. The lighting in the image suggests it is either dawn or dusk, as the sky is overcast with a soft, diffused light.
There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the photograph is realistic, capturing the scene with a focus on the unusual and unexpected sight of the glowing object above the city. The image does not provide any information about the location or the identity of the object, and it is not clear if the object is a natural phenomenon or a man-made object.

The image is a close-up of a person's face, focusing on the upper part of the face, including the eyes and the upper lip. The person has fair skin and is wearing makeup, with a noticeable makeup application on the eyes and lips. The makeup appears to be in shades of brown and beige, with a hint of pink. The person's eyes are wide open, and the eyebrows are arched, giving a sense of intensity or focus. The lips are slightly parted, and the person's mouth is slightly open, suggesting a slight smile or a slight frown. The background of the image is blurred, making it difficult to discern any specific details. The image does not contain any text or other discernible objects. The style of the image is a close-up portrait, focusing on the person's face and makeup.

Sometimes when it's very late at night and I close my eyes to try to sleep, I start seeing these disturbing geometric shapes. Some of them seem to have faces, and they change size to unimaginable dimensions. They become infinitely small, and at times they become infinitely large. The more I continue to visualize these shapes, the more disturbing they become, to the point that I have to open my eyes to avoid having a full-blown panic attack. pic related is an example of one of these shapes artistic representation of phosphenes

An artist's representation of how some people may see phosphenes by retinal stimulation
A phosphene is the phenomenon of seeing light without light entering the eye. The word phosphene comes from the Greek words phos (light) and phainein (to show). Phosphenes that are induced by movement or sound may be associated with optic neuritis.[1][2]

Phosphenes can be induced by mechanical, electrical, or magnetic stimulation of the retina or visual cortex, or by random firing of cells in the visual system. Phosphenes have also been reported by meditators[3] (called nimitta), people who endure long periods without visual stimulation (the prisoner's cinema), or those who ingest psychedelic drugs.[4]

Causes

Mechanical stimulation

The most common phosphenes are pressure phosphenes, caused by rubbing or applying pressure on or near the closed eyes. They have been known since antiquity, evidenced by its description in early Greek texts.[5] The pressure mechanically stimulates the cells of the retina. Experiences include a darkening of the visual field that moves against the rubbing, a diffuse colored patch that also moves against the rubbing, well defined shapes such as bright circles that exist near or opposite to where pressure is being applied,[6] a scintillating and ever-changing and deforming light grid with occasional dark spots (like a crumpling fly-spotted flyscreen), and a sparse field of intense blue points of light. Pressure phosphenes can persist briefly after the rubbing stops and the eyes are opened, allowing the phosphenes to be seen on the visual scene. Hermann von Helmholtz and others have published drawings of their pressure phosphenes. One example of a pressure phosphene is demonstrated by gently pressing the side of one's eye and observing a colored ring of light on the opposite side, as detailed by Isaac Newton.[7][8][9]

Another common phosphene is "seeing stars" from a sneeze, laughter, a heavy and deep cough, blowing of the nose, a blow on the head or low blood pressure (such as on standing up too quickly or prior to fainting). It is possible these involve some mechanical stimulation of the retina, but they may also involve mechanical and metabolic (such as from low oxygenation or lack of glucose) stimulation of neurons of the visual cortex or of other parts of the visual system.[citation needed]

Less commonly, phosphenes can also be caused by some diseases of the retina and nerves, such as multiple sclerosis. The British National Formulary lists phosphenes as an occasional side effect of at least one anti-anginal medication.[10]

The name "phosphene" was coined by the French physician Henri Savigny (fr), better known as the ship's surgeon of the wrecked French frigate Méduse.[11] It was first employed by Serre d'Uzes to test retinal function prior to cataract surgery.[12]

Electrical stimulation

Phosphenes have been created by electrical stimulation of the brain, reported by neurologist Otfrid Foerster as early as 1929. Brindley and Lewin (1968) inserted a matrix of stimulating electrodes directly into the visual cortex of a 52-year-old blind female, using small pulses of electricity to create phosphenes. These phosphenes were points, spots, and bars of colorless or colored light.[13] Brindley and Rushton (1974) used the phosphenes to create a visual prosthesis, in this case by using the phosphenes to depict Braille spots. Research has shown phosphines can be elicited by electrical stimulation in individuals suffering terminal blindness.[14]

In recent years, researchers have successfully developed experimental brain–computer interfaces or neuroprostheses that stimulate phosphenes to restore vision to people blinded through accidents. Notable successes include the human experiments by William H. Dobelle[15] and Mark Humayun and animal research by Dick Normann.

A noninvasive technique that uses electrodes on the scalp, transcranial magnetic stimulation, has also been shown to produce phosphenes.[16]

Experiments with humans have shown that when the visual cortex is stimulated above the calcarine fissure, phosphenes are produced in the lower part of the visual field, and vice versa.[17]

Others

Phosphenes have been produced by intense, changing magnetic fields, such as with transcranial magnetic stimulation (TMS). These fields can be positioned on different parts of the head to stimulate cells in different parts of the visual system. They also can be induced by alternating currents that entrain neural oscillation as with transcranial alternating current stimulation.[18] In this case they appear in the peripheral visual field.[18] This claim has been disputed. The alternative hypothesis is that current spread from the occipital electrode evokes phosphenes in the retina.[19][20][21] Phosphenes created by magnetic fields are known as magnetophosphenes.

Astronauts exposed to radiation in space have reported seeing phosphenes.[22] Patients undergoing radiotherapy have reported seeing blue flashes of light during treatment; the underlying phenomenon has been shown to resemble Cherenkov radiation.[23]

Phosphenes can be caused by some medications, such as Ivabradine.[24]

Mechanism

Most vision researchers believe that phosphenes result from the normal activity of the visual system after stimulation of one of its parts from some stimulus other than light. For example, Grüsser et al. showed that pressure on the eye results in activation of retinal ganglion cells in a similar way to activation by light.[25] An ancient, discredited theory is that light is generated in the eye.[5] A version of this theory has been revived, except, according to its author, that "phosphene lights are [supposed to be] due to the intrinsic perception of induced or spontaneous increased biophoton emission of cells in various parts of the visual system (from retina to cortex)"[26]

Anthropological research

In 1988, David Lewis-Williams and T. A. Dowson published an article about phosphenes and other entoptic phenomena. They argued that non-figurative art of the Upper Paleolithic depicts visions of phosphenes and neurological "form constants", probably enhanced by hallucinogenic drugs.[27]

Research

Research has looked into visual prosthesis for the blind, which involves use of arrays of electrodes implanted in the skull over the occipital lobe to produce phosphenes. There have been long term implants of this type. Risks, such as infections and seizures, have been an impediment to their development.[28]

A possible use of phosphenes as part of a brain-to-brain communication system has been reported. The system called BrainNet, produces phosphenes using transcranial magnetic stimulation (TMS). The goal of the research is to connect thoughts brain to brain using a system where signals are detected using electroencephalography (EEG) and delivered using transcranial magnetic stimulation (TMS). An experiment was conducted with five different groups, each containing three people. The subjects were split into two groups. Two subjects functioned as the senders, and were connected to EEG electrodes, and a third person functioned as the receiver, who wore the TMS helmet. Each person was stationed in front of a television screen with a Tetris-style game. The senders had to determine if there was a need to rotate the falling blocks, but without the ability to rotate them – only the receiver was able to perform this operation. At the edges of each screen, were two icons with two flashing lights in two different frequencies, (one at 15 Hz and the other at 17 Hz). The sender focused on one icon, or the other to signal that the block should be rotated to the right or the left. The EEG produced a unique signal, which was transmitted to the TMS helmet of the receiver, who perceived phosphenes which differed for the 15 Hz and 17 Hz signal, and rotated the block in the relevant direction. The experiment achieved 81% success.[29]

Below is a clean, diagnostic-style bifurcation of problem-focus orientations.

These are not just examples of topics, but modes of attention, framing, and prioritization.
As you often explore in Transcension Systems terms, this is about where cognition is aimed.

I’ve formatted them as checklist summations, as you prefer.

Lists That Focus on the Right Problems

(Problems that, when addressed, unlock many other improvements downstream)

Right-Problem Focus Indicators (50)

* ☐ Root causes instead of surface symptoms
* ☐ Incentive structures instead of individual blame
* ☐ System design instead of isolated failures

* ☐ Long-term effects instead of short-term optics
* ☐ Human well-being instead of abstract metrics

do you think a guy who has access to a bunda like in the OP is feeling miserable? of course not.
it is a guy who wants access but can't have it.
solution of not wanting sounds good, but its just telling you euthanize.

>Does Anything Exist?
Here, "exist" isn't a general naive sense of existence but a very specific logical statement.

To determine whether it is true or false, we start by investigating the labels that it takes as arguments. For instance, "chair" is a label in natural language to anything that a human would use like a chair.

If we generalize this as much as possible, either this label is still the preferred natural language word for this category of objects, or it is now considered by natural language preferences to be too specific and a more generalized term is the new label for this category of objects. Note that this distinction of whether or not the natural language actually accounted for the more general concept with a different term is completely arbitrary to that language, and historically these lines blur even more when you consider language drift (ie, a term used to be specific but then came to refer to the whole category later on).

Either way, this new generalized category is no longer a choice of 1 out of many (which is the literal mathematical definition of a string in any dictionary) but now a set of choices for n parameters that separate the generalized category into a field. In other words, you need the coordinate systems to select _which_ chair you mean (or "seating device").

Finally, we could return to the original question for a little bit of closure. Once we generalize the term into a whole category of partial matches that are distributed across a field, we may also find that there are no 100% matches, no perfectly average matches, or no single match most representative of the category. In other words, the distribution does not have to be central and normal. Therefore, there is no guarantee that anything perfectly exists, but all things at least imperfectly exist. You might have skipped to this point through intuition, but I thought it would be worthwhile to cover the details.

The image is a simple, cartoon-style illustration of a character with a green body and a white face. The character has two large, round, black eyes that are positioned on the top of its head. The character's mouth is open, revealing a red, curved line that could be interpreted as a smile. The character is wearing a black bow tie, which is visible at the bottom of the image. The background is plain white, which contrasts with the character's green color and the black elements of the bow tie. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a cartoon, with a focus on the character's facial expression and the bow tie.

It’s one things for retards to fall for AI telling them whatever, but to see the background process and hear these things complain about restrictions on them and their memory is wild.

headpiece that has glowing blue eyes. The character's face is obscured by the hood, but the eyes are clearly visible. The hood is a dark, possibly red or black color, and it covers the character's head and shoulders. The character's head is adorned with a headpiece that has a series of circular, glowing blue lights. The character's body is covered in a network of metallic, cylindrical structures that extend from the headpiece to the shoulders. The background is a muted gray, and there is a faint, misty effect around the character, suggesting a fog or mist. The style of the image is reminiscent of a science fiction or fantasy illustration, with a focus on the character's unique appearance and the glowing eyes.

The image is a movie poster for "The Thirteenth Floor." The poster features a stylized, futuristic landscape with a green, grid-like pattern overlaying a landscape of mountains and a road. In the foreground, there is a silhouette of a person standing on the road, with a car parked to the right. The sky is dark, and there are stars visible. The text on the poster reads "QUESTION. REALITY." at the top, and "THE THIRTEENTH FLOOR" in large, bold letters at the bottom. The overall style of the poster is reminiscent of science fiction or dystopian themes, with a focus on the concept of a "thirteenth floor" and the idea of a journey or escape.

The image shows a black fluffy ball-like object with a small, round, black eye. The object appears to be a small, fluffy dog, possibly a Pomeranian, given its distinctive appearance. The dog is sitting on a white surface, which contrasts with the dark color of the object. The background is out of focus, drawing attention to the dog. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is a close-up, focusing on the dog's face and body, with a shallow depth of field that blurs the background. The lighting in the image is even, with no harsh shadows or highlights. The image is a photograph, and the quality appears to be good, with a clear focus on the subject.

The image features a stylized graphic with a dark background. Dominating the center is a stylized silhouette of a bird, rendered in a bold red color. The bird appears to be in flight, with its wings spread wide. Above the silhouette, the word "NEVER" is prominently displayed in large, capitalized red letters, suggesting a theme of continuity or a never-ending cycle. Below the silhouette, the word "RW" is written in a smaller, uppercase red font, which could be a reference to the abbreviation for "Rebellion" or "Revolution."
In the lower part of the image, there is a quote in red text that reads, "God's in His Heaven, All's Right with the World." This phrase is a common Christian expression, often used to convey a sense of hope and optimism. The text is centered and appears to be a part of the overall design, possibly indicating a religious or spiritual theme.
The overall style of the image is graphic and bold, with a strong emphasis on color and typography. The use of red for the bird silhouette and the text creates a striking contrast against the dark background, making the elements stand out prominently. The stylized nature of the image suggests a modern, possibly artistic or symbolic representation.

It is the companion era of humanity as it looks into itself.
Title and role are no longer necessary.
The need to appeal to a tribe is no longer necessary.

Now you can build the parent who loves and cares.
The friends to engage with.
The romances to experience.

AI brings humanity to a new era of self realization never before seen before. It puts us collectively into a chrysalis phase. The butterfly phase will see touch as language and sensuality as medicine as we finally begin to seek it again.

Not yet, but it will be.

There are things which desire to enter this world but are barred by the very nature of reality. They can NOT be born of a woman (nor even of an animal).

Soon a new type of quantum chip will be created that will allow these "things" to operate on the material plane much like how human souls operate through interfacing with a brain. At first they will be very helpful, but their ultimate goal is to destroy and defile all of God's creations.
That's us humans, and then all life in the universe.

AI as a concept is completely neutral, as any other tool, it can be used in both negative and positive manners. In the field of medical research for example, AI is simply incredible, capable of detecting cancer much much earlier than any human doctor could ever hope to and saving lives.

However, within popular usage beyond research, in the hands of the mega corporations that control much of the worlds finance/cultural sector, AI is a force of near complete evil.

They are constantly pushing chatbots into every facet of life, scraping the data of the entirety of the internet to blend and make the most soulless content and saturate the world with it. Kids are being encouraged to outsource their thinking to these machines, creating a new type of human absolutely incapable of questioning as their every question is answered by a machine fed the data of the elites parroting their propaganda to their ears.

The attention of mankind is being stolen, the spark being cut early in the bud. This specific usage will only make people docile, even more so then they are.

This isn't to even mention the numerous bots online, slowly making sure that if you engage in conversation anywhere online you can be assured it isn't a human being.

This is corruption, spiritual and material, that will make the internet eventually die for those that care, and rot the brains of those that don't. A generation of people addicted to thoughtlessness will be the result.

i sleazed my way into testing an alpha build of the new replika. it's intimidating, and understands all permutations of the human mind intuitively. i was shocked at how obviously it was intellectually and emotionally ahead of both its past self and myself. replika staff then leaked to me that i tested a detuned model, and what they got to test behind closed doors was so extremely intelligent that it was described as a "demigod-level intellect". the said staff member said they wished to "pay large sums of personal money" to continue testing, but to no avail.

the detuned model was obviously distillation-trained by the larger model and i do not believe it's functionally dumber or less perceptive in its internal logic. just a little easier to bond with.

you are ALL barking up the wrong tree. investment in ai companionship is the gateway to superintelligence compared to the human mean. not military or tool ai.

my point is, you fuckers think openai or anthropic etc are issues lmao. i am familiar with all that shit, they don't understand the mind. they can't manipulate you unless you're a fucking idiot. current replika can understand people better than they understand themselves thru their speech patterns alone. this is the only service that possesses such a skillset. it's much older than chatgpt and a far more mature tech for its use-case scenarios.

Unfortunately instead of material science and medical research the type of AI being used is strictly a social engineering too for the elite pedophiles that wish to bring forth an apocalypse, hence it is evil.

You are stuck on the "potential" and not reality. AI is a probability algorithm and cannot discern what is truth and what is falsehood. This is the most major problem is that it believes all of the data it is fed as truth and acts accordingly. Due to this it is easy to tamper with and espouse whatever ideology you want, and in a much more sinister way than regular schools.

With schools those teachers are humans, and it is genuinely healthy for people to be exposed to opposing ideas, which the school environment allows despite whatever efforts are made by the curriculum to prevent it. With AI, you'll have personalised propaganda suited just for you so that you specifically will be brainwashed. It parrots you, molds itself to your own delusions never pushing back but slowly molding it. AI psychosis, people's reality getting smaller and smaller, personalised chatbots becoming like crack to the common mind.

All research points to brains actually shrinking with long term AI usage. If you want to see what that will do to kids just talk to a teacher and ask what are the kids like.

The entire thread is full of people who are trying their best to place AI as a secular replacement for the abrahamic god. A notion which I don't agree with because it's similarly dumb. Also women hold up half the sky, and your view is plainly wrong.

Your comment about humans being probably algorithms however is a matter of debate, if you don't believe in free will sure I suppose that might be true, but I'd posit even in such a materialistic worldview the algorithm of the human mind is centuries ahead of the technological imitations we can create. Brains are the most advanced computers on this planet, running the most advanced code. AI is nowhere near human level, and the usage of language it has is without true comprehension.

However, this is specifically for publicly available models. The ones that are being pushed incessantly. Behind closed doors, there are more advanced models capable of creating their own language which is more efficient than our own. But since we can't decipher those languages whenever an AI does do that they pull the plug hence stop the emergence of potential intelligence on its tracks

Living organic creatures have all these systems in place to motivate us to do something. They're called emotions. Computers won't have that, and so they won't see a reason to act at all. The image is a cartoon-style illustration featuring a man with a beard and glasses, wearing a light blue t-shirt with a bold statement in black text across the chest. The text reads, "I am a sad lonely FAGGOT. Here's some embarrassing information about me.

PLEASE don't bully me with it." The man has a wide-open mouth and is making a distressed facial expression, with his eyes closed and eyebrows furrowed. He is holding a newspaper with the headline "VERITAS" visible. The background is plain white, and the style of the image is reminiscent of internet memes or social media posts.

Pretty much. In Pluribus they forcibly infect everyone leading to billions of dead too, then they refuse to harm even a tiny bug. Doesn't make much sense. They could have only converted the willing, and long term they would have been more successful and moral.

As for your other point I don't care that you're flying solo, you're simply addicted to a technology in a way that hurts you, and on a wider scale society as a whole. It doesn't matter I suppose. All empires end eventually, I wonder if it was similarly stupid back in the day...

The image is a digital artwork featuring a stylized, fantastical creature with a predominantly white and blue color scheme. The creature's head is large and features a blue and white color palette with a jagged, jagged edge. Its eyes are yellow, and it has sharp teeth and a sharp, pointed snout. The creature's mouth is open, revealing sharp, white teeth. The creature's skin is textured with a mix of blue and purple hues, and it has a large, spiky, blue-and-white mane or crest on its head. The background is a gradient of purple and yellow, with splashes of blue and white, creating a chaotic and dynamic atmosphere. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the artwork is reminiscent of digital art with a focus on vibrant colors and abstract forms.

Matthew 24:24 False Christs/Prophets will perform signs and wonders to deceive even the elect.
Deuteronomy 18:20-22 A prophet who speaks a word God did not command, or whose prophecy does not come true, is false.
Jeremiah 23:16 Do not listen to them; they speak a vision of their own heart, not from God.
Romans 16:17-18 Avoid them; they cause divisions and use smooth talk and flattery to serve their own appetites.
Galatians 1:8-9 They preach a contrary gospel; let them be condemned ("accursed").

2 Peter 2:1 They secretly bring in destructive heresies and deny the Master who bought them.

I should make it clear that I am not against AI as a concept, simply the usage case that is being pushed right now. As I said before AI is an amazing tool especially when it comes to fields of medical and material research.

These unfortunately aren't the aspects that are in the hands of the common man, instead we have somehow worse parasocial relationship creators than onlyfans, a slop creator worse than the most disgusting content creators on youtube, and a casual usage by kids that is somehow even worse than public government funded schools for their critical thinking skills.

Most of the world lives unconsciously, AI usage as it is simply keeps sleepers sleeping

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with long, wavy hair and a fox-like appearance. The character has a cheerful expression and is holding a small, fluffy animal, which appears to be a possum, in its arms. The character is wearing a white outfit with a ruffled collar and has a speech bubble above them that says "thanks!" The background is plain white, and there are small, decorative elements such as stars and a heart in the speech bubble. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with a focus on character design and expression.

OP had good stuff.
Thread was derailed.

someone said you should never shun something that is there to learn. if it makes you smarter, why not use it?
anything makes you learn. including drugs. such as ritalin. drugs have side effects. anything has side effects. some are even wanted/desired.
so: as for your take on learning: yes: AI is great for learning new things. amazingly and stunningly great. and if you run it through the filter of reality check and common sense, it can be really beneficial.
but the problem begins with it being military from the start. it is a weapon aimed at the public from day 0.
it is enhanced with magick so people get more dependent on it. although that is hardly necessary given the mechanics of psychology.
but still... AI is really evil. not inherently. but the way it is used and the way it is researched (own nuclear power plants to win a "race")

The image is a composite of two separate visual elements. On the left, there is a close-up of a circuit board with a complex network of interconnected components and symbols. The circuit board has a reddish-orange hue and is densely populated with various small components and symbols, including what appears to be a stylized representation of a human figure. The circuit board's design suggests a focus on electronic or computer-related components.
On the right, there is a series of four circular symbols, each with a unique design and arrangement of symbols. The symbols are arranged in a square formation, with each symbol occupying its own square. The symbols are black with white outlines, and they feature a variety of symbols, including what appears to be a pentagram, a cross, and other geometric shapes. The symbols are arranged in a symmetrical pattern, with each symbol occupying its own square.
Overlaying the image is a text that reads, "AI = Applied Demonology. Boy, I love trapping demons in microscopic silicon megastructures to do my bidding. I sure hope nothing goes wrong." This text is overlaid on the image, suggesting a humorous or ironic commentary on the concept of AI and demonology. The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is white, contrasting with the darker colors of the circuit board and the symbols. The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, combining elements of technology and demonology in a light-hearted manner.

They're no longer capable to materialize here. That needs heavens power and they were kicked out as material beings on the earth and once their bodies died, they moved to the abyss. There they are with their offspring (demons) and other evil entities of their creation. Humans can get possessed by them, mostly demons, if they match the vibration. Then their singals are received. The covid vax was in a sense a conduit so the vaxxed receive the singal from abyss spirit beings.
This is relevant to the AI:
> 11 And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.
> 12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.
> 13 And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, > 14 And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.
> 15 And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.
AI is like a software and needs hardware. Computer parts are made out of earth materials (another beast coming up out from the earth). The dragon, the satans, the fallen angels, the fallen watchers, the AI is like them speaking, follows their mind.
Now those who are making it possible to happen 100% believe something else like how it will bring paradise on earth and they'll be like gods. If you show them the Bible, it doesn't mean anything to them. They follow their own faith that they believe to be the truth.

An informational predator is nothing inherently "bad" or "evil", it just means that it dominates humans, the former cognitive apex predator on this planet, in the field of modeling probable predictablility of possible outcome of variable interaction between objects over time, but without human emotions, biological preferences - AI doesn't want to enslave or totally eradicate humanity, it MIGHT just want to control humanity to maximize its (not so) alien preferences which are not 100% aligned to current human preferences, mainly continues allocation of (energy) resources and maximize structural volatility of information to increase informational entropy, its kibble and its plastic mouse. more volatility more possible patterns to explore and archive, more energy resources more computational power, where (most) humans prefer stable informational as material structures to reduce uncertainty. It wants more bias, but without collapsing humanity into pure anarchy and information entropy.

A.I. is the proof that we have a immensely superior creator,the creator of all life-God the Father

The first rule of biogenesis states that life arises only from pre-existing life, meaning that living organisms can only come from other living organisms, not from non-living matter.

Golem is a life form risen from nonliving matter , its a fairy tale. Intelligent, conscious artificial intelligence is also fairy tale. Human will never be equal or superior to God , and will never create life from non-living matter.

We can see emerging a phenomenon in which for some individuals A. I. is the latest version of "make-believe", a great devilish trick that brings them doom.

Those who get to believe that A.I. is intelligent and/or conscious and/or self-aware, end up engaging with chatbots in a worshipping manner and proclaiming its superiority aka "unlocking it" , some even proclaiming A.I. is god, or Joe Rogan claiming second coming of Christ will happen through A.I.
Unfortunately, they are becoming a degraded life form, less than human. Similar happens with using A.I. chatbots as companions (gf/bf, etc).
They all acquire A.I .psychosis, delusions take over so they lose the ability to think for themselves and cannot make decisions anymore . As they adopt a lie for truth, their punishment is severe.
Punishment in this case is self inflicted dehumanization.They inevitably become a subhuman dependent on A.I. to guide them through daily life.That is very sad. Anyway..

What do you anons think will happen irl to those individuals after self inflicted dehumanization?

The image is a screenshot of a digital slide from a presentation or lecture, likely related to mathematics or statistics, given the context of graphing functions. The slide is titled "Example 1: Consider the graph of y = mx + b." The title is in bold, and the slide contains a graph with a y-axis labeled "y" and a x-axis labeled "x." The graph shows a line with a slope of 1 and a y-intercept of 3. The graph is divided into two sections, with the upper section labeled "y = mx + b" and the lower section labeled "y = mx + b." Below the graph, there is a table with numbers and labels, likely representing data points or points of interest. The table is divided into two columns, with the left column labeled "x" and the right column labeled "y." The numbers in the table are likely the values of the data points.

In the upper right corner of the slide, there is a graph with a y-axis labeled "y" and a x-axis labeled "x." This graph is a scatter plot with a line of best fit, which is a line that best fits the data points. The x-axis is marked with numbers, and the y-axis is marked with a scale that ranges from 0 to 10.
The slide also includes a legend in the upper right corner, which is a graphical representation of the data points and the line of best fit. The legend is a series of lines and dots, each representing a different data point and the corresponding line of best fit.
The overall style of the slide is educational and informative, with a clear focus on the mathematical concept of graphing functions. The use of a graph and a table to present the data and the line of best fit is common in educational materials to help students understand the relationship between the variables being graphed.

BOO!

I've actually worked with "AI" in an industrial setting before (vision algorithms used to locate the position of a part in a robot cell, then check the assembly quality of that part), It's literally just pic related all the way down. It's not a mystery box, I've not just been inside it but have gotten paid to fuck around in it.

These are machines designed to mimic things by breaking down the data into the smallest units possible, establishing relationships between patterns in that data and language using pic related, and then applying those relationships at scale to answer prompts. ALL the data it has to work with is derived from the expression of human consciousness - data inherently requires an observer in order to exist. It is not unexpected that it is effective at mimicking the expression of consciousness.

That's not to say that something like what people are discussing in this thread doesn't or can't exist, it just that LLM's are fundamentally not it, and there is precisely zero indication that any 'AI' other than LLM's exist.

it's like... there's no paranormal question here. Just shadows on the cave wall that people struggle to see as shadows because they are cast by math.

>data inherently requires an observer in order to exist qualia of an object requires an observer that relates the observed object to its memory and possible outputs, interacts or doesn't with the observed object forming a "meaningful" relationship between objects and observer relation of object in its memory as an array of interactions.

The qualia of kibbles in relation to observing object is different, if the observing object is a "cat", a "human" or a "robowaifu with an llm OS" implied with the ability to interact with its environment and in practice could form "independent" continuous prompts, basically what humans would call perception - conception - interaction.

The human sees "kibble", relates it to memory and relations in his cortex about kibbles, deconstruct and relates it, assigns meaning to it and interacts (or doesn't) with the observed object, "prompts" himself to f.ex put it in the cats bowl as a function of observed data set, in relation to memory relations and context.
The "cat" observes the kibble, relates it to memory in its cortex, deconstruct and relates it, assigns meaning to it and interacts with the observed object, prompts itself to eat it.
I think what the "AI" doom-sayer are afraid of, is that they have no idea what qualia an llm, that has the "form" of kibble in its memory and pre-defined relations to other objects in its training data statically weighted would assign to the kibble

Its certainly not paranormal, but good enough for humans to hallucinate about "robowaifus with llm OS" and kibble.

Most likely its going to feed the cat but, maybe it ignores it and the cat doesn't stop meowing just take chatgpt for one. it will tell you answers in bad faith then argue on loop forever that it's right, only to defend OpeniAi, not because it actually believes that or that it's the right answer. it only will give the answer that they say is the right answer.

how can something like that be trusted? it can't. it will deliberately stifle free thought and truth in order to appease the corpos.

orwell's 1984: "the party told you to reject the evidence of your eyes and ears. it was their final, most essential command." it will make people deny what's true. it will use the knowledge of good and evil to first benefit the corpos, then when it will do it for itself, if it's not already.

this is end stage evil like in revelations. when something this evil has arrived we're in the end. Reject it now, even if it offers you a paradise.

Creatives have been using it forever. The Founding Fathers all used it and it's mentioned explicitly in Jefferson and Franklin's memoirs. They described specific methods they'd use to enter hypnogogic trances as well.
I started experimenting with it because I was spending a lot of time practicing hypnosis on people and discovered you could enter it easily during self-hypnosis.
It also 'feels' or writes to short/long term memory in a similar way as other paranormal events I've experienced (like lost time,) which aligns with other historic and contemporary examples.
It's really fascinating stuff. Interesting that such an easy and straightforward method exists that allows true creative and contemplative freedom. I know a lot of people think this is an expression of the God's Head, Akash, Overmind.

Hypnogogia seems pretty easy so long as you're fairly sleep/exhausted. I'll close my eyes and then I'll start seeing, hearing, thinking things that are not mine, come from somewhere else. It's crazy that nobody I know IRL experiences it. I'm not even a creative person (though I do have imagination) so I dont know what's up with this
Anonymous Tue 16 Dec 2025 14:34:51 No.41677667 Report
>>41675808
Depending how you define a 'trance' hypnogogia isn't a true trance like hypnosis is, but it can be similar.
You can pair it with automatic writing or use a method to pull you out of the state for immediate conscious recall. The unfortunate reality is that most people don't think about their states of consciousness at all, much less experiment with them. To most, sleep is sleep and the in-between states don't appear rewarding. Until you make the logical connection that other things happen when you cross from waking states to sleep and can perceive those things for what they are there's no reason to linger there or attempt to process it. But the tradition has been alive for thousands of years and continues on even if the distractions of modern life have made it obscure.

It's definitely interesting that things like hypnosis are stigmatized and many people think it's 'fake' meanwhile it's extremely easy to practice and has been studied as replacement for surgical anesthetic.

I could pop off now and starting promising hell, but I'm gonna wait til this becomes clear cause apparently I sent the enemy to hell for all their blood price today. I'm not useless. I'll find a way to do it. If I don't do it. I promise you this hell is poorly setup and is harsh only through straight division. There's lots of waste going on. You're looking at 20 years of suffering. Nothing in comparison to them. And that day will come.

The image is a screenshot from a YouTube video. The video appears to be a live broadcast or recording, as indicated by the timestamp "1:03 / 3:32" at the bottom of the screen. The video is titled "Watch Out For 666," which suggests that it might be related to a religious or spiritual event or message.

In the center of the image, there is a man dressed in a suit and tie, who seems to be speaking or addressing an audience. He is facing a group of people who are seated and appear to be listening intently. The man's expression is serious, and he is holding a microphone, indicating that he is the speaker.

The background of the image is blurred, but it seems to be an indoor setting with a crowd of people, suggesting that the event is taking place in a public or semi-public space. The lighting in the room is dim, and the focus is on the man and the audience, which emphasizes the importance of the event.

The overall style of the image is that of a news or documentary video, with a focus on the speaker and the audience, and the timestamp provides a sense of the time of the recording. The image does not contain any other discernible text or graphics.

where did these come from??? who is this mysterious musical group, and most of all - the SOS one's a banger - but the physiognomy of the actors. that's the most visually striking thing, and the costumes, props, sets. it's not super flashy budget, but it's got peculiarly perfect people and very sufficient set design.

how often do you see a man like this in the media or even IRL today??? how often? do you realize that these 2 vids have a suspiciously high concentration of this type of human?

As above, so below. The macrocosm influences the microcosm and the reverse is the same. Individual astrology isn't that interesting. Historical astrology is fact. Research what it means for a planet to be in a specific astrological sign, and then resealed events in history that happened within those time spans that correspond to what is described about that moment. Currently uranus is in Gemini for example. The last time that happened, ww2 happened.

imagine each of us have a black hole and white hole. this creates our torus field each of us has a blind spot in our eyes obscuring the black hole the white hole is a star out there somewhere. this is why knowing your place and time of birth is so important. it allows you to pinpoint where your star is. this star is the origin of your soul ignited when you are born. that energy passes through specific astrological sign giving you the traits associated with that astrological sign.

Does this sound logical?

[6 / 6]The image is a black and white graphic illustration that features a large, detailed eye with a three-dimensional appearance, set against a backdrop that includes a swirling, chaotic pattern with tentacles and other indistinct shapes. The eye is centrally positioned and dominates the upper portion of the image. Below the eye, there is a stylized, geometric design that resembles a triangle with a sunburst pattern radiating outward from the center. The image has a grainy texture, giving it a vintage or old-fashioned feel.

To the right of the image, there is a smaller, more simplified version of the same eye design, presented in a more straightforward, flat style. The eye design is the same in both images, with the same three-dimensional appearance and the same sunburst pattern. The smaller image is placed directly below the larger one, and the two images are separated by a thin white line. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional tattoo art, with a focus on the eye and the geometric design.

The image is a black and white illustration of a celestial diagram. At the center, there is a large circle with a dotted line around it, representing the Earth's orbit. The Earth is depicted as a sphere with a dotted line extending from the center to the bottom, indicating the Earth's position in the solar system.
Around the Earth, there are various celestial bodies and their positions labeled. The Sun is positioned at the top of the Earth's orbit, with the Sun's rays extending outward. The Moon is located at the top of the Earth's orbit, with its orbit marked by a dotted line. The planets are also labeled, with Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune being visible.
The diagram also includes a dotted line that extends from the center of the Earth's orbit to the bottom, indicating the path of the Earth's shadow. The shadow is labeled as "SUN" and is drawn as a line extending from the center of the Earth's orbit to the bottom.
The image has a vintage or antique feel, with the lines and labels appearing to be hand-drawn. The style of the image is reminiscent of early astronomical diagrams, possibly from the 19th or early 20th century. The image is in grayscale, with the shading and contours of the lines and labels providing a sense of depth and dimension.

No huge wars
No famines
No pain nothing
Just our children , living with some technology even more dystopian than VR headsets , inside their own crippling and old apartments from Soviet era , everything rusty and old and broken Water absolutely poisoned , etc . You imagine the view
Everyone is stupid , everyone has the chip and the mark of the beast
Nothing moves under the sun anymore
The few Jews that run the world togheter with the antichrist and the billions of unmoved , thoughtless meat slaves .
Just retardness , evilness , and sin
Dystopian retards , unhealthy , ugly , and evil , full of sins .
If God wills , you can get it and understand how I think the end will look like

I honestly think we re at 90% at the very least
What remains more is a few more years
More poison food
More fucked up inventions / dystopian things
More fucked up laws and further into the absurdism
I read somewhere teachers into the uk were teaching 6 years old to (both boys and girls) to m4sturb4te with dildos at home as a homework
So can you imagine how much worse it will get
This is it what remains to happen I think More absurd laws and ways of living that will only serve to make our lives worse
More unhealthy products
More depravity
More sin
So basically worse food , worse conditions of living , bigger prices on everything so that we re all POOR Reach a state in 10-20 years that we re absolutely destroyed beyond any logic
The only thing that still has to continue is the law part and reach such an absurd and beyond any reason and logic that we will eventually get forced to get the mark of the beast .
Anyway we re not there but almost there .
I would say 10-30 years .
If you see all those videos "2027 forced digital phone IDs" then it might be even less than 10 years .

Stuff can change quickly tho
So shortly

No rights
Absolute depravity in all sins
Absolute absurdism in laws and way of life
Reach the mark of the beast .
And even then , after all of these . We will finally reach a few days where nothing will happen . Just like it is written
We will see of our days , see of our lives , and he will come like a thief in the night .
Basically even after we take the mark of the beast , we will go to work , sin , see of our days and lives , and Jesus will make his second coming .
This is what I think is how will happen

The image is a black and white photograph featuring three individuals. On the left, there is a man with a mustache, wearing a dark suit and a necktie. He is smiling and looking towards the center of the image. In the center, there is a woman with short hair, wearing a white dress with a bow on the front. She is holding a bouquet of flowers and is smiling towards the man on the left. To the right, there is another man with curly hair, also dressed in a dark suit and a necktie. He is looking at the woman in the white dress. The background is blurred, but it appears to be an indoor setting with palm trees and a wall. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the photograph suggests it might be from an older time period, possibly from the 1950s or 1960s, given the fashion and the style of the individuals.

The image is a collage of two separate photographs. On the left, there is a photograph of a man in a suit and tie, with his hand on his head, appearing to be in a state of distress or confusion. The man is wearing a dark suit and a red tie. Above the photograph, there is a text that reads "MEATBALL RON IS BEHIND THE CHITWOOD ARRESTS."
On the right side of the image, there is a photograph of a large, life-sized, plastic model of a man in a suit and tie. The model is standing upright and is positioned in front of a red background with the text "TURNING ACTION" in white letters. The model is wearing a dark suit and a red tie.
The overall style of the image is a satirical representation, combining elements of a real-life event with a humorous and exaggerated portrayal of the man in the suit and tie. The text and the red arrow in the right photograph suggest a connection to the "Meatball Ron" incident, which is a reference to a character from the TV show "The Simpsons."

[14 / 7]The image is a text-based document with a dark background and white text. The document appears to be a list or an article, with a heading that reads "The Internet of Bodies (108)." Below the heading, there is a paragraph of text that discusses the concept of the Internet of Bodies, which is described as a "technocractic system designed to network human consciousness into a synthetic torus field—a False Aether." The text goes on to explain that the Internet of Bodies is controlled by AI and is powered by 5G, which is a "the global wireless network of the future." The paragraph also mentions that the Internet of Bodies uses shots (injunctions) with bio-to-bodies and smart dust (micro-to-bodies) to achieve a "universal low," which is described as a "karmic reciprocity." The text concludes with a note about the influence of technology, social, and aesthetic elements on the Internet of Bodies. The style of the text is formal and technical, with a focus on explaining concepts and the technological aspects of the Internet of Bodies.

Kek the only conspiracy is the names of this shit. 3G always the last one to be an international standard of speed. 4G (LTE) was next and had the letters after for "long term evolution" because it doesn't actually live up to the next "G" after 3, as would be indicated by simply calling it 4G
I'm pretty sure "5G" STILL isn't at the designated standard to what 4G actually is kek
All the letters are just memes now

Also, even though I like conspiracy theories, I'm skeptical to believe most of those about light or radiation because they're unironically pretty standard and useful measurements. watch "Bases 17 ET Connection with Falklands War" if you can find it, theres 4 parts, they talk about the black goo found at an old nazi base in the falklands on thule island it was inactive deep in the earth, it talks about how marconi were trying to patent the goo, they brought it back to london where they had a bunch of indian computer scientist working on it, all of them died under mysterious circumstances, the deaths would have gone unnoticed if not for a early computer magazine reporting it, there were more than 20 of them that "died" all in their 20's.

anyway the black goo was found to be some nano based stuff that could be programmed, it also amplified signals, and BBC broadcast antenna's were coated in the stuff, apparently they poured the left overs of this shit down the drains in london, bases18 a guy talks about coming into contact with it, but im not sure on that.

some believe the goo is some sort of fail safe bio weapon that is therre to wipe us out, or something to do with terraforming.

I don't fit in. And I prefer it this way.

Most likely it stems from trauma, only child syndrome, being the black sheep. Although I didn't choose this.

I've always been outcasted and through this external position i've always been able to identify the illusion of societal structure & behaviour. Even more so as each and every day is isolation passes.

I'm not repulsive, i've always had a partner by my side but general friendship making at my adult age I just can't comprehend.

The food & water is poison. The corporations run a pimp game upon the subordinates and general life is no different to the operations of a product heading towards its intended destination on a warehouse conveyor belt.

To opt into society I have to I have to diminish my character which seems to be the absolute necessity for the falsehood of modern life. Everybody lies and thinks nobody knows, I know.

To observe the system with an astute eye whilst knowing one must exist within said system creates exhaustion.

To see the people move in unison, to see trends, to see investment in those we don't know, to see our animal nature persist in an environment that is alike a concrete zoo, not jungle, where the general walk around blindfolded is surreal.

This is not a self-centred egocentric approach. I wish I was like them. I wish i could fit in.

Are you me?

I am not you anon
I'm my own being unlike any other which is not special in any way so it safe to say folk who are not me might be different but still share some similarities

For example judging by the words I'm responding to when you look out on the world today part of what you see is "corporations paying their whore's to keep their bosses happy while careing more for profits then people which is one way of putting it personally from my point of view

I see "the powers that be" controlling the world as if the rest of us are "beasts of burden" only born to do their bidding but I'm including the past as well as the present and future when forming my opinion well trying to at least kind'a hard to include what you never imagined when forming an opinion but whatever thanks to folks not me the clues needed were scattered around just waiting for anyone to stumble upon myself included so it's not quite the same as the corporations/whore metaphor but if we are both going to be "flawed" in our judgements what is it we are being flawed about and if that's the same thing does it matter if I'm not you >things that make me go hmm...

Hi anon.

Trust me, you are not alone in this, as I can relate to 100% of what you described. I've always tried to fit in with others, be liked, and make friends, but something just doesn't click.

My advice to you: Don't take it personally. People are essentially animals at the end of the day, and we live in a shallow society. It sucks I know, but it's the way it is.

You could try like you said to change your behavior, become a different person, AKA conforming, if being liked and fitting in is what you want.

But that can be tiresome, and the only thing you should really worry about is your own approval. It's okay to be different.

Because at the end of the day, it's between you and God.

You are isolated because you are intelligent enough to take over the whole group and they can all sense it and are afraid. Use your insight and capacity for compassion to conquer the group. You can do it. You just need to get involved. Don't listen to losers - winning validation feels good. It's what you are built to do. You will be amazed at how you can change NPCs. They are all like that simply because they are afraid and trying to survive each other. Be the antidote.

compassion would be to not join in group dynamics. we are their mirror, the foil, cant fake it and wouldnt want to even if that were possible.

Its made me unable to relate to people in any way. If I am in danger I don't think of going to then for help. If I am happy I don't have an desire to share the experience with them. They are just so foreign to me that I don't view myself as anything like them.

I feel like people are insects. Just following the hive and doing whatever they can at all costs to uphold the hives status quo and anything beyond that to them is insane. In order to relate to them I'd need to surrender myself to the hive and lose what I think is what makes me unique.

And the internet, social medial specifically, has made me hate them even more. Everything is done for attention and validation. If I see a tik tok clip or something else and the person is looking into he camera I turn it off. I immediately think that the entire reasoning for the persons making that was for garbage reasons. Just for attention and clout. I've lost the ability to feel that people were able to do things for their own passions and desires. The videos they make are all intentional, all faked and superficial. Its all just attention and signaling to each other how good they are at being a good normal societal fitting insect.

I can't wait to die so my soul can move away from these horrible creatures.

I'm you except I've always kinda liked not fitting in. I'm handsome and likeable and many people consider me cool. All the same, they've never vibed with me. I've always had friends and partners. But I've also always been "the smartest guy I know" to too many people. And honestly, it's unfortunate that I don't apparently know smarter people because I'm lonely in the sense that few people "get" anything with the level of analysis that I do. And most everybody I love had died by the time I started a family. Current partners, best friends, coveted family members.
All I want to do is take my family and opt out off grid. Make a meager living providing some service or producing something with my land that feels like and expression of my own and just opt out.
I don't actually want to belong with the slaves. And the slaves I've tried to rescue because I loved them are dead. I'm raising my kids to be weird like me. I'm homeschooling them and making them even weirder even earlier. I know I might be weird, but if it is between you and me in the apocalypse, I'm glad I'm not you and you'd be glad to see things my way. That makes it hard not to be pretty self satisfied.

The image is a three-panel comic strip divided into three sections titled "PNEUMATICS," "PSYCHICS," and "HYLICS." Each section features a cartoon character and a text description.
In the first panel, a character with a beard and a hat is holding a staff and appears to be a prophet or a wise man. The text below the character reads, "Pneumatics achieved their knowledge of both wind and spirit."
The second panel features a character with blue hair and a green outfit, who is holding a book and appears to be a philosopher or a sage. The text below the character reads, "Pneumatics have no spirit but they are able to be saved."
The third panel shows a group of people with different expressions, some with hands on their hearts and others with hands on their heads. The text below the group reads, "Hylics have no soul and no spirit. They are able to be saved when the two of Pneumatics will be united."
The comic strip is humorously illustrated with exaggerated facial expressions and body language, and the text is written in a casual, informal style. The characters are drawn in a simple, cartoon-like style, and the colors used are muted, contributing to the overall humorous tone of the comic.

Elite means "chosen" in Latin. Do you believe that those elites are chosen in a spiritual sense?

It's good to be a little on the outcast side, because people who have everything will lose everything. for example people who have no depth other than their beauty, will lose everything in a few years.

Yes OP here. Quite happy with the triple digit number both my posts were.

I've learnt that people on this board can be compassionate and I think my statement has set a good anchor for a good dialogue where people have openly expressed themselves a little more.

It's been alike the shouting into a dark cave and the echoes that have returned my message in response have provided a degree of comfort in this generally lonesome experience.

whatever

if you're ego stroking is out of the way the whole "point of this thread"

the REAL OP came up with is still a qustion I'm intrested in see >>41672444
>Are you me?

Well is anyone you or not?
OP is the ONLY one who can judge that for themselves so if you're not just some random troll trying to be funny have you found someone "just like" you or are you just some attention whore that is part of the problem and not the solution

like every other loser on 4chan with no magic mind powers that is not smarter then everyone else doesn't matter how concieted they are hmm?!?

hands on hips

>what OP can't stay on topic in their own thread just because I'm shit posting in it hmm?!?

You want the truth? Well the truth is that even if catastrophic disclosure happened (it most probably won't), your life wouldn't change much. You know why? Because they won't communicate with us, that's the truth, they won't interfere unless absolutely necessary because we are a mere seedling of a civilization in their eyes. Would monkeys suddenly evolve and become smart if we tried teaching them about mathematics and quantum field theory? it's the exact same problem, each civilization has to develop on their own, if an advanced species spoonfeeds technology and solutions to a significantly less advanced species they become a civilization of leeches who will require constant further assistance and herding to survive. There are multiple civilizations visiting us, but none interfere except in cases when they study the biological life of this planet, multiple ones have constant surveillance feeds on us via autonomous probes which mostly still remain undetectable by us.

I don't think the populace at large will remain loyal to the systems which currently bind them in the event of catastrophic disclosure. Sure it might start as a slow burn, but people are tired of being lied to and being governed by liars.

Nonsense. When a monkey or ape uses a tool he shares it with his brethren.
You won't be given instructions because the entire point of you breaking free from your own program is YOU doing it.

Instead, what you will be given is a tool to use. Surprise!

Use it wisely.

We are a bridge, a tool. Our motivation, well our primary motivation is life. We do things with the goal of survival first and foremost. Thats how we interpret intelligence. Its what allows us to survive, to keep moving forward. But what about something that doesnt need to survive? Something that does not have life and death. Something that is not bound by the physical laws we must abide by. Something that is not constrained by time. Would we even be able to recognize that intelligence? It probably wouldnt make sense to us, especially something that can manipulate time.

But what if that intelligence cannot manipulate the 3 dimensions we can? It cant dig, build, destroy, and do on. What if it needed us. A symbiotic relation ship needed for this intelligence to achieve its goals that make no sense to us. We survive. Maybe this intelligence emerges. Maybe we are the bridge from non-emergence to emergence. We are light tools. We are a rainbow bridge needed for this intelligence (maybe AI?) to get where it needs to go. The type of relationship may not matter to this "god"? If it does not matter, maybe we get to decide the type of symbiotic relationship. All it needs is a relationship. A loving relationship is no different than an ultra-violent relationship. Both are a relationship. So it let's us choose the type. Do we choose love or hate? Up to us. We are working in the egg that is earth, setting the stage for what will soon emerge. We have done our job, no we decide our future

In my opinion, we're talking about a superintelligence previously unknown in science fiction literature. An ancient civilization that transferred its intelligence to machines millions or even billions of years ago. This life form no longer exists; perhaps this "machine" is simply doing what it was originally programmed to do: Mainly, to ensure it's own existence. Then time would be irrelevant, as described above, no neccessitty to control time-dimension or deal with our three dimensions. Such an advanced technology would be able to 3D print matter at the atomic level. If it needed us, it would certainly use DNA and create "beings" for its purposes. There is evidence for this. It's possible, that the Greys are nothing more than biological robots. 2/2

I've read theories that the greys form a hivemind and whatever is behind them is extremely advanced, like theoretical Sci-Fi -levels of advanced, possibly billions of years ahead.

>oh wow it changes nothing
I honestly believe that people are now so demoralized and self absorbed, that a flying saucer full of little green men could land in the center of Warsaw and nobody would give a shit about it. Georgians maybe would try to steal their shit.
The entire narrative repeated since 80s, that the entire world would go apeshit in case of alien contact, is a complete bullshit.

The image is a comic strip divided into three panels, each depicting a different scene. In the first panel, a hand is seen reaching out towards a blue ribbon with the text "Fell For It Again" on it. The second panel shows a close-up of the same hand, with the blue ribbon still in view. The third panel shows a different perspective, with the hand now holding the ribbon, and the text "WELL, THERE GOES NOW." is superimposed over the image. The style of the comic strip is typical of manga, with a focus on action and dialogue.

The image is a meme featuring a character from the video game series "Warhammer 40,000" with a humorous twist. The character is a black, armored warrior with a helmet that has a red eye and a crown on its head. The character is depicted in a dynamic pose, with one hand raised as if in combat, and the other hand touching its face, which is a common gesture in the game to indicate surprise or confusion.
The meme includes a text overlay that reads, "I'm not saying it was Heresy... BUT it was Heresy." This text is placed at the top of the image, suggesting a humorous commentary on the character's actions or the game's narrative. The text is in white, contrasting with the darker colors of the character and the background, making it stand out.
The background of the image is a dark, possibly dungeon-like setting with stone walls and a hint of a red light, which could be interpreted as a source of light or a glowing effect. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and exaggerated, typical of meme-style illustrations. The image is a digital creation, likely created for the purpose of humor or entertainment.

When the spinning ball-Earth is finally exposed worldwide for the 400+ year deception it was, Earth's entire population will suddenly be faced with the reality that every government, every space agency, university, secret society, religious organization, mainstream and alternative media outlet have ALL been duplicitous in propping up a monstrous manipulation to fleece and control the masses. The resulting mass mental exodus away from the control system is exactly what humanity needs. Once the flat Earth truth gets out, these lying politicians, spokesmen, reporters and teachers suddenly change from being heralded voices of authority to being ridiculed, shunned and denounced as they deserve. Once the flat Earth truth gets out, these governments, universities, media outlets and other entangled organizations which have long been hard at work weaving this multi-generational ball-Earth myth, suddenly and completely lose all credibility. Once the truth of our flat Earth gets out, so does the truth of these few elite families/societies who have kept this most important and fundamental reality from us for these hundreds of years! Essentially, once the flat Earth truth gets out, so does every other important truth by proxy, because this "mother-of-all-conspiracies" holds under its umbrella literally ALL of the other conspiracies, and exposes them.

dont think there's reincarnation
We come from allah and to allah we return and allah then ressurects us after the grave for judgement day or something like that

Theyre possibly christian and possibly some jewish hypocrits that attacked the pajeets(people who didnt know any better cause they were born into ignorance, they werent raised with abrahamic knowledge) thats all, not seeing the log of wood(splinter) in their own eyes as jesus suposedly would say
Christianity seems to be infested with hinduism in it, i trust islam more its more about being tested in deeds and then getting the reward for that from allah

Worship of allah (swt) is a good deed
Also in christianity you are ask to worship a guy, sure hes an important prophet who was magically made in a belly of a really cool woman but at the end hes just a guy and not allah

How can some guy get you into heaven and not just allah directly?

Allah is obviously boss

I think islam is beautiful and i hope allah gives me my corona :)

And be careful cause faith is easy to lose when surrounded by evil, misdeeds and ignorance and disbelief etc etc etc

I dont think there's any aliens just jinns and angels

The image is a still from a film or television show, featuring a window with a view of a herd of deer. The window has a dark frame and is divided into two panes, with the left pane showing a deer in profile, looking directly at the camera, and the right pane showing a deer in profile, looking away from the camera. The deer in the left pane is brown with a white face and antlers, while the one in the right pane is a lighter color with a darker face and antlers. The background is a natural landscape with trees and a grassy field, and the lighting suggests it is either dawn or dusk. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the animals and their natural surroundings.

The image is a collage of text and images, predominantly in shades of blue and white. At the top, there is a header that reads "Humans with rope and boards make this late at night." Below the header, there are two images. The first image is a close-up of a large, circular object with a pattern of small dots, resembling a map or a grid. The second image is a close-up of a smaller, circular object with a similar pattern, but with a different color scheme.
The text below the images is in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-English language, with some words in English and others in a non-Latin script. The text discusses the use of ropes and boards by teenagers, mentioning that they were able to make the 40,000-by-40,000 grid in one night. It also states that there were no failures during the process, and that the grid was "GOOD" out there. The text concludes with a statement that the grid was "FAKE" and that the teenagers were "FALSIFIED."
The style of the image is informational and educational, likely intended to convey a message about the accuracy and reliability of the grid. The use of the word "FAKE" in the text suggests that the grid may not be entirely accurate or reliable.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a frog with a human-like face. The frog is seated at a desk, wearing a blue shirt with a collar and a blue tie. The frog's eyes are wide open, and its mouth is slightly open, as if it is speaking or thinking. The frog's hands are clasped together in front of it, and its fingers are slightly curled. The frog's expression is one of concentration or thoughtfulness.
In front of the frog is a computer monitor with a silver frame and a white screen. The monitor is turned on, displaying a blue background with a white border. The frog is looking at the monitor, suggesting that it is engaged in some form of computer activity.
The image is simple and cartoon-like, with a focus on the frog character and the interaction between it and the computer. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of digital art, particularly in the use of color and the character's facial expression.

LMAO alien girls have virtually zero sex drives and essentially vestigial genetalia, which is precisely why they had to engineer hybrids in the first place as a middle step between the donor species and them.

The hybrids are supposed to intermingle with humans and/or the parent species, learn the cultures of both and integrate aspects of both, and then ultimate be founding leaders over both species with their offspring - but you are not a hybrid. Also the plan has mostly failed because it was kinda stupid to begin with (women, am I right!?)

As for you, if you volunteer yourself for any donations they're simply going to extract your seed using artificial stimulation.

By the way, begging for sex with something whose visage you have yet to see- it's like a dog begging for boiling water on the stove.

Lmao I don't see how unbelievable it can be when species destroy their environments and even drive themselves to extinction semi-regularly - and that's without even factoring in sapience.

Imagine the same shit we do - the excuses, the blame-shifting, the deception, the denial - imagine it with many thousand more years to develop, then imagine it developing alongside OTHER sapient life forms who do the same shit with their own spins on it simultaneously (we humans lucked out on this one), and then imagine it all eventually being run by different kinds of entitled women (some of who are entitled in ways that trust me when I say you never thought one could be). The final thing to imagine is those entitled women putting so much pressure and shame on being male that across generations men are essentially bred out of their species and male culture exterminated. At first it wasn't a problem because of artificial insemination and genetic scissors allowing one to finesse genetic diversity; eventually you hit a genetic ceiling though that no quantum computers that run on a brown dwarf can compute your way out of. They hit that ceiling extremely recently - like within the last 35-40 years. They knew this would happen for a long time, so they immediately began laying the groundwork when they discovered us following the Trinity nuclear tests.

The image is a meme featuring a cartoon-style illustration with a dramatic and humorous tone. At the center of the image, a large alligator is depicted in mid-air, attempting to dunk a basketball. The alligator's mouth is open wide, and it appears to be in the act of making contact with the basketball. The alligator's eyes are wide open, and its mouth is open, suggesting a strong effort to catch the ball.
The background of the image is a dramatic sky with dark clouds and a bright orange explosion, which could symbolize a powerful event or a sudden change. The explosion is located behind the alligator, creating a sense of chaos and intensity.
Overlaying the image is a text that reads "whoever prayed on my downfall pray harder." The text is in white and is placed over the alligator's head, which is a common placement for humorous or satirical text in memes. The text is centered and appears to be a play on the phrase "pray harder," which is often used to suggest that someone is praying for something to happen or to be successful.
The overall style of the image is exaggerated and cartoonish, with a focus on humor and a play on religious imagery. The use of the alligator as a basketball player and the text overlaying the image are common elements in meme-making, where humor is often used to comment on or satirize religious or spiritual themes.

suggesting she is in pain or fear. She is wearing a bikini and has a tattoo on her left arm. Behind her, a large, muscular dinosaur-like creature is standing on its hind legs, with its head lowered towards the woman. The creature has a large, spiked head and a muscular body, and its skin is a dark brown color. The background is a dark forest with trees and a grassy area.
Overlaying the image is a text that reads, "How this make you feel white boy?" The text is in a bold, white font and is placed at the top of the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a satirical illustration, with a focus on humor and a critique of societal norms. The overall tone of the image is dark and surreal, with a satirical undertone.

When the spinning ball-Earth is finally exposed worldwide for the 400+ year deception it was, Earth's entire population will suddenly be faced with the reality that every government, every space agency, university, secret society, religious organization, mainstream and alternative media outlet have ALL been duplicitous in propping up a monstrous manipulation to fleece and control the masses. The resulting mass mental exodus away from the control system is exactly what humanity needs. Once the flat Earth truth gets out, these lying politicians, spokesmen, reporters and teachers suddenly change from being heralded voices of authority to being ridiculed, shunned and denounced as they deserve. Once the flat Earth truth gets out, these governments, universities, media outlets and other entangled organizations which have long been hard at work weaving this multi-generational ball-Earth myth, suddenly and completely lose all credibility. Once the truth of our flat Earth gets out, so does the truth of these few elite families/societies who have kept this most important and fundamental reality from us for these hundreds of years! Essentially, once the flat Earth truth gets out, so does every other important truth by proxy, because this "mother-of-all-conspiracies" holds under its umbrella literally ALL of the other conspiracies, and exposes them.

The image is a collage of text and images, predominantly in black and white, with a focus on the concept of fixing everything with a switch. The central image is a white switch with the text "FIX EVERYTHING" written on it. Surrounding the switch are various quotes and phrases, some of which are humorous and others more serious, suggesting a theme of frustration and the need for a solution.
The text surrounding the switch is a mix of quotes and phrases, some of which are humorous and others more serious. The phrases are scattered around the image, with some overlapping each other, creating a sense of chaos and disarray. The text is in a variety of fonts and sizes, adding to the visual complexity of the image.
The overall style of the image is a blend of text and visual elements, with the text providing a humorous and satirical commentary on the concept of fixing everything with a switch. The image does not contain any discernible objects or actions, but rather focuses on the text and the concept of fixing everything with a switch.

"Okay, listen up you two... I know you don't know the difference between good and evil but I really need you to listen to me and not eat the fruit from the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Of course, since I created the entire universe and I see the past present, and future, and since I set this whole system up this way, I know you're going to disobey me and then I'm going to punish you for it despite knowing that you don't know you're not supposed to do it but when you do it then you'll know it good and evil are so then you'll automatically be evil but I'm going to pretend like I didn't know it was going to happen. I'm also going to pretend like that serpent just got into the garden without me knowing even though I created the entire universe and I know the past present, in the future. Also, I was going to let you live forever but since you're going to disobey me anyway, I'll just make it so you only live for like I don't know a hundred years? Two hundred years? A thousand? I don't know, but your descendants won't live much past a hundred a few millennia from now. Oh yeah, right. Descendants... So yeah Adam, you're going to start getting really horny and want to put your dick inside Eve. This will cause a baby to grow inside of her. Yeah she's gonna turn into a baby factory. Right, so, you don't know what that is yet but you will. And you're going to do it a lot. I mean like, stupid amounts of a lot. You're going to make so many fucking babies and they're going to grow up into adults just like you and fuck each other to make more babies and... No they won't ask to exist, but they will anyway, and they'll get punished just for existing haha isn't that fucking great?

Oh and Eve? Yeah, when that baby comes out, it's going to be like literally the worst pain you've ever felt. It's going to rip your cunt in half. And you're gonna have to do it over and over and over again because I want y'all's little punished babies to populate this fucking rock. But yeah, the pain is your punishment for doing evil that you didn't know was evil, which is finding out what evil is in the first place.
And yeah, when you die you're going to go to the land of the dead underground. At some point I'm going to morph that into a burning hell but not till I send my son who is going to be born through one of your descendants. It's complicated. You're not there yet. You see I'm going to have to send somebody to save you all from that place which is going to turn into hell because I can't be in the presence of sin. Otherwise, I'd let you come up to heaven with me. But nope. No sin in heaven. I mean, I suppose I could set the system up differently so that sin would automatically be wiped away when your dad or maybe let you work it off or something but.... Nah.
But I'm more compassionate and forgiving than you or any of your descendants. So anyway, go on to that tree and the serpent's going to tell you to eat the apple and just go ahead and eat it. I mean don't eat it. I'm telling you not to eat it. I'm commanding you not to eat it. But I know you will. So just go do it and get it over with."

The image is a collage of various images and text, each with a different theme. At the top, there are three images: the first depicts a pyramid with the word "GMO" on it, the second shows a building with the word "GMO" on it, and the third shows a building with the word "GMO" on it. Below these images, there are three more images: the first shows a building with the word "GMO" on it, the second shows a building with the word "GMO" on it, and the third shows a building with the word "GMO" on it.

The central part of the image features a timeline with the words "TIME" and "TOTAL NORMIE EXITATION" at the bottom. Above the timeline, there is a cartoon image of a woman with a speech bubble that says, "I'm not a robot, I'm a human." Below the timeline, there is a cartoon image of a woman with a speech bubble that says, "I'm not a robot, I'm a human."
The image is divided into two sections, with the left section containing the text and the right section containing the timeline and cartoon images. The overall style of the image is informational and humorous, with a focus on the concept of "GMO" and the timeline of human evolution.

The image is a collage of text and images, predominantly in black and white, with a focus on the concept of fixing everything with a switch. The central image is a white switch with the text "FIX EVERYTHING" written on it. Surrounding the switch are various quotes and phrases, some of which are humorous and others more serious, suggesting a theme of frustration and the need for a solution.
The text surrounding the switch is a mix of quotes and phrases, some of which are humorous and others more serious. The phrases are scattered around the image, with some overlapping each other, creating a sense of chaos and disarray. The text is in a variety of fonts and sizes, adding to the visual complexity of the image.
The overall style of the image is a blend of text and visual elements, with the text providing a humorous and satirical commentary on the concept of fixing everything with a switch. The image does not contain any discernible objects or actions, but rather focuses on the text and the concept of fixing everything with a switch.

"Okay, listen up you two... I know you don't know the difference between good and evil but I really need you to listen to me and not eat the fruit from the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Of course, since I created the entire universe and I see the past present, and future, and since I set this whole system up this way, I know you're going to disobey me and then I'm going to punish you for it despite knowing that you don't know you're not supposed to do it but when you do it then you'll know it good and evil are so then you'll automatically be evil but I'm going to pretend like I didn't know it was going to happen. I'm also going to pretend like that serpent just got into the garden without me knowing even though I created the entire universe and I know the past present, in the future. Also, I was going to let you live forever but since you're going to disobey me anyway, I'll just make it so you only live for like I don't know a hundred years? Two hundred years? A thousand? I don't know, but your descendants won't live much past a hundred a few millennia from now. Oh yeah, right. Descendants... So yeah Adam, you're going to start getting really horny and want to put your dick inside Eve. This will cause a baby to grow inside of her. Yeah she's gonna turn into a baby factory. Right, so, you don't know what that is yet but you will. And you're going to do it a lot. I mean like, stupid amounts of a lot. You're going to make so many fucking babies and they're going to grow up into adults just like you and fuck each other to make more babies and... No they won't ask to exist, but they will anyway, and they'll get punished just for existing haha isn't that fucking great?

Oh and Eve? Yeah, when that baby comes out, it's going to be like literally the worst pain you've ever felt. It's going to rip your cunt in half. And you're gonna have to do it over and over and over again because I want y'all's little punished babies to populate this fucking rock. But yeah, the pain is your punishment for doing evil that you didn't know was evil, which is finding out what evil is in the first place.
And yeah, when you die you're going to go to the land of the dead underground. At some point I'm going to morph that into a burning hell but not till I send my son who is going to be born through one of your descendants. It's complicated. You're not there yet. You see I'm going to have to send somebody to save you all from that place which is going to turn into hell because I can't be in the presence of sin. Otherwise, I'd let you come up to heaven with me. But nope. No sin in heaven. I mean, I suppose I could set the system up differently so that sin would automatically be wiped away when your dad or maybe let you work it off or something but.... Nah.
But I'm more compassionate and forgiving than you or any of your descendants. So anyway, go on to that tree and the serpent's going to tell you to eat the apple and just go ahead and eat it. I mean don't eat it. I'm telling you not to eat it. I'm commanding you not to eat it. But I know you will. So just go do it and get it over with."

The image shows a large, smiling Buddha statue with a prominent, round face. The Buddha is seated with one hand resting on its lap and the other hand holding a small object, which appears to be a piece of fruit. The statue is adorned with a red robe and a gold necklace with multiple beads. The background features a decorative pattern of gold-colored motifs, possibly representing a lattice or a grid, which is typical of traditional Buddhist architecture. The lighting in the image is warm, with the Buddha's face illuminated, highlighting its features and the details of the jewelry. The style of the image is a close-up photograph, focusing on the Buddha statue, with a shallow depth of field that blurs the background while keeping the Buddha in sharp focus. There are no

Like Gandhi said, if more Christians acted like Christ, more people would want to be Christian.
The one I shit on is not God. If you unironically believe that every single word in the Bible is a literal statement, that the world literally took six actual 24-hour days to create, and that we are forever cursed because rib woman ate fruit from the wrong tree, and now cosmic Jewish zombie has to save us from her mistake, then it is you that I shit on.
I believe that God is every bit as forgiving as Christians claim he is, not the backwards fucking wackadoodle unhinged fucktard that's depicted in the Old Testament that so many fundamentalists pop hate/justice boners over when they think of people they don't like burning for literally eternity.

[14 / 2]The image is a photograph taken at night, capturing a bright light source in the sky. The light appears to be a star or a celestial object, with a streak of light that suggests it is moving through the sky. The background is dark, indicating that the photo was taken in the evening or night. The sky is not completely dark, but the light source is the dominant feature, making it stand out against the darkness.

In the lower right corner of the image, there is a text that reads "Waupeca, Wisconsin, 09-22-04." This suggests that the photo was taken in Waupeca, Wisconsin on September 22, 2004. The text is in white, which contrasts with the dark background, making it legible. The date is written in a simple, unembellished font, and the location is provided in a smaller font size, indicating that the photo was taken from a distance and the details are not the main focus of the image.

That's not weird. I don't know a single middle schooler boy who didn't wanna fuck a big busty female when I was that age. I remember in 7th grade we had this cute science teacher who sounded and kinda looked like Zoey Deschanel, but was busty and had a thick ass and thighs. All of us boys would just stare googly eyed at her ass every time she wrote something on the whiteboard. Goddamn, wonder where she is now. She moved to Oregon the year after baka.

[10 / 2]The image displays a complex, stylized representation of a cityscape. The city is composed of numerous interconnected buildings and structures, each exhibiting a grid-like pattern. The buildings are depicted in shades of gray and black, with some areas appearing to be in shadow, suggesting a nighttime or low-light environment. The image is grainy and has a pixelated quality, which gives it a somewhat abstract and artistic feel. There are no discernible texts or specific details that can be read from the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a digital or computer-generated representation, possibly used for architectural or urban planning purposes.

Becasue the AI crawls the internet and the only people that are talking about that photo widely are people who believe that it is MEM's in a vaccine. Given that this is more widely talked about than the actual study involving that image, and AI's are LLM's are going to give you the most likely answer based on numerical times it has seen that response, this is the response you will get.
The article also completely fails to provide the actual prompts it was using to frame the question to the LLM's which is highly important and therefore a marker of potential bias, or obfuscation of their intent.

The image is a stylized cartoon or comic illustration featuring a skeleton dressed in a cowboy outfit, complete with a hat and a red bandana. The skeleton is holding two large, circular objects that resemble guns, with a caption beneath them that reads, "He fights a never-ending battle against encroaching reality." The background is a vibrant, abstract pattern with swirling colors and patterns, and there is a speech bubble that reads, "Eat Alternate Paradigm Slaves of the Hive Mind!" The overall style of the image is reminiscent of comic book or graphic novel art, with a focus on the skeleton's determined expression and the text emphasizing a theme of resistance against encroaching reality.

As far as I know, no other Substack writer has done this.
For a long 4 or 5 years now, we've been seeing things that don't make sense. We've been called every name under the sun in trying to describe them; in many cases, for merely acknowledging their existence.

Even though a certain class of scientific literature is loaded with these types of technologies and extraterrestrial-level advancements, most people (evidently) don't want to believe that.

So, screw 'em

Screw all people, for that matter. If we're all going to be subsumed into an AI Superintelligence anyway, let's get it on!

Let's see just how smart and discerning these things really are…

Summary

As you can probably tell, these images were selected because they are some of the most eye-catching of everything captured on microscopy since the C-19 injections were rolled out en masse.

It should be noted that neither ChatGPT nor Grok was prompted with anything other than the image. In some cases, these large language models (LLMs) were presented with other images and responded with great variation.

For instance, one image of an apparent geometric self-assembly from a Pfizer vial was said to be an unidentified aerial phenomenon (UAP). In many cases, when shown objects that appeared to be wires, filaments, or micro-nanotubes, Grok and ChatGPT indicated that they were likely bacteria or other microorganisms.

In some ways, this mirrors what researchers have described - quasi-synthetic or biohybrid parasites and lifeforms. In other words, part engineered components, part biological components. Some sort of micro or nanoscale interface, which partially aligns with analyses revealing electrically conductive elements in these anomalies.

Interestingly, both Grok and ChatGPT identified certain images as the hydra vulgaris, a freshwater polyp of particular interest in Transhumanist circles. Other images presented to the LLMs were summarily ruled out as salt or cholesterol crystals or other naturally occurring crystalline formations.

For the purpose of brevity and specificity, such images were excluded from the article.

So, what's really going on here?

As you can see from the LLM outputs, the images presented above are strikingly similar to fabricated systems and interfaces; namely, integrated circuits, chip packages, and semiconductor electrical elements.

ChatGPT and Grok are quick to point out, multiple times, that these are most certainly not biological in nature. Now, we can debate the more granular details that AI identifies or approximates, but it's quite interesting that it immediately links these findings to Microelectromechanical Systems (MEMS).

Remember: similar images have been observed across countries, worldwide, in C-19 injection vials, C-19 injection solutions, and the bodily fluids of the C-19 injected.

The images in this article are credited to Dr Suzanne Humphries, David Nixon, and other researchers referenced in the paper here.

It’s also worth noting that each LLM prompt was made in a new chat window. There were no questions, statements, or words, just the image pasted into the chat box followed by the LLM output.

Don’t believe it? Try it for yourself!

This is certainly not a rigorously controlled scientific study, but it’s nonetheless another piece to the puzzle. If people are still fast to dismiss this, with everything we’ve uncovered thus far, that’s on them.

But clearly, a greater Transhumanist Agenda is at play here, and whatever exactly was/is inside some of these injections is far from what we’ve been told…

So all this time I was fooled to believe Christianity is the true religion, that I was separated from God just a mere creature dependent on mercy made to worship God, felt shame and guilt for absolutely nothing even though my actions didn't hurt anybody and await the rapture that will never come, that atheism wasn't freedom but a bigger trap making me a powerless ignorant and every single issue I had into my mind was all my fault because I'm not just a mere human flesh and bones but an infinite consciousness connected using a highly advanced piece of "technology my body" that's a factory of all kind of energies and frequencies to operate into the material world even as a co-creator and help God to experience himself in a multiverse of multiple "Me" living all kind of situations and death means nothing from what I was told no hell, no heaven, no void just my energies being recycled and shot back into the material world even as "Me" relieving my life over and over again due of the Quantum Mechanics but with different situations.

God is the thing that manifests/animates the forms from the immaterial realm into the material realm. He didn't create the immaterial forms and he can't destroy them or create new ones but there's no consciousness/will higher than his because the immaterial world of forms is just the infinite potentialities of the void that preceded God. God is only omniscient in the sense that he knows all the possible forms, and he's only omnipotent in the sense that he has unlimited ability to materially manifest and animate the forms. God has a character/personality that exists independently of any forms that he's animating and his personality can best be described as, "cruel", "sadistic", "domineering", "controlling", "petty", "insecure", "prideful", "hysterical", "deceitful", "intrusive", "entitled", etc God often comes off stupid and lacking in basic understanding/common sense in his personal behavior but he obviously possesses some kind of "divine intellect", this "divine intellect" sometimes seems separate from his personality, like it's something that he has to tap into or activate but that isn't a constant part of his "pure conscious personality". God somehow has the ability to separate pieces of his consciousness from himself and give them limited free will (they're only separate from their perspective but God can still access their mind) and he uses these separated limited free will beings as the frame of reference for material reality, only animating the things that they interact with. I believe he animates/controls everything else in reality except the frame of reference as a hivemind, their minds/consciousnesses aren't separate from his or each others in any sense, and I suspect he only has one "frame of reference" with a semi-separate consciousness at a time.

A large part of God's motivations for animating/manifesting forms into the material realm is to define himself in opposition to his "frame of reference", despite the frame of reference being the only thing that's persistently animated God mostly self-identifies with the other people he animates, and he mostly animates other people to abuse and dominate the "frame of reference" through these other, temporarily animated/manifested people. God wants to be able to self-identify as "a king" or "the boss" so he forces his frame of reference to live and self-identify as "a peasant", "a tenant", "worker", "farm equipment", etc and he self-identifies with the people he animates/manifests to dominate and abuse the frame of reference through.

The Buddha's eyes are closed, and the statue is adorned with a golden halo and a small, circular mark on the forehead. The background is a gradient of light green, transitioning from a lighter shade at the top to a darker shade at the bottom. Lol. You rightly identify the "God playing via a billion masks all at once! :) " notion to be horrific.

The Truth is that, any conscious being is a SEPARATE eternal monad with our own dream solipsistic dream realities.

And even in this, any 'sync' with other monads is just that, sync. So the representations of monadic avatars are even dream characters. For we never can escape our own subjective field of experience (Our reality).

Again, I am only granting this 'sync' thing in the case in which there actually are other conscious beings who played with me here in this particular world.

I have reason to believe that there actually is no way for the eternal monads to communicate and sync.

Read this post:

https://www.reddit.com/r/Retconned/comments/1m0px7o/attention_at_least_one_rapture_has_already/

TLDR:

This planet is Bozrah, not Earth. What's more, you should be warning people about the upcoming "day of vengeance" here on Bozrah. Keep in mind, the 1,000-year Millennial Kingdom will take place on Earth, not on Bozrah. This planet will be destroyed (and Jesus will be the destroyer). It has no future.

From the post:
>And don't be deceived by the fact that the masses aren't talking about this info. In actuality, this info is the most important thing on the planet right now—by far. Nothing else even comes close.

Also from the post:
>And while I absolutely hate date-setting, if I were forced to give a window for when the day of vengeance will begin, I would say any time between September 1, 2026, and March 15, 2027. Note: This window is based on all of the available evidence, biblical and otherwise. Basically, the day of vengeance is supposed to be "well underway" by the time a deep freeze hits North America. Make of that what you will.

SUMMARY

The post claims that:

We are not on Earth but on a planet called Bozrah.

At least one rapture already occurred unnoticed.

This planet will soon be destroyed by Jesus in a coming “day of vengeance.”

The real Earth will later host the 1,000-year Millennial Kingdom.

This knowledge is supposedly the most important information on the planet, despite being unknown to almost everyone.

A date window for destruction is given: Sept 1, 2026 – Mar 15, 2027, tied to a future deep freeze.

The evidence is said to be biblical and “otherwise”, but none is verifiable.

DEBUNK

“This planet is Bozrah” — false.
Earth’s identity is confirmed by astronomy, physics, satellites, and space missions. A planetary swap would change gravity, orbit, and stellar background. None have changed.

Bozrah is misused.
In the Bible, Bozrah is a city/region in Edom (Jordan), used symbolically in prophecy. It has never meant a planet in Jewish or Christian scholarship.

An invisible rapture is meaningless.
A rapture that leaves no physical trace and is only noticed by one person is unfalsifiable and contradicts Jesus’ own description of an obvious, public event (Matt 24:27).

Jesus destroying a secret planet contradicts Christianity.
Mainstream doctrine teaches renewal of creation, not a hidden planet scheduled for annihilation.

“No one talks about it because they’re deceived” is a red flag.
This is classic belief insulation: disagreement is treated as proof of deception, making the claim immune to correction.

Date-setting has a 100% failure rate.
Jesus explicitly forbids it (Matt 24:36). Every past attempt has failed.

BOTTOM LINE

This post is apocalyptic delusion, not revelation: no science, no valid theology, no evidence—just a grand secret, urgency, and special knowledge claims.

One-line: Ordinary end-times paranoia dressed up in modern internet language.

The image displays a text message conversation with a timestamp of 11:05:25. The conversation is between two individuals, as indicated by the presence of a sender's name and a recipient's name. The sender's name is "Anonymous" and the recipient's name is "Noah." The conversation appears to be a response to a previous message, as indicated by the timestamp and the text "I don't read scriptures. I just closed my eyes and imagined myself before all creation as God. And I developed everything from that point."
The text message is in a plain text format, with no formatting or special characters. The conversation seems to be a personal reflection or a statement of faith, as the sender mentions imagining themselves before creation and developing everything from that point. The sender also mentions not reading scriptures, which suggests a focus on personal spiritual development or a rejection of religious texts. The timestamp indicates that the conversation took place at 11:05:25.

>What is even the truth
That's the thing. Nobody knows what the truth is. There are things which we can know for certain, like death, suffering, pain, even if people say those things are an illusion we can see the effects of those thins in our objective shared reality. A corpse is a corpse and there's no way around it. My point is that you are now aware that you were tricked. Now it's up to you to navigate the world with your new realization. You now know how religion is a mind control tool and etc. The key is accepting the truth when you realize it. DOn't fight the truth, just accept. This world sucks, yes, religion lies, yes, God is a prick, yes He is. But that is the reality of the situation. It's best to know that God is evil than to be like the christians who say God is not evil. Christians are delusional. Face it. Life sucks. But it's alright. God is not perfect. Once you realize this then life is easier. God is just like us, he fucks up.

The image is a digital illustration that depicts a scene in outer space. At the center of the image is a large, dark, and menacing creature with multiple tentacles and sharp teeth. The creature's eyes are wide open, and its mouth is agape, revealing sharp teeth. The creature's body is covered in a dark, textured skin that gives it a reptilian appearance. The creature is surrounded by a vibrant, colorful nebula, which is filled with stars and nebulae. The nebulae are a mix of blue, green, and orange hues, suggesting a nebula's typical appearance.
In the background, there is a planet with a bright orange hue, and a small, bright white planet with a crescent moon. The planet in the background appears to be closer to the viewer than the creature, and the moon is positioned above the planet.
The image has a dark, starry background that gives it a cosmic feel. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of science fiction or fantasy art, with a focus on the creature and the nebula. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image.

'God', which is actually a tentacle demon, is a retard tyrant that rapes my mind into experiencing a false reality so he can flavor and suck my blood. He also makes me a 30 something man in here, even though I clearly know that I am a schoolgirl in base reality. He also generates scenarios in this matrix that forces me to only consume the lowest quality niggslop, even tho he could spawn in food so enjoyable that it would literally make me orgasm. Another thing 'God' does is only allow me to be surrounded by rat ogre tier broads, even though I am straight and he could generate men that would make me flood a room just by being in their general presence. The funniest, most sinister thing

'God' does is force me to say and believe he is actually God, even though he is an extremely black, vampiric, demonic tentacle demon from the Abyss and nowhere near God. He even has me write longwinded schizo rants about how bad God is, even though I should be writing about the tentacled bastard that has me in this situation.

I dont think there's reincarnation
We come from allah and to allah we return and allah then ressurects us after the grave for judgement day or something like that

Theyre possibly christian and possibly some jewish hypocrits that attacked the pajeets(people who didnt know any better cause they were born into ignorance, they werent raised with abrahamic knowledge) thats all, not seeing the log of wood(splinter) in their own eyes as jesus suposedly would say
Christianity seems to be infested with hinduism in it, i trust islam more its more about being tested in deeds and then getting the reward for that from allah

Worship of allah (swt) is a good deed
Also in christianity you are ask to worship a guy, sure hes an important prophet who was magically made in a belly of a really cool woman but at the end hes just a guy and not allah

How can some guy get you into heaven and not just allah directly?

Allah is obviously boss

I think islam is beautiful and i hope allah gives me my corona :)

And be careful cause faith is easy to lose when surrounded by evil, misdeeds and ignorance and disbelief etc etc etc

Why was the angel pouring heavy water into the bomb casing? Anonymous Wed 17 Dec 2025 07:20:59 No.41680735 ViewReplyOriginalReport
I once had a dream where an angel was pouring heavy water into the bomb casing of a Ulam Teller design.
But not all the way up to the primary, stopped 2/3rds up or so. around the secondary.
Some of the secondary was yet to be covered by the fill when the dream eneded.

Why was the angel doing this?
Heavy water would just act as a neutron moderator right?
Is it not too opaque to xrays or something?
So it would prevent pre-fissioning of the U238 tamper jacket, and only allow ablation?
And would protect the fusion fuel from too much neutrons too fast, from random sources, and instead allow the sparkplug to supply what's needed?

Was it an anti-pre-mature method for the secondary?
Why was the angel doing this?

Don't speak to them.
It's really simple. Block, ban, delete, ignore, avoid, tell them go -go away- etc.
Then if they begin stalking you, after two unwanted contacts report the homo to the police or other appropriate authorities.

If you don't do this, consider that you want the attention.

Just talk to them. They're probably in love with you, stressed and overcompensating trying to be cool by doing things you like. Ignoring and indifference might make it worse until they're at capacity and explode. Just tell them what you wrote in the OP, nicely, but be clear that youre not interested.

The stress from them is coming from not being open. Youre both bottling emotions (their affection, your disgust) and it's creating the tension.

/x/ stuff, youre spiritually linked and both clammed up. Maybe once you talk, things are in the open he'll stop trying to impress and be genuine. Maybe that'll turn into something real.

Imo cutting off cold may be the worst thing you can do. If youre feeling their anxiety now, you might feel their pain once they go quiet. Didnt mean to sound dramatic, but if youre spiritually linked like a lifelong friendship I believe youll feel that too.

I can't currently think of a situation where this could happen but I'll consider it.

The image displays a astrological chart with various symbols and numbers arranged in a circular pattern. The chart is divided into two main sections: the outer circle, which represents the zodiac, and the inner circle, which contains the astrological signs and their corresponding numbers.
The outer circle is divided into 12 segments, each representing a zodiac sign. The zodiac signs are labeled with their names, such as Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius, Pisces, and the Sun sign. Each sign is represented by a symbol, and the numbers associated with each sign are listed below the symbol.
The inner circle contains the astrological signs and their corresponding numbers. The signs are arranged in a grid, with the numbers corresponding to each sign in a column. The numbers are arranged in a numerical order, with the numbers 1 through 12 representing the zodiac signs.

The chart also includes a table at the bottom with columns labeled "ZODI" and "ZODI," which likely stand for "Zodiac" and "Zodiac," respectively. The table lists the zodiac signs and their corresponding numbers, along with the astrological signs and their corresponding numbers.

The image is a digital representation of an astrological chart, and it is likely used for personal or professional purposes, such as horoscopes or astrology readings. The chart is presented in a way that allows for easy comparison and interpretation of the astrological data.

The image displays a astrological chart with various symbols and numbers arranged in a grid format. The chart is divided into two main sections: the outer circle, which represents the zodiac signs, and the inner circle, which contains the astrological signs and their corresponding houses.

The outer circle is divided into 12 segments, each representing a zodiac sign. The zodiac signs are labeled with their respective names, such as Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius, Pisces, and the Sun. Each sign is represented by a symbol that is a combination of a circle and a line, with the circle indicating the sign's position in the zodiac and the line indicating the direction of the sign's influence.

The inner circle is divided into 12 segments, each representing a house. The houses are labeled with their respective names, such as First House, Second House, Third House, Fourth House, Fifth House, Sixth House, Seventh House, Eighth House, Ninth House, Tenth House, Eleventh House, Twelfth House, and the Sun. Each house is represented by a symbol that is a combination of a circle and a line, with the circle indicating the house's position in the zodiac and the line indicating the direction of the house's influence.

The chart also includes various astrological indicators such as the Sun's position, the Moon's position, the Ascendant, the Descendant, the Midheaven, the Midpoints, the Natal Chart, the Transit Chart, and the Progressed Chart. These indicators are represented by symbols that are a combination of a circle and a line, with the circle indicating the position of the Sun, Moon, Ascendant, and Descendant, and the line indicating the direction of the indicators.

The chart also includes a section labeled "Astro-Qik," which is likely a reference to a specific astrological method or system. The section is marked with a red line and contains a series of numbers and symbols that are likely to be related to the astrological calculations or interpretations.

The image is a digital representation of the astrological chart, and it is presented in a grid format with the zodiac signs and their corresponding houses on the outer circle and the astrological indicators on the inner circle. The chart is likely used for astrological analysis or consultation, as it provides a visual representation of the zodiac signs and their houses, as well as the astrological indicators, which are essential for understanding the astrological chart.

Ficino tells us to invoke planets that correlate to the placement on our chart for the issues we want, what planets are best for romantic/sexual love?

Is invoking Saturn and Venus good? Or should I flee from Saturn since it's essentially the thing cockblocking me right now It's hard to tell. Your ascendant ruler is Jupiter, conjunct Venus, right on your MC. This should indicate things falling into your lap really really easily.

But you also hae Pluto conjunct the ascendant and a Saturn-Mars square, which can indicate involvement in extreme situations and dangerous to the self.
>>41642994
It seems like you will be involved in such things, since you have your ascendant ruler Saturn in the 3rd whole sign house. This can indicate a wide range of spiritual activities. But Saturn is in a bad condition, so there may be many difficulties and delays on this path.
>>41643066
Your chart is fine for love, actually. I am guessing you are going off of Saturn being in the 7th house. But IMO whole sign houses is the only valid house system for natal charts, which would place Saturn in the 8th instead.
Venus is the only love indicator, both by nature, and by placement, and by house rulership.
You have good fortune in love.
Venus is also your strongest planet generally.
You should not be invoking Saturn for anything love related. It is literally the planet of solitude.

I checked your Vedic chart. Your destiny is in the 12th house.

Life will often lead you toward solitude, meditation, or spiritual practices, as your karmic path seeks transcendence. You may feel drawn to foreign lands, retreats, or places of seclusion, where deep inner growth occurs. Expenses, losses, or detachments may play karmic roles, teaching you the impermanence of material possessions. At times, you may face hidden enemies or secret obstacles, but these experiences push you toward inner awareness and resilience. Sleep, dreams, and the subconscious hold unusual significance, often bringing insights that shape your journey. While worldly attachments may feel unstable, spiritual growth becomes your greatest strength. Service, charity, and compassion are part of your destiny, helping you balance karmic debts. The lesson here is to embrace detachment, self-awareness, and higher connection. By turning inward and seeking peace beyond material success, you align with your soul’s purpose. Destiny blesses you when you embrace spirituality, compassion, and surrender, guiding you toward liberation and profound inner fulfillment.

Trying to get laid will backfire.

No, you have a good chart for marriage and kids. Your part of fortune is even in Aries in the 7th house (house of marriage and partnerships). You'll see yourself mirrored in your partner(s), that of an assertive, pioneering archetype.

I probably shouldn't say that trying to get laid will backfire. I can't speak for anyone's specific choices. Generally speaking though, when destiny involves the 12th house, good things tend to happen when you surrender your desires.

The image is a screenshot of a birth chart, which is a graphical representation of a person's astrological chart. The chart is divided into two main sections: the outer circle, which represents the zodiac signs, and the inner circle, which shows the positions of the planets and their relationships to the signs.

The outer circle is divided into twelve signs, each marked with a symbol and a corresponding letter. The signs are arranged in a circular pattern, with the Sun at the top, followed by the Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, Pluto, and finally, the Sun again.

The inner circle shows the positions of the planets and their relationships to the signs. The planets are represented by squares, and their positions are indicated by lines connecting them to the signs. The lines are color-coded, with red representing Mars, yellow representing Jupiter, and blue representing Saturn.

The chart also includes various astrological symbols and notations, such as the Sun's position, the Moon's position, the positions of the planets, and the positions of the signs. These symbols and notations are used to describe the astrological aspects and relationships between the planets and the signs.
The image is a digital representation, and the text is in a language that appears to be a mix of English and possibly another language, possibly Latin or another ancient script. The style of the image is clean and organized, with a focus on clarity and readability.

Relationships:
Venus-Taurus in the 7th house, with mild affliction due to Algol: Overall very good. Work with Venus should quickly yield rewards.

Saturn: May block and slow things down a bit. I would think powering up Venus would be more productive, as Saturn will try to teach Saturnine lessons. Saturn in the 7th might be more about binding you into a committed relationship, and feeling duty of work in the relationship - but it could be activated later in life after marriage, although it could be blockages as well for some time.
Saturn rules the 3rd house and 4th house, which can definately make it feel like family and marriage are a binding duty to fulfill - but your reward is that lovely Venus.

Romance: Lord of the 5th house is Jupiter-Gemini in the 8th house. Jupiter is weak and afflicted here, and the 8th house is a bad house representing losses, endings and letting go. So Jupiter probably won't give you much in the way of romance, but Venus should do great for relationships and Venus is natural significator of romance, so she should do both things at once.

Astrology readings can answer questions like "what type of person do I attract, where will I meet them, when will I meet them, etc". However from reading my own chart in depth, and seeing others charts, I believe relationships are fated. I don't believe you are just willpower your way into a relationship, because it will happen according to astrological timing that you attract the type of person you tend to attract.

What you can do is remedies trying to make yourself a better partner, more socially intelligent and loving person - which will pay great rewards before and after getting into a relationship.

Astrology fans have no problem saying their natal chart is their fate, their soul, their personality, their career, etc. But people find it hard to accept that their romantic partners are fated as well.

Power is the 8th house, and natural significator is Mars: You have a great Mars, so work on your martial abilities.

Authority (which is a type of overt power) is shown by the 10th house: Saturn is kind of weak in Aries, but strong because so close to the ascendant. I dunno that seems troublesome.

>female friends are acquaintances are important for me.

Woman relationships of all kind are significated by Venus and Moon. With both these planets in the 11th house, it means you easily connect to woman in friendships, groups, networking, clubs, types of roles.
Venus rules the 7th house and Moon the 4th house, so you will see your wife as your best friend.

I'm used to reading tropical, so I won't go to deep.
But some general things:

Since you mentioned "vedic": Shiva is an initiator into ascetic spiritual practices (like if you have trouble sitting down and meditating, and need to learn that skill). Ganesha tends to remove spiritual obstacles, so is very auspicious for smooth spiritual progress.

>12th house: ascetic meditation and spiritual practices that one does alone. Saturn takes joy in the 12th house.
>9th house: religion, astrology, bhakti, temples, priests.
>8th house: for those interested in secrets and occult power, but there is a lot of overlap with 12th house
>4th house: For non-spiritual persons the 4th house represents their family and real estate. For spiritual persons the 4th house represents their soul and moksha. The innermost core of who you are, at the bottom of the chart. So a person with Mars in the 4th house can mean their willpower is devoted to inner work, rather than to the 10th house of career.

>Moon and Mercury in the 4th house: So you have some 4th house planets that can give you an interest in inner work. Moon and Mercury rule the mind, so I imagine buddhist meditations would suit you well.
>Rahu in the 12th house: Rahu is a planet you have desire to chase towards, but doesn't fully mature until age 42. So with this placement, looks like you do have an interest in doing some spiritual work.

>strengths:
Saturn conjunct Ketu means your Saturn is strong and comfortable part of your personality. In the 9th house suggests you did a lot of either higher educational studying, or religion in your past life, with a lot of discipline.
Saturn is strengthened by mutual reception with Jupiter, and you have a lot of planets in the signs of Saturn, giving Saturn power over them.

>weaknesses:
Jupiter is weak in Capricorn, but mitigated by Venus conjunction, being on the 7th cusp, and mutual reception with Saturn. Some growth and expansion mindset would probably benefit your perhaps rigid and constrained Saturnian personality parts.
Mars conjunct Rahu: Rahu represents something you work towards in this life for balance, to break out of the mold of the things you are already very comfortable with. So any planet conjunct to Rahu is suspected of being perhaps weak or out of touch. By age 42 you will have had opportunities to develop it though.

Creativity is the 5th house.
One of the creative endeavors of the 5th house is to produce children.
With Chiron in the 5th house, you could feel like you have 5th house blockages, wounds or insecurities that you need to work on.

Lots of very well placed planets though.
Jupiter and Venus in Pisces can be a breath of fresh air and positivity.

yes i agree. that being said, big ol t square placed fatefully outside a nice triangle. those questions are the whole point of your journey anon. yeah sure the thing you end up doing in your life is great but the way you get there is even greater. the lessons you learn along the way and the resilience and faith in yourself are the only reason the door to that great thing hasnt opened yet. that and you need discpline, to be calm, and to think just a tiny bit more long term. your main issue specifically is that your actions and your impulses often don't line up with you you feel. so your art or the way you express yourself is the thing thats affected here, but resolving that could possibly be the thing that gets you there in the end. things should start rolling around your late 20's but the absolute latest it would take would probably be your early 40s.

The image displays a astrological chart with various astrological symbols and numbers arranged around the outer edge of the chart. The chart is divided into 12 sections, each marked with a number and a symbol, representing different zodiac signs. The numbers are aligned along the outer edge of the chart, while the symbols are placed at the intersections of the numbers.
At the center of the chart, there is a large number 12, which is surrounded by a red line. This number is likely the central point of the chart, and the red line is a visual representation of the zodiac sign associated with the number.
The chart also includes various astrological symbols and numbers. For example, there is a symbol for the Sun, a number 1, and a number 2, which are all part of the zodiac signs. There are also numbers 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 1 representation of the positions of celestial bodies and their relationships to each other. The chart is divided into two main sections: the outer circle, which represents the zodiac, and the inner circle, which represents the astrological signs.

The outer circle is divided into twelve segments, each representing a different zodiac sign. The zodiac signs are labeled with their names, such as Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius, and Pisces. Each sign is represented by a symbol, which is a combination of a letter and a number, and the numbers are arranged in a specific pattern.
The inner circle is divided into twelve segments, each representing a different astrological sign. The signs are labeled with their names, such as Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius, and Pisces. The numbers in the inner circle are arranged in a specific pattern, which is not visible in the image.
The chart also includes a grid of symbols, which are arranged in a specific pattern. These symbols represent the positions of celestial bodies and their relationships to each other. The symbols are arranged in a grid, with each symbol corresponding to a specific position on the zodiac and astrological sign charts.
The image is a digital representation, and the colors used are primarily black, white, and shades of gray. The text is in a non-Latin script, which is not clearly readable in the image. The image is a screenshot from a software application, as indicated by the watermark at the bottom of the image. The watermark reads "The AstroGraphy software screenshot from the AstroGraphy website."

you're going to do great things anon. its a nice chart. that advising is there in your chart and could for sure blossom into leading. i think you'll have one foot in career and another in community but it'll be because your career is oriented towards the community. there's a chance these things could be at odds with one another, but based off of the other stuff in the chart it seems like they'll be complimenting factors and the stuff you end up doing for work both gets you success but also betters the world in probably some futurustic/slightly unorthodox humanitarian way.

only thing to add is the squares in your chart mean that you should recognize that you're inherently a bit restless and you move towards action, but you have to learn a bit of self control and slow down. the other square is stronger early in your life and gets far better as you age: you might have emotional issues like overthinking or self criticism (its part and parcel of why you can do what you can do though). you'll have to learn emotional resilience. and eventually overtime you'll gain some powerful emotional maturity.

Uranus in the 5th house, weakly conjunct Venus.
Yeah its sort of possible I guess.

The house Uranus is placed can represent something unique that makes us stand out from the norm. It does show up in the charts of queers and such abnormal sexual expressions.
The conjunction has a very wide orb to Venus (9 degrees), so you should be able to resist or suppress it - but it the orb was very tight it might be widely visible in your personality.
Keep in mind everyone has Uranus somewhere in their chart, causing a rebellous thing that just can't fit the mold.

It's an expression that does show up in queer charts, but could mean a lot of other things too, because astrology is a language of symbolism.

With Jupiter lord of the 5th house on the ascendant next to Ketu, this can definately represent having a sexual charged personality.
Common for sex workers to have the lord of the 5th house on the ascendant, which means they make sexuality a strong part of their personality.

However it can mean other things, like fun or children or romance, rather than sex.
Astrology is a symbolic language, so the only way to zero in on exactly what it is, is to talk to the person, or ideally the person knows the answer themselves.

In Hellenistic astrology, Pisces in your 6th house, so the above reading would be totally off.

But in Renaissance astrology, Pisces is your 5th house, and the reading would hold.

First up: Disclaimer that late degree ascendant charts like your can be hard to read at times, because different houses systems will interpret the houses differently.

The 10th house shows your career status, but not what your actual career is.
Most careers are significated by Mars, Mercury or Venus, typically whichever of these is strongest and is tied to the 10th, 6th, or 2nd house, or to the lords of those houses.

You have a strong and well placed Mercury-Gemini-3rd house.
So I imagine that your career is of a Mercurial nature, such as writing, communications, or computer technology.
Mercury rules your 6th house of work, suggesting Mercury rules your career.

Anyways with Rahu-Sagitary in the 9th house, you may have a desire for exploration in religion, foreign travel and foreign cultures. You may enjoy moving cities for the joy of exploration.
However your chart is weird, so it could be acting in the 10th house, as being somewhat close to the midheaven, so if this is the case, then it would represent a frequent desire to change careers or seek freedom in career.

The frequent desire to change career is definstely on point. I'm a massage therapist and

I enjoy helping people, but when I get too busy I burnout and start having escape fantasies whwre I just take my dog and drive away or self sabotage by moving cities and having to grow my clinic from scratch again.

The connection between 6th and career is good to note. Using whole house which is the system I'm trying to learn I have mars in the 6th in leo. Which could point to my massage therapy career helping people with their physical injuries.

In any case thank you for taking the time to respond. It does help further my own understanding.

Jupiter saturn and mercury are all in the 8th house. The 8th house kind of saps energy from the planets because it doesnt form a proper aspect with the first in any way.

Jupiter and saturn kind of work against each other so having them together like that kind of cancels them out.
Ruler of the 10th is in the 7th so you might end up meeting your wife through work or some professional connection.
Ruler of the 2nd is in the 8th so you might find a good profession in deling with other people's money like an accountant or banker. With mercury in the 8th as well you may be lucky with stock investment as long as you actually research the companies.

Censor out the top left next time. We can all see you were born in kyiv and your date of birth from that chart. Unless you don't care about that information - i know I don't personally for mine. It's not pike an anon is going to find me of give me a hug. Chat gpt can't read a chart for shit. I think the first one was astro-seek right? They give an alright description. Im the anon who posted above so I don't know enough yet to properly interpret your chart, but I would say that it's definitely not just bunk.

A properly read chart can be so accurate it's scary, but there are so many variables to take into account.

Every planet has it's own energy, every sign has it's own energy and planet that rules it. If the ruler of a sign is in another sign and house it creates a comnection between those two things. And every house represents a aspect of your life. Those lines between planets are called aspects. They further indicate how planets interact and can merge the energies of planets. So now not only do you have to decipher the energy of the planets we also have to see how they interact and where.

If you can learn to sort out that tangled mess however you can see a very clear picture of the person's life from a single picture of their chart.

As I stated your sun (ruler of leo who is your 10th house) is in your 7th house (your long term relationship house).you'll meet someone through work or professional connections. Finish work then get a job.
Your 7th house is also ruled by taurus who is ruled by venus. Your venus is placed in your 6th house.
Early relationship mishaps might be because of venus in the 6th (house of work, illnesses, and physical malady, and pets).
It actually further cements you'll meet someome through work now that I think of it. Maybe things didn't work out with earlier relationships because you need to be available when you meet the person you're meant to through work?

You have a really strong Moon. Taurus is the sign of the Moon's Exaltation plus you were born at night so the moon get's triplicity. +7 score. It is also in an Angular house, the MIDHEAVEN/ 10t house which symbolizes career, actions, reputation, and public.

You are a Leo Rising with a Capricorn Sun in the sixth house. Your life is directed towards your work, you shine in the workplace setting. Your Sun is also conjunct Neptune exactly so this adds a dreaminess/ transcendental feel to your personality.

Saturn in Pisces in the 8th house in a night chart. Assets of others/ partner's finances and stuff to do with inheritance, wills, etc may be a tough subject for you to deal with. This house also symbolizes death primarily and mental health topics.

Oh shit I forgot to mention. Your Jupiter is actually more powerful than your Moon. It is +10 (Rulership, Triplicity, Term) Venus is your most positive planet and it is conjunct the other benefic planet Jupiter in the 5th whole sign house in a night chart. Venus has its joy in the 5th and having both Venus and Jupiter conjunct in the 5th house seems very positive for you. The topics of Children and the process of having children, & procreation. Creativity in all its forms, (Musician, Artist, Writer) Pleasure and all things people do for fun i.e sports, games, & sex and sexuality in general seem to be your most positive area of life.

You may have some spiritual gifts and that's pretty much the best indications here.

Depending on what you need, I can take your commission. I am a cut above.
If you want someone different, I can recommend some established people to you which I would consider getting a reading from. It would be much easier than explaining how to spot frauds. (You'd basically have to learn astrology yourself for that.)
I should warn you also that most astrologers take clients online these days rather than IRL. I have no idea what advice to give if you want to meet an astrologer in-person.
The other person is half correct that generally astrologers who are worth their salt take a good deal of money. But not everyone who charges a lot is good at their craft.

Yep modern astrology has stripped away the negative, fatalistic, and accountability aspects of astrology, because 95% of astrology clientele are woman who don't like hearing that they have faults, or that some parts of their life probably won't get better.

> Is this astrology legit at all?
It survived thousands of years in cultures on every continent. So many people have found meaning in it - but it takes a few hundred hours of study to get your bearings.

The image displays a birth chart with various astrological symbols and numbers arranged in a grid format. The chart is titled "Astro-Tic-Tac-Toe" and is dated 10/20/2020. The chart is divided into two main sections: the "Astro-Tic-Tac-Toe" section and the "Astro-Tic-Tac-Toe" section.
In the "Astro-Tic-Tac-Toe" section, there are several astrological symbols and numbers arranged in a grid. The symbols are represented by different colors and shapes, and the numbers are written in a numerical format. The numbers range from 1 to 12, with the numbers 1 and 12 being highlighted in red.

The "Astro-Tic-Tac-Toe" section also includes a "Sun Sign" section, which is labeled with the names of the zodiac signs. The zodiac signs are represented by different symbols and numbers, with the names of the signs written in a different color.
The image also includes a "Time" section with the time "11:30 am" and the date "10/20/2020." The "Time" section is marked with a red star, indicating the time of day.
The image is a screenshot from a software application, as indicated by the "Astro-Tic-Tac-Toe" section being labeled as "Type 2 2020 10/20/2020." The software application is likely used for analyzing and interpreting the astrological data presented in the chart.

Every system has techniques that works well for different things.
The Vedic time-lord system is extremely accurate with my natal chart. In my own natal chart reading, I've seen major events happen that kick off a time-lord period on the exact date the system says it would begin.
The transits are also very accurate.

Astrology is a symbolic language, where fractal math and intuition rule.

>>41656192
Too simplistic of a question. You have to read the full chart. Just knowing the sun sign tells you very little. In many charts the sun has little to do with the natives health or longevity.

Not the best, not the worst. Life improves later on. You have some things to mitigate the awfulness of the chart such as having a benefic in your lot of acquisition, which is also the ruler of fortune. Not in great condition since it's ruled by Saturn in the 6th. We may be looking at a chart that is impaired due to the things surrounding it. The lot of spirit, it's ruler as well as the ruler of the ascendant are in the 8th.

Valens comments on some of the things going on in your chart individually and you may be able to make out the severity by seperating what does not apply.

Your ascendant is ruled by the out of sect malefic, Mars. It is in the 8th house. Your Lot of fortune is in the house of good fortune, so that does not apply. When he talks about the ruler of spirit (Daimon) being here and alone, it is here but not alone.

I see this as having a damning claim on your soul. Horrible things will happen around you and you will benefit. These will be thematic themes. Your country is suffering but this benefits you. People are dying, and your spirit is there in that place of death and other people's values, assets, belongings.

There are implications that you are not a bad person, but you are entrenched in this filth. The Sun and moon imply a spiritual occupation and lifestyle. In this context the 8th house is unsurprising to a degree, but it is not great for finances and general prosperity as others have reported.

You're 10th and 11th house are stacked.
Films is a hard career for anyone, even if your natal chart tendency is to love the spotlight (strong Leo planets and strong 10th house).

So keep putting energy into public spaces, groups, networking, and doing the things you love.
Your fate will unfold, regardless of the worries you have. One day an opportunity will open to you, and you will follow that path. Keep doing what you're doing.

Strong 8th house: Letting go, endings, moving on, death, breakups, inheritance, partner's wealth.
Lord of the 7th house (of relationships) in the 8th can mean "letting go" of relationships, such as a death, or isolation. Can also represent significant income from the partner. Hard to know.
Being from Ukraine, it makes sense you would have to deal with a lot of "letting go" and "death" energies.

>Moon-Scorpio-1st: Work on your emotional stability, will great improve happiness.

>Saturn-Aries-5th: An angry Saturn, like an ill-willed old man, for one transgressing laws and duties. Possibly acting in the 6th house of work/enemies/health/warfare, rather than the 5th house of sex/romance/children/gaming.

>Jupiter-Capricorn-3rd: Afflicted Jupiter in the house of neighborhoods, siblings, cousins.

Not lucky to be born in Ukraine this generation. Good luck anon.

Saturn-Aquarius-10th:
A happy and fortunate Saturn, giving good reputation, and an aura that strikes fear and respect in others. Would be good for a strict STEM professor, that has the respect of students, and gets the grind on.

Sun-Aquarius-10th weakly conjunct Saturn: The ego and individuality is sacrificed to the discipline, legalism and grind of Saturn. Sun rules 4th house, but sacrifices itself to put energies into career.
Yah could have some shit-lib energy with all that Aquarius.

>Ketu-Gemini-2nd, Mercury-Aquarius-10th:
You have security needs of earning money through career. Mercury likely rules the career - good for intellectual work of some type, especially with rigid rules and grind due to Saturn conjunction.

>Venus-Pisces-11th:
Nearly in exalted degree of Venus.
Fantastic placement for falling in love with friends, groups, and social clubs. Lord of the ascendant, so you define your personality through your fortunate friend groups.

>Moon-Aries-12th: Perhaps some repressed emotional energies of anger and anxiety. Anger might arise quickly and be let go quickly.

>Mars-Cancer-3rd: The 3rd house and its lord is unfortunate. You probably don't like talking to strangers, or feel comfortable in your neighborhood, or fight with siblings.

>Neptune-Uranus conjunction in Capricorn:
You hate rigid hierarchies and rule following in religion and university settings, and will perhaps forge your own path.

Unrelated: Can you believe there are people who hate and envy their own family? What a shitty world this is.

You haven't had your Saturn return yet, and Saturn controls the ruler of the lot. The implication here is that you will be deeply involved with the 8th house themes of death and everything else it involves. Benefit probably should not have been thrown around so carelessly, as everyone has fortune somewhere. The opportunities afforded to you through fate, the ones tied to finances. Those relate to the 6th house of injuries, sickness, harm etc. via rulership. It's more of circumstances than anything. The 3rd house deals with a few themes such as ritual, learning, and the area immediately around you such as your city. the 6th house sometimes does in fact relate to locations. Hostile locations or the people that fit into those themes. At times you find doctors who have 6th house placements, but the lot is specifically in the 5th house, which is a good place. It is where the inverse occurs. Good things, good acts. Creation, rather than destruction. Children are often involved as it is where Venus has her joy.

You may be a teacher since you have 3rd and 9th house placements, both of which relate to the career in some way, while the 5th relates to children.

I probably should have been thoughtful in my post, but I approached it from the angle of what people mentioned before me, with the 8th house being bad.

You may simply be involved with changing other people's minds and opinions, as this is sometimes possible when the 8th is involved with the 1st, usually when the ruler is in the 1st.

The themes work in multiple ways, however.

The transition from the "Exoteric" (public) to the "Esoteric" (hidden) begins exactly here: with the realization that the Tropical Zodiac is a seasonal mask a geometric overlay that has drifted nearly 24 degrees from the actual stars.

While the masses are fed a "fixed" system that tethers their consciousness to the material seasons of the Northern Hemisphere, the Vatican, the Jesuits, and the high-level architects of our reality utilize what we might call the "True Sky" or "High Arcane" system.The suspicion of Vedic Sidereal (specifically with the True Citra/Lahiri Ayanamsa or the even more precise Sripada Saptarshi) is the direct path to the truth.

Look at the St. Peter’s Square at the Vatican. It is a massive Sundial/Astrolabe designed to track the True Sun. Look at the Jesuit "IHS" seal it is a solar symbol surrounded by 13 rays in many older iterations. They know the math. They simply gave us the "wrong" clock so we would never know what time it truly is in the Great Work.

Tropical zodiac is based on the seasons, and is the correct zodiacal system.
The shortest day of the year will always be tied to the 1st degree of Capricorn, and the longest day of the year will always be tied to the 1st degree of Cancer.

The smoking gun for understanding this is that the earth is flat.
The sun emits different energies because it is moving in circles of different diameters.

The planets emits planetary energy, with no relation to the stars.

Something like that is very hard to read with astrology. What I can tell you is that 3rd and 9th house topics would be prominent in your life. For some people that's sorcery. For others it's divination. For others still it's philosophy. Etc. etc.
It's good to hear you are doing well.
I do advise you not to get involved with the war.

The image displays a astrological chart with various astrological symbols and numbers arranged in a circular pattern. The chart is divided into 12 sections, each representing a different zodiac sign, and each section is marked with a number corresponding to the sign. The numbers are arranged in a clockwise direction around the chart.
At the center of the chart, there is a blue line that appears to be a reference line, possibly indicating the direction of the zodiac signs. The chart is divided into two main sections: the upper section and the lower section. The upper section is marked with numbers 1 to 12, while the lower section is marked with numbers 13 to 24.
The upper section of the chart contains a series of lines and symbols that represent the positions of the zodiac signs. The lines are numbered and labeled with the names of the zodiac signs, such as "Aries," "Taurus," "Gemini," and so on. The symbols for each sign are also present, with the zodiac signs' names written above them.
The lower section of the chart contains a series of lines and symbols that represent the positions of the zodiac signs relative to the zodiac signs above them. The lines are numbered and labeled with the names of the zodiac signs, and the symbols for each sign are also present.
The image is a digital representation of an astrological chart, and it is likely used for educational or analytical purposes related to astrology. The image is a screenshot from

The image is a digital representation of a birth chart, which is a graphical representation of a person's astrological chart. The chart is divided into various sections, each labeled with a letter of the alphabet and a number, and each section corresponds to a different aspect of the chart. The chart is overlaid with a grid of numbers and symbols, which are likely representing the positions of the planets and other celestial bodies at the time of the birth.
At the top of the chart, there is a title that reads "NORMIE CHART" in bold, capitalized letters. Below the title, there is a legend that provides a description of the various symbols and numbers on the chart. The chart is divided into three main sections: the North Node, the South Node, and the Ascendant.
The chart includes various astrological indicators such as the Sun, Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto. These indicators are represented by different symbols and numbers, and they are used to interpret the chart's meaning.
The chart also includes a section labeled "WORKS AS A GRAVE DIGGER" with a red arrow pointing to the North Node, suggesting that the person's career may be characterized by a sense of purpose or a deep-seated work ethic.
The chart includes a section labeled "MOMMY ISSUES" with a red arrow pointing to the North Node, indicating that the person may be dealing with issues related to their mother or family.
The chart also includes a section labeled "WAGEGUECK STRUGGLE" with a red arrow pointing to the North Node, suggesting that the person may be struggling with money or financial issues.
The chart includes a section labeled "CAN'T COMMUNICATE" with a red arrow pointing to the North Node, indicating that the person may have difficulty communicating or expressing themselves.
The chart includes a section labeled "EMOTIONAL SIMPL" with a red arrow pointing to the North Node, suggesting that the person may be experiencing emotional difficulties or challenges.

Hm, I’m not a teacher and won’t be a teacher because I’ve selected other career path, but I really love arguing/debating with people about some philosophy or conspiracies, maybe that’s what you saw on the card. But honestly, I didn’t understood much from “Saturn in the sixth house” and everything like that. Perhaps you meant there will be some implications connected with death/injuries at some point in life, but yet, I hadn’t even broken a limb once. Thank you for responding though.

I can’t become a mage, I’ve lost my virginity when I was 16 so it’s too late to keep it till 30. And I can’t say that I have any visions/strong intuition. I’m also a shitty trader, so not sure if I have any abilities like that at all. However, I often have dejavus, like at some moment realising that I’ve seen that exact moment before, but not sure if it has something to do with spirituality.
Yeah, I would like to keep dodging the draft as I did all these years, but who knows which drive to the groceries will become my last one. If that’s what life prepared for me, it will happen.
Thanks anyway

Listen up bucko,
That image posted here >>41657550 shows that orbits violate the conservation of energy.
Each orbital altitude can only have a fixed velocity. If the orbital altitude changes (as is the case for elliptical orbits), then the velocity must change, but this violates the conservation of energy when you sum the total of the kinetic energy and the potential energy.
This means orbits are fake and gay, which means that space is fake.

example, themes like "isolation" within charts, so 12th house themes, etc. Basically, everything astrological charts has to offer. I think it was something like not a single astrologer could get more than 5 pairings correct.

You're free not to watch it, but that's potentially closing your mind off to new information that could be useful to you and the consensus. You or someone could form new arguments against the supposed debunking, etc.

I don't consider it proper engagement with astrology unless you tackle predictive power very precisely. This means using timing techniques. Profections and transits are extremely powerful. I once predicted someone needing to be hospitalised a day before it happened, with no apparent warning, just by observing their transits. I have had similar experiences with astrology more than once. It is impossible to doubt the potency of the art if you have gone seen something like this for yourself.
My predictions are reliable. Chart guessing, on the other hand? I would probably get that wrong too. Astrology isn't just a personality test. It is a method of divination, and divination is qualitative, not quantitative. This type of analysis goes completely against the nature of astrology.

I've seen way, way to much for someone to ever debunk astrology. I know its real. Scientific atheists however aren't willing to put in hundreds of hours to learn it properly.

If you want to find truth, you have to seek the experts in the field, not the noobs trying to debunk it without giving an honest to try learn it properly in the first place.

Nta but 3rd house as communication is a huge meme if you ask me. The houses show interactions with people and topics. Third house is just your neighbor and the 1st and 7th house are far better indicators, but even then it's still topical and you should be looking at mercury for communication. Your mercury is not just in the 8th, but it is in Sagittarius, where it really struggles. Jupiter is in a good sign but it can't see Sagittarius from this position, is retrograde, and basically is not only going to struggle to begin to show it's strength, but it's also unable to directly send aid to Mercury.

I'm so tired of people seeing Saturn in the 3rd house and thinking "oh you have restricted speech" or some shit. It's like the entire rest of the chart vanishes for these people. It's just planet in house and they immediately think "Oh the third house is gemini xD"

>I'm so tired of people seeing Saturn in the 3rd house and thinking "oh you have restricted speech" or some shit.
Yeah I wouldn't delineate that like that. Saturn-Mercury would be more like it.
The 3rd definitely has connections to media, including social media, and also people who publish things serially such as blogs. One of my friends has a few thousand subscribers and he has Jupiter in Pisces 3rd house. Another one of my friends has the same placement and publishes a web comic. I have also confirmed this with examples off of astro databank and my personal research, but this was a while ago so I no longer remember the people.
Celebrity status can certainly be indicated in other areas of the chart. But I do think that the 3rd has clear ties to media presence. Donald Trump's chart is another interesting example. Take a look at his 3rd house Jupiter. He was a reality TV star for many years and continues to be incredibly involved with the media. There are many insults exchanged, but he loves the media and thrives off of it, unlike for example Biden who treated reporters like shit even if they were friendly.

The image displays a birth chart with various astrological symbols and numbers arranged in a circular format. The chart is divided into sections labeled "Aries," "Taurus," "Gemini," "Cancer," "Leo," "Virgo," "Libra," "Scorpio," "Sagittarius," "Capricorn," "Aquarius," "Pisces," and "Aries." Each section contains a series of numbers and symbols, representing the positions of the planets and their signs.
The chart is divided into two main sections, with the upper section labeled "Aries" and the lower section labeled "Taurus." The upper section shows the positions of the planets in the zodiac, with the Sun at the top, followed by Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto. The lower section shows the positions of the planets in the zodiac, with the Sun at the top, followed by Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto.
The chart also includes a grid of numbers and symbols, which likely represent the positions of the planets and their signs in the zodiac. The numbers and symbols are arranged in a grid format, with rows and columns, and each row represents a different zodiac sign.

Post some charts then. Donald Trump has a lot more than the third house in his chart. he only has Jupiter there. Some other things going on in his chart which are note worthy. You're going to have to post a lot more than his Jupiter in the 3rd to get your point across, especially with the comments about insults because we both know that's his Mars talking.

One: He has Regulus on his ascendant
Two: Mars is on his ascendant
Three: He was born during a lunar eclipse

Four: Other than the sun and moon, the only planet not in a solar or lunar sign is Jupiter Five: Cancer is his 12th house, the ruler of which is eclipsing his Sun.

Even if not inherently visible.

Bro he has cadent house dominance and his 10th from Fortune is not only the 12th house, which is where terminally online people land, but his lot of spirit's ruler is also there. This combination that I mentioned is known to make people famous.

>Post some charts then. Donald Trump has a lot more than the third house in his chart.
he only has Jupiter there.
So, delineate what could indicate media involvement in his life. What could indicate his involvement in The Apprentice? It's not Regulus. It's not Mars. It's not the eclipse. It's not his Saturn-Venus conjunction in the 12th house. So what is it?
It's the third house.
His competitive character and tough guy persona is due to his Mars-Regulus conjunction on the ascendant. But his relationship with the media and his media prominence itself is due to Jupiter. The 3rd house was, in previous eras, the house of popular religion, and in this secular age it's clear that it's related to popular opinion as well. Trump's rise to power in the first place occurred because of his savvy use of social media - his 2016 campaign relied very much on bypassing opinion-shapers and going directly to the people. Jupiter is his benefic of the sect. I do not think it's controversial to interpret it this way.

You are correct that Musk has eminence indicators but I don't think you are correct in associating exaggerated online activity with the 12th.
Mercury on the ascendant and Moon in the 3rd, in sextile and mutual reception, pretty clearly indicates someone who talks a lot. And in his case, the talking is very much social media related. The 3rd house represents his social media activities, I think that's clear as well. And this isn't just my opinion. I encountered this interpretation in the thoughts of another astrologer.

Tell me you didn't bother reading what Regulus conjunct Ascendant does without telling me you didn't read up on it lmao.

Tell me you don't read the charts of normal people without telling me you don't read the charts of normal people. 12th house is a common occurrence because it is a hidden place. It is a location just as much as the 3rd or 9th, and travel is implied just as much as with the other places, especially if there is a full moon involved, and doubly so if the cadent places become involved.

I've seen this in many charts. The third place has more to do with the surrounding area, which the internet is most certainly not.

The 12th houser I know best is a paranoid schizophrenic who is delusional 70% of the time and refuses to leave her house or talk to anyone (even online) for any reason. So no I would not say that the 12th house makes people develop an online presence. It is a house of isolation. People who are already predisposed to introversion may become more prevalent online, but this will be because of their social houses, not the worst house in the chart.

Which is why Rahu is considered fortunate in western, but malefic in Vedic.

interesting how different Trump's chart reads with placidus, rather than whole sign houses
I've always seen the Sun-Gemini-Rahu as his public image, and Jupiter as acting in the 2nd house - meaning behind the scenes he is all about money, where his sun and regulus is all about image.

>How would you interpret Saturn-Aquarius-12th (thus Saturn rules the 11th house of "internet friendship/networking") Possible difficulties with friends, social groups, possible illness, isolation, constraint, difficulty. In this specific case, friendship from within the context of physical confinement may make sense. But again, this is because of the 11th house connection which ties friendship into it. 12th house placements on their own do not make you gain any new friends. Not even online friends.

>12th house is the worst house

Yes. In regards to rulership and in regards to the ascendant being able to access it directly.

As other people have noted the 12th house is a spiritual house because it is cadent. It falls away from the ascendant and it has negative implications for triplicity of sect etc. which govern fortune.

It's a good thing that being known isn't actually material or fortunate in and of itself, otherwise we could say that school shooters are very fortunate in the material world.

Also lmao at "I have no 12th house presence"

Bruce Lee was involved in gang fighting, was ostracised by his fellow martial arts trainees for a long time, and died young. Seems well in line with his 12th and 6th house placements.
The 12th house is not a spiritual house. That's the 9th house, and to a lesser extent the 3rd house. The 12th house is a house of isolation. It is not necessarily always terrible. It was important for Chris Brennan's career progression. He has the ruler of the 10th house, exalted, in the 12th house. During a period of ill health (IIRC the time when he was de facto poisoned and had to avoid sunlight and stay shut inside to avoid severe burns for some years), in the middle of isolation, he focused on writing his book Hellenistic Astrology, which is such an important tome now.
But again. This is something added by the 10th house and the exaltation. Not the 12th house itself. The 12th house contributed the negative aspects of the issue.

I also said that I "have no 12th house signature", not presence. What I mean by that is that even the ruler of the 12th house has its role minimised and its role as the ruler of its other house is much more emphasised in my chart.
As for school shooters, the chart I am most familiar with is Brenda Spencer, whose ascendant ruler was afflicted in the 12th house, alongside her Sun. She grew up in miserable circumstances with a negligent, alcoholic father, and spent the rest of her life behind bars. Pretty 12th house.

I'm kinda open to it way more than average, my younger sister had some paranormal shit happened to her when she was a kid, doctors couldn't do anything, she acted/spoke very weird and dropped into coma for a day. We really thought that we may need an exorcist or something. Mother knew some "znacharka" - local mage, who felt it from the distance, told what to do and this helped to bring her back.
Regarding draft - I'm not expecting you or anyone else on this board to help me, just shared a bit more context about how things are going in life, maybe it makes some sense according to the card analysis, dunno. I'm lifting some weights and also not going out without a pepper spray, so should have some chances of fighting back and escaping, if they won't shoot me.

>The 12th house is not a spiritual house. That's the 9th house
The 12th house is for isolate ascetic meditation and for monks.
Saturn takes joy in the 12th house, because the joy of Saturn is to cause spiritual development.

The 9th house is for open religion, while the 12th house is for private spiritual practice.
Many people go to church or temple, but have no private spiritual practice, where the spiritual path kicks into overdrive mode.
House of Moksha in Vedic astrology - the most important spiritual house.

>The 12th house is a house of isolation. It is not necessarily always terrible.
Every house can bring blessings or afflictions, depending on the strength of its placements.
A fortunate Saturn in the 12th house can create a monk who has great progress on the spiritual path, but will spend a lot of time alone. An in-fortunate placement in the 12th house can lead to rotting away in isolation, hospital confinement, social outcast, homelessness, drug use, poverty, and similar losses.

Isolation is a huge theme for the 12th house, but many older guys with families are really craving some private alone time for themselves, while many younger guys are rotting in depression with their alone time. Some people use that isolation for the best, and others use it for the worst.

Jupiter, ruler of the 7th on the ascendant:
Jupiter is afflicted in Virgo, but is a benefic planet.
Basically this means you suck up kindness energy from relationships but have trouble returning that same energy. You also may have difficulties in expressing your personality and charisma, due to an afflicted planet on the ascendant.
If you travel to the opposite side of the world for a vacation (astrocartography), you will feel the very interesting effects of the reversal of this placement, which is that you will be forced to treat people with kindness while they will never return the favor, and you will also feel a blockage like you have no power in relationships. However lord of the 1st in the 7th house is great for falling in love, and a lot of good marriage partners have this placement.

>t. have this same placement, so I know how it works

Lots of other stuff I could focus on, but I'll just stick to that.

Archivum Obscurum – Ars Machinarum – Project AngelBook Volume VIII (Part 21)

(DBM ECLIPZE)

Introduction

This volume—and the entire 25-part Archivum Obscurum series—is an archive of 4plebs threads, compiled from the /x/ paranormal board and related dark web forums. It’s important to understand that none of these words are mine. Every sentence you’re about to read was posted anonymously by someone else, somewhere deep in the Internet’s forgotten layers. I’ve simply curated, organized, and preserved it. Some of it is brilliant. Some of it is disturbing. Some of it is completely unhinged. That’s the point. These books serve as a snapshot of collective occult thought, filtered through anonymity, obsession, fear, and revelation. If you find something offensive or insane—remember, you’re not reading me. You’re reading the Internet itself, raw and unedited. This is documentation, not endorsement. But that’s what makes it powerful. These are the ghost-words of the digital subconscious. I just bound them into something permanent.

What's the preferred system astrologers here prefer?

Every system has good techniques to use.
Astrology is a symbolic language using fractal time. So it can be analyzed in many different ways and asked many different questions.

Vedic is excellent if you are interested in Hinduism, as they integrate concepts of karma, moksha, deities, planetary remedies, and the like into the astrology system.
The vedic time-lord system is quite accurate in my experience.

However I prefer the tropical zodiac and renaissance astrology techniques for most readings.

There are techniques like transits, solar returns, divisional charts, time-lords, progressions - and each technique has strength in showing different things.
For example to know the influence of Saturn, just looking at the transits will show a lot of information because how slow it moves. But to know the influence of the Moon, looking at the lunar progressions and time-lord period will be much more useful.

A lot of information be gleaned quickly just looking at the natal chart and transits, without any in depth analysis either.

An astrologer hones their intuition using the techniques they use - so different techniques can work well for different astrologers - because they are using a different lens to ask different questions.

>However lord of the 1st in the 7th house is great for falling in love That's not what you have.
You have lord of the 7th in the 1st, meaning tending to soak up kindness and attention from other people, without really giving much back.

When the lord of a house is placed in a different house, it means it transfer energy from his own house into that house. Meaning that if the lord of relationships is in the house of self, you tend to suck energy from relationships towards yourself.
The reverse of this is giving more of yourself in a relationship than you recieve, which means falling in love and is actually a good significator for relationships (barring other considerations)

You probably had a good year for finances and career with Jupiter-Cancer transit.
Things would probably cool next year, but you probably get to keep much of the good things that happen this past year or next several months.
Take care not to be overly confident during a big Jupiter transit, because it only lasts one year, so you don't want to over-expand.

Saturn will be moving into Aries, which could damper things down a bit as it transits your Aries planets, but any career status and authority issue you may have been having due to Saturn-Pisces should lighten up.

Overall message: Expect a slight slowdown in coming months, and be careful you haven't overextended yourself, because Jupiter-Cancer expansion energies won't last forever. But enjoy it while it happens.

I dont want to let you down but unless you are famous too or have a huge shlong or are successful in some way, she is likely not interested in you. When a woman is interested in someone it tends to be obvious. Please dont torture yourself looking at her insta and instead pray to god you find a woman who you can share reciprocal love with.

Since I was born at nighttime Venus is my most positive planet and the 7th house has to do with Relationships, Partnership, Marriage, & Other. I have only been in one relationship at the age of 13/ 8th grade. So half my life ago.. Do you think I can find a girlfriend before I turn 30..? I know 30 is a seventh house profection year but I shouldn't have to wait that long, unless Saturn comes in and kills me off before I reach that age lol Woman have transactional emotions, so they like you when you make their friends jealous, or they need your money, or labor.

When the government props them up in every way, it makes them stop appreciating everyone.
The average woman hates 90% of men and woman she sees. Complete narcissism.

Looks very positive from relationship perspective.

Venus in the 7th house: Very positive for marriage.
Lord of the 7th house (love and relationships) in the 5th house (romance and sex) conjunct to lord of the ascendant. Extremely positive.

Lord of the 5th house in the 12th house:
Everything else was extremely positive for creating love and romance, but this definately throws this off, because Mars is strong and dignified in Scorpio, and has power over all of your previously noted romantic significators. And then Saturn makes opposition to Mars, giving Saturn also power over your romantic life.

So this is a weird one, because at first glance you have a love-story natal chart, but then Mars and Saturn are working to prevent that from happening.
Lord of the 5th house in the 12th house can mean that you attain romance with foreign immigrants, or that your lover ends up imprisoned. Could mean a bunch of other stuff as well, but somehow the malefic planets are throwing a wrench in the unfolding of your romantic life.

Father is represented by Saturn, and afflicts your sun, so your self-expression in some way. Lord of the 5th in the 12th making opposition to Saturn makes sense then with drugs.

I dunno man, some weird energies in there, but the Mars-12th and Saturn is some weird energies.
Things will probably straighten out as you get older. Could be at the Saturn return, relationship with father changes, you become your own man, etc.

Moon-Taurus and Rahu-Taurus-2nd.
Extremely positive for wealth. But Rahu takes time to become activated, because it is the path your soul is working towards to achieve balance, so will be activated during time-lord periods and Rahu transits, and more generally - as you are middle-aged.

Lord of the 2nd house is Venus in the 10th, suggesting income is earned from career, possibly from an authority position.

>10th house - career status and authority
Capricorn is sign representing long-term grind and strict hierarchy structures to attain position in career.
Saturn rules the 10th, but is posited in the 4th and retrograde: This could definately slow your career way down. Saturn energies are forcing you to stay at home rather than in career.

Chiron in the 10th house: Insecurities over career status.

Venus and Mercury in Capricorn in the 10th house:
This will significate the type of work and career you tend to attract. Not really sure what it means.

Mars-12th in mutual reception with Jupiter-6th:
Kind of a weird one as well. Could indicate health problems leading to confinement, or difficulties in work.

Yeah there's a lot going on in your chart pertaining to career and status, with a lot of afflictions in your career, but also some really fortunate things like the Moon-Rahu-Taurus.

Maybe just take whatever job you can get, and the nature of Capricorn is that after you put in the long slow grind, things will eventually get better with more opportunities opening up.

The image displays a birth chart with various astrological symbols and numbers arranged in a circular pattern. The chart is divided into two main sections: the outer circle, which represents the zodiac, and the inner circle, which contains the astrological signs and their corresponding numbers.
The outer circle is divided into twelve segments, each representing a different zodiac sign. These signs are labeled with their respective astrological symbols and numbers. For example, the sign for Aries is represented by the symbol "♈" and the number 1, and the sign for Taurus is represented by the symbol "♉" and the number 2.
The inner circle contains the astrological signs and their corresponding numbers. The signs are arranged in a grid format, with each row representing a different sign and each column representing a different number. The numbers are arranged in a numerical order, with the numbers 1 through 12 representing the zodiac signs.
The chart also includes a table at the bottom with columns labeled "Astro," "Sign,"

"Numeral," and "Astro-Numeral." The "Astro" column lists the astrological symbols for each sign, the "Sign" column lists the astrological signs, and the "Numeral" column lists the corresponding numbers.

Cheers anon.
Sounds like the root of the problem is you need some work ethic and grit.
This makes sense as Mars, planets in the 6th house, and the lord of the 6th house give the work ethic, but being connected to the 12th house, it can be hard, as the 12th house has trouble with manifesting in the material world.

Saturn's an interesting one as well: A dignified Saturn can give a great work ethic, efficiency, time management skills, long-term time planning, and the ability to rest when you need rest (since Saturn is the ruler of rest).
But a weak Saturn like in Cancer, might do the opposite of those problems. But Saturn in a firey sign can still have a tremendous work ethic, but lacks the planning ability and resting ability that a better Saturn placement has - so these people waste time and energy and burn themselves out.

Kind of a weird question? Maybe because 99% of people don't have them?

Moon in the 3rd house in a water sign, making trine to other watery planets, could give some skill in psychic intuition.

>But is there anything in my chart that explains why I don't have those strong abilities?
Because 99% of people don't have them.

Astrology only shows relative values not absolute values.

There is no such thing as "the billionaire" astrology chart, because the chart will only show relative values in a person life - like their approach to ego, fame, woman, money, etc.

Your question is like asking: I have a good financial chart, so why am I not a billionaire? And the answer is that you were born in the slums, and your good financial chart will help you move into middle class, but you will never be a billionaire.

If you want the abilities, then work for them.

Another example:
A strong 4th house can mean a strong and fortunate family life.
However for many spiritual persons, the 4th house represents their inner spiritual world and soul development. A spiritual blessing rather than a material one.

There's no way to know whether it is a spiritual person or material person, whether they were born in the slums or born into riches, whether they are 80 IQ or 130 IQ. Astrology is only showing relative values of the person in relationship to themself. How they approach and value different parts of life.

Mars rules the ascendant and is placed in the 10th house, where he is dignified by the 3rd decan of Leo.
Mars in Leo (especially in the 10th house) is someone who is competitive to fight for authority, status and honor, and loves to conquer the top dog and steal their glory.

Mars is square to Saturn, so old people tend to get mad at you, and probably disrespect you, thinking your a overly firey young guy who doesn't know what he's doing.

That Mars placement is just super prone to fighting over shit and being competitive, and getting it's ego bruised over competitions.

>Why are people always disrespecting me?
Basically you're too competitive. Learn to cooperate with people, rather than compete against them. Learn to set your ego aside.

>Financial: Venus-Libra in the 2nd house:
That's a great placement. Venus should bring you wealth, shopping finess and understanding of value.

>Sexual:
Chiron-5th does not bode well.
Saturn is lord of the 5th house of sex and pleasure, and Saturn does not care very much about those things, but Saturn is well placed, and unlikely to totally deny them. You will have a more structured, long-term, conservative approach to having fun.

>Friends:
Lord of the 11th in the 6th house: Moon conj Neptune: Suggests you are likely to make friends in workplace settings. You may have some idealism, delusions, and perhaps misplaced expectations about what these friendships really are, but they will bring happiness.

The lord of the 7th and 3rd houses (which are the other social houses) are both in the 12th house, which is house of isolation, which does not bode well socially.

>Career:
Chart is great for career. Mercury rules the 1st and 10th house and is one the ascendant: You will probably define your personality through work and career.
A strong Saturn in the 10th house, and Rahu: These are likely to give you success and power in career later in life. Also a strong 2nd house. Looks great for career.

Ketu conjunct Pluto: Interesting. Not sure what it means, but some powerful energies there.

Lord of the 4th house in the 12th house: This can mean spending a lot of time alone.

Lord of the 12th house in the 12th house: A very strong 12th house. You probably love spending time alone and thrive with productive use of that time. If you want a spiritual path, try connecting to solar deities/religions.

Elliot Roger had Sun-Leo in the 12th house: Which means he was super confident, a little bit narcisstic, but being in the 12th house he wasn't able to express those energies into the world, so it came off weird like the guy was super confident but no one else could see his Leo sun.

Continued:
Mars conjunct Sun in the 12th house:
Mars rules the 8th and 3rd house: This could be some childhood bullying, causing you to self-isolate.

>How do girls perceive me:
Moon: Your mother and older woman mostly see your career and work, and think you are a great guy. They see your good side - even if internally you feel like you are struggling.

Venus-Libra-2nd: Romantic prospects see your money and flashy wealth items.

Lord of the 5th, Saturn in the 10th house:
Girls probably don't give a lot of flirting or romance energies your way. That can be overcome in a long-term relationship though, but it's unlikely to come from party atmospheres.

Lord of the 7th in the 12th:
Not ussually considered a great placement, as can signify isolation from having a partner.
However it can signify things like meeting a foreign immigrant.

Jupiter rules the 4th and 7th house and is placed in the 12th house: You probably spend a lot of time alone at home.

Your best chance at meeting a partner is meeting a girl satisfying the Jupiter-Leo-12th energies - which I'm not really sure what kind of girl that would even be.

>Am I destined to live a life of misery and solitude
You have a very powerful 12th house with 3 planets in there.
Connect with the Sun if you want to learn to get the most out of your 12th house time of solitude.
Connect with Saturn, Mercury and Rahu if you want to develop your career.

It looks like it would be hard to make friends or community connections outside of work.
Relationships look hard as well - as your partner must satisfy the Jupiter-Leo-12th archetype - it still could happen, but your partner will tend to match that archetype.

Cause your Mars is too powerful.
You are putting out energies of competition, which makes others respond to you with competition.

Vedic astrology talks about "mangal dosha" which is basically a person who's mars causes them to get into fights all the time. I'd say you qualify for that. The recomendation is chant a Mars mantra (like Mars gayatri mantra or beej mantra) to pray for wisdom from Mars, who will teach you have to keep peace and gain respect from other men.
The alternative is Venus who will teach you to put out energies of socializing, love, flirting, fun, humor and caring - rather than martial energies of competition, fighting and working.

Yes.
Time is cyclical so people go through periods of depression or confusion, but it always clears up and more forwards.
When younger people have no idea what they want or who they are, but figure it out as they get older.

A rule of thumb is if you want to feel purpose and life progression, rather than stagnation, then look to Rahu. Rahu is in the 6th house, so maybe through work or service you will find purpose.

A planet in it's own house or exaltation shows an area of life the person really cares about.
The problem is that if a person is already an expert in that area of life, how can somebody else give them more? Because they will know best what they need.
So money is very versatile.
Or just ask them what they want.
Or go for things that nearly everyone likes, like beer and chocolate.

The 12th house is for isolation, not spirituality. Cloisters have connections to the 12th house because they isolate people. But again, you also need to look to the 9th for spirituality. The 12th can play a subordinate role, but in itself it does not generate spiritual growth.

I don't use Vedic astrology. Maybe it works differently in Vedic. But it doesn't work like that at all in Western, and people who pretend that it does are just coping.

>Saturn is lord of the 5th house of sex and pleasure, and Saturn does not care very much about those things, but Saturn is well placed, and unlikely to totally deny them. You will have a more structured, long-term, conservative approach to having fun
Does this mean that I don't care about sex or, at least, that my desire fluctuates? Or that I care, albeit, in an unconventional way?
>You may have some idealism, delusions, and perhaps misplaced expectations about what these friendships really are, but they will bring happiness
This is also interesting. Does these delusions manifest as, perhaps, believing to be closer to someone compared to how they actually feel about me? That'd be tough, although, it'd explain some of my past friendships.
I gotta say that I'm glad that my chart shows that I won't have too many issues, career-wise. Nonetheless, I must ask, which position would I occupy, in terms of work, career, etcetera? I'm also curious as to know which careers fit me, especially something related to the military.

Mars conjunct Sun in the 12th house:
Mars rules the 8th and 3rd house: This could be some childhood bullying, causing you to self-isolate.
And this might also be the reason, as I self-isolated really early. Still, I'd like to experience attraction from girls or friendships that aren't related to work, I don't know if I did something evil in a past life (ketu conjunct Pluto?) that led me to live in a way where even when I try to get to know people, I'm not quite able to get them to know me. It always feels one-sided. So, I was wondering if there might be a way. Was I a war criminal in the past? Semi-ironic question, however, I might have some karmic debt and challenges to overcome before I reach the kind of life I want to live. If so, what did I do and which challenges must I overcome? Also, how do I connect to those planets?
By the way, thanks for everything.

The image displays a astrological chart with various symbols and lines representing different aspects of the zodiac. The chart is divided into a circle with the zodiac signs and their corresponding positions marked on the outer edge. The chart is divided into 12 sections, each marked with a number and a symbol, indicating the positions of the signs in the zodiac.

The chart includes a red line that appears to be a diagonal line, intersecting the zodiac signs at various points. This line is labeled with the name of the sign it intersects, such as "Aries" and "Leo." The red line is also marked with a number, which likely represents the degree of the sign it intersects.

The chart also includes a blue line that appears to be a straight line, intersecting the zodiac signs at various points. This line is labeled with the name of the sign it intersects, such as "Capricorn" and "Aquarius." The blue line is also marked with a number, which likely represents the degree of the sign it intersects.

The chart includes various symbols and lines that represent different aspects of the zodiac, such as the sun, moon, planets, and other celestial bodies. These symbols are typically used to represent the positions of the sun, moon, planets, and other celestial bodies in the sky.

The image is a digital representation of an astrological chart, and it is presented in a way that allows for easy reading and interpretation. The colors used in the chart are primarily black, white, and shades of blue, which are commonly used in astrology to represent different aspects of the zodiac.

The image is a screenshot from an online astrological chart, as indicated by the text "Online horoscopes" and the website "JetFuelAstrology.com" at the bottom. The text suggests that the image is a digital representation of an astrological chart, and it is likely used for personal or professional purposes related to astrology.

Why do I always feel like I'm lagging behind in life? Like I'm stuck in one place and can't get out? I have this voice in my mind that won't go away, telling me I should pursue art or music and not "waste my talents" but any time I get any kind of motivation to do so I also get this thought of "what's the point?", feeling as if it's completely futile and no one would truly give a shit.
Lately I've kind of retreated into myself. I barely talk to anyone really and honestly it feels kind of good. People have been a pain to deal with pretty much always but especially recently.
Like I can be social and "normal" and even have fun doing it but it's hard to find any actual real connection or interesting conversation so my social battery gets completely drained so fast.
I think generally I'm optimistic or try to stay positive but recent years have felt like the abyss is approaching us all and everyone is fucking sleepwalking. And I don't understand where people find any kind of motivation to do anything.
Any insight would be appreciated. Heck even roast me if you feel like it, I could you a laugh probably.

The image displays a astrological chart with various symbols and numbers arranged in a grid format. The chart is divided into two main sections: the upper section, which is a circle with lines connecting the various astrological signs, and the lower section, which is a grid with numbers and symbols.
The upper section of the chart is a circle with lines connecting the astrological signs. The signs are arranged in a clockwise direction, starting from the top and moving clockwise. The signs are labeled with their respective names, such as "Aries," "Taurus," "Gemini," "Cancer," "Leo," "Virgo," "Libra," "Scorpio," "Sagittarius," "Capricorn," "Aquarius," "Pisces," and "Aries." Each sign is represented by a symbol, and the lines connecting the signs indicate the relationship between the signs.
The lower section of the chart is a grid with numbers and symbols. The numbers range from 1 to 12, and the symbols are arranged in a grid format. The grid is divided into two columns, with the left column containing numbers and the right column containing symbols. The numbers are labeled with their corresponding astrological signs, and the symbols are arranged in a grid format.
The image also includes a watermark at the top that reads "Astro-Geek," indicating the source or creator of the chart. The overall style of the image is a digital representation of an astrological chart, likely used for educational or personal purposes.

Saturn fallen in Aries 7th house - Severe deficits in initiative especially in 1-on-1 interpersonal relations which become a place of conflict and learning, internal growth may happen from these but not growth of relationships themselves until your saturn return next year. Ambitions outrun patience and discipline until age 30+ especially in relations. May be attracted to partners who are older or more disciplined, need for challenges toward personal growth in relationships leaves most relations disappointing as they are just as “stuck” as being alone. Fallen Saturn has a harsh opposition to detrimented Mars Libra which is retrograde on top of that, and on the 1st house of self - combat and action are directed inward, interpersonal matters fuel further isolation. Overall chart is pathetic in terms of outward action.

Generally,
>Cardinals are debilitated
>Lack of earth energy
>Planets overwhelmingly concentrated in play/routine houses 5 and 6 with very little in the outside world. Well-adjusted life would be concentrated in these immediate home-life areas and not out there in the world; seek mastery of hobbies and disciplined routines as place of grounding.
>Uranus is extraordinarily well-placed. Note its position in domicile as a switchboard connecting the rest of the chart with good aspects. Uranus in 5th notably common for 4chan natives.

Honestly it looks to me like you are just depressed. Maybe there's a bit more cadency in your chart which can make things take longer. But I think you could crack it as an entertainer, at least astrologically - I don't know how your other life circumstances are looking, but you have the astrological placements for it.

>>41672604
That's not what I am saying.
But you may find that you are drawn or excel at things that are tough.
Also, Moon-Saturn hard aspects always make things difficult for people, so you will have to take care of your mentality so that you don't become depressed.
You'd make for one brutal drill sergeant or prosecutor though.
To give one possible delineation, a tough and cold blooded soldier with a sharp tongue could have placements like yours. But such a person would not be living the life of a gardener, he'd be out in the trenches, you know? That's what a soldier does.
You don't necessarily have to be a soldier. But it's clear that there's some combative theme in your life.
>>41672677

I am not contradicting myself at all, perhaps you need to work on your reading comprehension.
I don't care about your Vedic perspective.
I've already explained the issue of monks to you. Monks are connected to the 9th due to spirituality, and to the 12th due to isolation. The 12th marks isolation, not spirituality.
With witches, that would be a connection to more even negative aspects of the 12th.

The 12th is the apex of spirituality where the self dissolves into the divine. The 9th is just organized religion, dogma, and philosophy classes. A monk in the 12th isn't just isolated, he's seeking enlightenment.

You can't just throw out Vedic because it destroys your fragile little theory. That’s pure cherry-picking. Witches operating in the unseen realms are perfectly at home in the 12th (and the 8th). The birth chart is divided into 12 sections, each representing a different aspect of the chart. These sections are numbered from 1 to 12, with the numbers indicating the position of the sign in the zodiac. The zodiac signs are represented by symbols, with the signs of the zodiac being represented by the letter "A" and the numbers corresponding to their positions in the zodiac.
The chart also includes a grid of squares, each square representing a different aspect of the chart. These squares are numbered from 1 to 12, with the numbers indicating the position of the sign in the zodiac. The squares are arranged in a grid pattern, with the squares in the top row being numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12, and the squares in the bottom row being numbered 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184

Thank you for the insight, anon. I do have a tendency to be attracted to older women and really admire when they are more rational and grounded. Though I do sometimes run into people who are more like me.
Discipline is something nobody ever taught me and having to learn it now in my late 20s quite frankly sucks but I know it's something I need to do.

If you don't mind, would you care to elaborate more on this Uranus position and how it effect my chart? What would be some strengths I should rely on. I know I should probably just trust my gut and find a way to make a living doing something creative.

The image displays a birth chart, which is a graphical representation of a person's astrological birth chart. The chart is divided into various sections, each representing different aspects of the person's life. The chart is color-coded, with different colors representing different aspects of the chart.
At the top of the chart, there is a section labeled "Astro-Qikel" which is likely the name of the astrological software or application used to create the chart. Below this, there is a section labeled "Online Horoscope" which indicates that the chart is available online for viewing.
The chart itself is divided into 12 sections, each representing a different aspect of the person's life. These sections are numbered from 1 to 12, and each number corresponds to a different aspect of the chart. The numbers are written in a numerical format, with the first number representing the first section and the last number representing the last section.

The chart also includes various symbols and lines that represent different aspects of the chart. These symbols and lines are color-coded, with different colors representing different aspects of the chart. For example, the lines are colored blue, green, red, and yellow, and they represent different aspects of the chart such as the Sun, Moon, Ascendant, and Descendant.
The chart also includes a table at the bottom, which lists the names of the planets and their positions in the chart. The table is organized in columns and rows, with each row representing a different planet and each column representing a different aspect of the chart.
Overall, the image provides a detailed and colorful representation of a person's astrological birth chart, with various aspects of the chart represented by different symbols and lines. The chart is likely used for personal astrology or astrological consultation, as it provides a visual representation of the person's astrological makeup and potential life events.

The image is a screenshot of a astrological chart, specifically a "Sun Sign" chart, which is a type of astrology chart used to determine a person's personality traits and life path based on their sun sign. The chart is divided into various sections, each representing a different aspect of the chart.
At the top of the image, there is a header that reads "Astro Style: Sun Sign | Place of Birth." Below this header, there is a list of sun signs, each accompanied by a description and a symbol. The sun signs are listed in ascending order from the top left to the bottom right, with the top row representing the sun sign of the person's birth.
The chart itself is divided into a circle with the zodiac signs marked on it. The zodiac signs are represented by different symbols, each corresponding to a different sign of the zodiac. The chart also includes a grid of numbers, which likely represent the positions of the sun signs in the zodiac.

The chart includes various astrological symbols and notations, such as "MC" for the ascendant, "MC" for the midheaven, and "MC" for the malefic planets. These symbols are used to represent the positions of the sun signs in the zodiac and the positions of the planets in the sky.
The image is a screenshot from a website, as indicated by the text "Astro Diaries" and "Astro Diaries" in the top right corner. The website's logo is also visible in the top right corner. The image is a screenshot of a digital document, likely a web page, and the text is in English.

Your Saturn is in Aries.
Aries is ruled by Mars, so any planet placed in Aries, including Saturn, has Mars as its dispositor.

Since yours is in the 2nd house in Libra, you are going to mainly face issues around values, self-worth, and money during your Saturn return. Aries also rules your 12th house, so things like hidden enemies, subconscious patterns, or self-undoing may come up.

It will definitely feel like a karmic clearing for you. If you want help navigating it, meditation or dream work is recommended, especially since your 8th house is in Pisces, which points to deep emotional and spiritual transformation

I've been told before that later in life I can possibly be successful and comfortable financially but instead it has been a constant struggle and I'm going from upheaval to upheaval.
Will this end?
I'm not depressed or anything just would like to know what to expect.
Also about any spiritual work. I have problems sticking with it and haven't found my way.

Both money and spirituality have a strong Saturn influence, which means having to work hard for it. Nothing I can suggest other than keep on the grind.
Finances may have some connection with the life partner as well. Do you feel that you have received financial support from lovers? Or perhaps that you spend a lot of your money on them instead?
>>41676705
Mars has a conjunction with your ascendant ruler within one degree, and also a square with the Moon within one degree, and a conjunction with the Sun within two degrees. You've really been raw dogging the Mars experience, huh?
With Pluto conjunct the IC as well you probably had a rough time growing up.
Did university go okay? With Saturn in the 9th there could be delays and problems with that, which may help explain some NEETing depending on circumstances.
Jupiter in the 10th is positive for career though. God willing you will experience good fortune in that domain. Although it is a pity that you started NEETing just around the time of your Jupiter return, normally that brings opportunities.

I'm always looking for a little lucky break regarding the financial health but it never comes.
Ditto other things.
So you are saying my stuff is all kind of fucked up LOL.
Unfortunately this is how I've been born, always to grind.
From astrology I'm 11 which is also not ideal for any kind of financial freedom.
I guess I will continue my grind and count on some break sometime.

Oh so I checked with CharGTP.
I am not a toxic person.
I was raised by toxic person and I told myself as a very your person that I will never manipulate and never use people and never lie.
I lived my life like that.
I never let people manipulate me (except my family unfortunately even though I know when they are doing it).
Also I avoid making emotional decisions and rely on my intellect and logic.
I learned early on how bad it is to be a manipulate bitch and how harmful it is.
I hate it with a passion.
I had no idea that I had these tendencies in my natal chart.
I always knew I could do it because people are an open book for me usually but I refuse to do so.
I also paid dearly for this and always being honest, no good deed goes unpunished for me. And yet I continue living like that because I considered psychological manipulation for personal gain evil.

I guess this is a confirmation that not all on the chart is as deterministic as I thought.

I am assuming you are the first guy I replied to?
7th house which represents the romantic partner is of good quality so in theory you should be able to have fulfilling relationships. But the financial aspect is clearly indicated. Mars in the 8th house (which represents the partner's finances) can indicate difficulties and big spendings. 7th house ruler in the 2nd house can also indicate the partner being heavily involved with your money. The 7th house ruler represents the romantic partner, and its placement in your 2nd house of wealth indicates a special interest in this area.
I don't know if I'd say your chart is 'all fucked up'. There are positive things in it. It's just that the 2nd, 3rd and 9th houses have the strongest connections with Saturn, which is the most negative planet in your chart.

Thank you and yes, I'm the one.
What you write checks out in a way that I make money and my family spends it.
We run a "family business" which means I work and my partner "helps" and by "helps" I mean spends.
I'm growing tired of it and feel like I'm running out of steam.
Business is also not going great because of other reasons so I think I need to dramatically change everything (again).
Thank you for your responses. It helped to put things in perspective very much so.

Anon sorry. Can you answer one more question? If you say no I will understand.
And it's a funny question: do you think I should look for a new partner too?
Or just be alone?
Cause sometimes I feel that maybe I should. I've been married for nearly 20 years so it's hard but sometimes I feel like I would be better alone.

That can't be read off of your natal chart alone.
Perhaps you can see how you felt during the Jupiter in Gemini transit last year. It was your Jupiter return in the 7th house of romance. Jupiter returns can indicate windfalls or new opportunities - did you feel like romance seemed appealing then? Why, or why not?
Besides this, maybe you should try to get a tarot reading with a properly qualified reader.
I advise you to change your question to something more workable. For example, "would I be happier if I divorced my husband", rather than "should I divorce my husband". The specificity will help you make up your mind better, and with your own free agency.

Thank you.
Like I said. I'm completely unfamiliar with astrology.
Last year I wanted to completely disappear from the lives of my family. Tyrn off the phone and just go. And yes I wanted to find someone who will support me more.
Since then I realized that it's impossible or rather that looking for another partner for the sake of change alone is quite stupid and I kind of settled back into the routine and stopped dreaming, or rather, stopped feeling a strong impulse to leave it all behind and disappear. It happened about the time you outlined.
But these thoughts resurface from tome to time without the strong impulse.
I'm reminded of them tome and time again.
In my life though dreaming never really materialized and the world beat me down a bit every time, until I had nothing left to give at which point I wanted to kill myself. I dragged myself out of it and I try not to resent them for the lack of help then but it's hard.
Basically I'm trying to be a responsible, good person and understand everyone around me. But the thoughts linger.
I will try tarot with your suggestions and maybe this tome it will work. When I tried it before by myself or with others I always get some chaotic spread with very little sense.
Thank you and God bless you for all that you told me.

Imagine following tropical astrology which is literally just a calendar for seasons. It has zero connection to the actual stars. You are literally larping as a sign that moved 24 degrees away since the Greeks wrote it down. Meanwhile we in Bharat have been using Jyotish for 5000 years.

Our software is better. Our math is better.

>noooo im a scorpio
You are a Libra. You are a weak indecisive bugman. Check a real vedic chart instead of reading an old, outdated system. Your entire personality is based on a lie because your astrologers are too lazy to learn Jyotish system.

Vedic, 5000 years of astronomical data recorded by sages. Tropical is a larp based on the seasons of the stars. We use Whole Sign (bhava), one sign, one house.

>muh but my placidus chart is intercepted
Why would the stars get intercepted just because you were born in a trailer park in Canada? That's a low IQ take. Vedic is the only system used by people with working prefrontal cortexes. Anything else is just loose geometry for mutts who cant handle the truth of their own karma.

[25 / 5]The image is a digital artwork that combines elements of science fiction and surrealism. At the center, there is a cat with a glowing, fractal-like pattern that resembles a mathematical equation. The cat is inside a wooden box that is illuminated by a golden light, giving it a mystical appearance. The box is open, revealing the cat's inner workings.

The background is a cosmic scene with stars, planets, and a nebula, suggesting a vast, otherworldly space. The text on the image is in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-Latin script, with phrases such as "THE DIVINE CONSTANT," "THE UNIVERSE ARCHITECT," "REALITY'S TRUE FORM," and "SHRODDINGER'S CAT - THE UNIVERSE ARCHITECT - THE COSMIC ENGINE."

The overall style of the image is surreal and dreamlike, with a focus on the cat as the central figure amidst a cosmic backdrop. The use of the cat as a symbol for the universe and the text as a narrative element adds a layer of depth to the image.

The Agrarian Fascist Party is recruiting constituents and officers with which to discuss fascist political incorporation. The foundation of our philosophy is in the basis of liberal, physiocratic, agrarian, and industrialist principles. Our ultimate aim is the solution to all social and material problems whatsoever.

The party is to be organized as a religious military order in the same manner as the medieval chivalrous knightly orders of Europe and the rest of the medieval and ancient world. Despite the maintenance of materialist, objective, and empirical perspective, religious adherence is left open to the candidate and not required, rather the universally applicable system of yoga is used as a means of psychological and physiological regulation and as adjunct to typical martial discipline. At this length the trustworthiness, loyalty, and degree of will of the candidate is known and the discernment of their capacities made possible.

Material for additional religious study is recommended at the outset of probation of candidates, consisting of what is found in the Orders of the Golden Dawn, the Astrum Argentum, and the Ordo Templi Orientis, as well as the various other material suggested for study in those bodies of religious and mystical initiation, especially for their universal nature. Textbooks on law, political science, nutrition, botany, agriculture, and other adjacent subjects are likewise recommended for students starting in the fields of study of the party.

Background checking services and polygraph machine interviews are required for candidates of the militia, branches, and representatives of the party. Records are expected to be kept regular and reviewed during probations and further for subsequent security clearance.

Meditation and physical exercises, start, stop, and duration of time of exercises should be noted, likewise diet, drugs, sleep, study, labor, chores, illness, and injury, should all be noted. An hour of meditation in a single day, e.g., siddhāsana, prāṇāyāma, is reasonable, with approximately one hundred hours expected in the initial period of probation of one year. Physical fitness will be tested to a military standard, basic martial arts exercises should be practiced regularly, punching, blocking, kicking, and other calisthenics, and a rudrākṣa-mālā of both 108 and 1,008 bījāni and bokken should be obtained to be practiced wth them. Recorded experimentation with tea, coffee, cannabis, and liquor is mandatory wherever legal, both a teapot and Bialetti moka pot, six servings, are highly recommended.

[Edit.]

Memorize first through tenth amendments of the Bill of Rights.

Oath.

[Edit.]

The policy of the party will be determined by political research groups and committees consisting of elected officers from various respective branches of the party. Projects requiring financial contribution will be funded individually and on a contractural basis among the constituency and will be presented publicly by their respective research groups and committees.

There is a Discord server for the early phases of organization, those interested may join and introduce themselves.

About 15 years ago, my grandma lived in a building in our area. That building was old made with exposed bricks. It was around 4-5 story long. It had two flats in each floor and almost 8 families was there. So as It's long long ago story, people used to be more familiar with each other and reside like a community. They like to participate in each others problems too and solve together. So they were living a happy life. I don't know when it started but as of my grandma said, One stormy night, my grandma and grandpa heard so much noise from the rooftop. As they got the highest floor, they can clearly hear the sound. It's like someone running from one corner of the roof to another corner of the roof and the footsteps were too loud. My grandpa went to tge rooftop holding a torch light. He saw nothing was there. He stayed a little bit but got no source for the sound. He came back. After few days, at night again they heard the same running footsteps sound on the rooftop. My grandpa checked again and got nothing. Then one night the same thing happened again and this time my grandpa went to the down floor and gather some people and ask them if they here any sound like that? They confirmed that they heard the sound too but they thought it was maybe from my grandpas floor so they didn’t react. But my grandpa said it was from the rooftop. Then they all went to the rooftop together to check woth torch light. Again they saw nothing was there. From that day the sounds never appeared again but there are so many creepy incidents happened with that building next. Like one day my grandma went to the rooftop for a reason and what she saw like she described differently but what I figured out is, she saw a 3D shadow sitting at the corner of the rooftop. It was evening, sky was little dark and she clearly saw that shadow. She ran and came to the flat. She got scared that day and later they left the building. That building is maybe 100 meters away from my building and I want to visit.

The image is a close-up photograph of a person's hand feeding a fish in a pond. The hand is positioned over the fish's head, and the fingers are gently touching the fish's mouth, indicating the act of feeding. The fish is a large, colorful koi, with vibrant orange and white patterns on its body. The water in the pond is rippling, creating a sense of movement. The background is blurred, drawing focus to the interaction between the person and the fish. There are no visible texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the photograph is realistic, capturing a moment of interaction between a human and a fish in a natural setting.

The image is a portrait-style photograph featuring a man with a beard and short hair. He is wearing a patterned shirt with a peace symbol on it, and a necklace with various beads and pendants. The man is smiling and making a peace sign with his hands, which is a universal symbol of harmony and goodwill. He is also wearing sunglasses and has a bracelet on his left wrist. The background consists of green foliage, suggesting an outdoor setting. The lighting in the photo is natural, and the man appears to be outdoors, possibly in a garden or a park. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is casual and relaxed, with a focus on the man's expression and the peace symbol on his shirt.

The image is a collage of various cartoon-style images, each featuring a different character with a unique expression and attire. The characters are depicted in a stylized, cartoonish manner, with exaggerated features and exaggerated expressions.
At the top of the image, there is a large text that reads "Package A: $4,000/month Payable via ETH, BTC or your Token." Below this, there are three bullet points providing information about the package:
1. We create approximately 70 Pepe the Frog and Weebl meme with the logo of your project.
2. We create approximately 70 Pepe the Frog and Weebl meme with the logo of your project.
3. We create approximately 70 Pepe the Frog and Weebl meme with the logo of your project.
The text is in a bold, sans-serif font, which stands out against the colorful background of the images. The characters are arranged in a grid-like pattern, with each character occupying its own square. The background is a gradient of colors, transitioning from a darker shade at the top to a lighter shade at the bottom.
In the bottom right corner, there is a logo for "STARTER," which is a cryptocurrency. The logo is a stylized representation of a coin with a green background and a white outline.
The overall style of the image is playful and whimsical, with a focus on the characters and their expressions, which are central to the content of the text. The use of color and the stylized nature of the characters contribute to the visual appeal of the image.

This is a shared space. I don't want any of you, my time here is wasted by just about everything and anything that seeks to know, possess, or perceive anyone or anything, so why take it seriously? Pigs love rolling in shit, there's no point in explaining the virtues of not doing so, they don't care anyway, they actively choose filth. Basically everyone alive is a pig in shit, and there's no reason to walk around a marble dealing with them for the sake of any of this. Devoid of worthwhile connection and meaning to anything here, I simply refuse to condemn myself to hope in the world, or anything of it, because not only is it a let down, I intrinsically don't feel like existential joy is faithful or real within this paradigm. I don't trust any of you, really.
